DROPPED DEAD.

Another One of Boone's Good Citizens Passes to the Great Beyond.

Mr. Ephraim Aylor, of the Waterloo neighborhood, dropped dead on the streets of Bellevue, last Friday morning. He had gone to assist in hauling the iron work for the Middle creek bridge from the wharf, and just as the wagon on which he was riding got up in town from the river, the summons came. He left home that morning in his usual good health, and was heard to express himself as feeling unusually well.

Mr. Aylor was a son of the late William and Rhoda Aylor, and was born where Thomas B. Aylor, lives, near Limaburg, on the 15th day of Sept., 1831. There were ten sons, Absalom, Johnson, Jameson, Lystra, W. T., Ben, Ephriam, Henry, Thomas B., and Martin L., and two daughters, Mrs. Jonas Clore, of Bellevue, and Mrs. Henry Crigler, of the Hebron neighborhood.

The deceased was a modest, unassuming man, correct in all his transactions with his fellows—obliging at all times, never speaking unkindly of any person. It was these traits that endeared him to all, and as a consequence a very large circle of acquaintances mourn his death, and sympathize with the bereaved widow and daughter.

On the 6th day of April, 1854, he and Elizabeth Craven, daughter, of the late Benjamin Craven, of this county, were married. To them were born two children, a son and a daughter. The son died quite young. The daughter survives him and is the wife of J. S. Clore, of Waterloo.

Mr. Aylor was not a member of any church, but was a believer in the doctrine preached by the Old Baptists, and Elder E. Stepheus, of Erlanger, preached the funeral sermon at the Baptist Church in Bellevue, last Sunday at 12 a. m. An immense crowd assembled to pay their last respects to one honored in life. The remains were interred in the new cemetery at Bellevue.

A Wild Goose Chase.

Tuesday night Sheriff Beall received a description of a fugitive from justice who is wanted in Jessamine county for malicious cutting. The description tallied pretty well with that of the pretended honey buyer who was in Burlington on the Sunday before, and Wednesday morning the Sheriff and Jeff Eddings started in pursuit of the supposed fugitive, and the $25 reward offered for his capture. They soon heard of the fellow in the Union neighborhood, and visions of the reward grew brighter. They were fortunate in keeping the roads the man had traveled, and shortly afternoon they pulled up at the residence of John Cleek, in the Frogtown neighborhood, where the fellow had been given his dinner only a few hours before. They were told which road the fellow had taken after dinner, and on they pushed, expecting to overhaul the fugitive in a short time. This was the last information they could obtain. Reaching Florence Deputy Sheriff Allphin, who was at Walton that day, was telephoned a description of the man the Jessamine county authorities wanted, and told to keep a look out for him, and that they had been in hot pursuit of him all day. After Messrs. Beall and Eddins left Mr. Cleek's, one of his daughters went to the field and told him of the officers' visit and its object. Mr. Cleek from some cause, suspicioned that the man had stopped at the school house near his residence, and securing his pistol he went to the school house in which he found the stranger, alone and seemingly well contented. He marched him to Richwood just in time to meet Deputy Sheriff Allphin, who soon discovered that he was not the man wanted in Jessamine county, and he was released. The stranger protested that he was innocent of any offense, and claimed to be buying honey for a Louisville tobacco firm, but nobody from whom he had tried to buy honey has ever been heard of. The fellow acts very much like a crazy man.

The Ninety-Sixth Annual Session.

The North Bend Baptist Association held a very interesting two days' session with the Madison Avenue (Covington) Baptist Church, beginning last Wednesday. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. M. J. Hoover, from Mark 16:15—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The sermon was an able effort on the part of the minister, and was well received by the large audience. The officers of the Association were re-elected, viz: B. F. Swindler, Moderator; J. A. Kirtley, Assistant Moderator; D. E. Castleman, Clerk.

The members of the Covington Baptist Churches had made ample arrangements for the entertainment of the visiting brethren and sisters from a distance, and were untiring in their efforts to see that each and everyone was entertained, and those from the country returned home delighted with the reception they were given. The meeting was a success throughout.

Just before the Association adjourned Rev. Sam Adams addressed the meeting in regard to the excellent manner in which everything had been conducted, and said he believed every session of the Association hereafter ought to be held in Covington. The next meeting will be held with the Burlington church.

The following table shows the number of delegates to which each county in this Congressional District will be entitled, in convention, basing the representation on the number of votes cast at the last Presidential election:

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I wish you to grant me space in your valuable paper to answer a card of B. F. McGlasson's appearing in your issue of September 17th. B. F. McGlasson comes out in a card and wants to know how I got a free pass for my family to the Florence fair. Now, the first two days I passed through the gate kept by Stephens and John Berkshire. The first day there were four of us in the carriage. I paid cash for all four. The second day there were four of us in the carriage. I paid a cash fair for three, Mrs. W. M. Semple showing a free pass given W. M. Semple and lady, signed by B. F. McGlasson. The next day there were four of us in the carriage. W. M. Semple and wife and myself and wife. I paid a cash fair for myself and wife, W. M. Semple showing his pass admitting himself and wife. The fourth day there were four of us in the carriage. I paid a cash fair for three of us, Mrs. Semple showing her ticket admitting her free. I had a talk with both Mr. Rouse and Mr. Berkshire, and they each said they would be qualified before a court of justice that these statements are the facts in the case. Now, instead of B. F. McGlasson publishing a long card in the paper saying that if R. K. Dulaney and family came in on a free pass issued to them they either got it from the Secretary or one of the six cards filled out by Mr. Rucker, and if Dulaney's name was on the card, R. K. Dulaney or Mr. Rucker wrote it there, and if his family came in on a Kentucky Post pass, the gate keepers are responsible, for they know Dulaney is not a Post representative, and the tickets say they are not transferable. Now instead of B. F. McGlasson writing this card, composed principally of ifs, why didn't B. F. McGlasson call the gate keepers, who are men of unquestioned integrity, up before his board of directors and ask them how R. K. Dulaney came into the fair? They would have explained it all satisfactory to the board and stockholders. It seems some persons seek notoriety and take a fool way to do it.

I will say, in conclusion, excepting the pass given to Mr. and Mrs. Semple, no members of my family had a free pass signed by anyone, and no one offered to use the pass of Mr. and Mrs. Semple except themselves. The only pass we had was a cash pass, which I cheerfully paid at the gate as myself and family passed through.

R. K. DULANEY.

A Cutting Scrape.

Garfield Thomas and Jumb Webb, both colored boys, indulged in an ugly scrape, one morning last week. Garfield used the little blade of his Barlow knife in a lively manner on his adversary. Bystanders separated the scrappers, and Jumb had to go to a doctor's shop for repairs, having a stab in the left shoulder and a gash an inch or two in length in the left cheek just below the eye. They will appear before Judge Roberts to atone for the offense against the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth.

The were fined $2 50 each, yesterday.

POOR'S Manual of Railroads for 1898 shows the increase in railroad mileage in the United States for 1897 to have been 2,094, making the total miles in operation 184,603.

HON. CHARLES DENBY, former United States minister to China, who has just returned to this country, has the almost unprecedented record of having served continuously for 18 years as a minister.

COL. DU PATY DE CLAM'S rise in the nobility is traced by the Paris Siecle. His great grandfather was a judge in Bordeaux, named Mercier Dupaty; his grandfather bought Clam, a little vineyard, and called himself Dupaty da Clam. His father was a general and turned his name into Count Du Paty de Clam. The colonel himself uses the title of marquis.

WALTER WRENN, the distinguished India civil service "coach," who died a few days ago, had a rather remarkable history. He had not completed his education when, as a result of a kick he received at school, he was attacked by spinal disease, which compelled him to leave off reading for honors and to content himself with a pass degree, and for years made him a helpless cripple.

ERNESTINE CUROT, a young saleswoman in a Parisian dry goods shop, who is declared by many to be the most beautiful woman in the city, is at present the craze of the French capital. She personated the "Muse of Poetry" in crowning with laurel the bust of Michalet, and was discharged by her employers for her participation in that ceremony. A movement is on foot to furnish her with a shop of her own by popular subscription.

THE terrific speed at which a modern man can travel without the aid of any outside force is amazing. Last Monday two bicyclists, Michael and Linton, traveled in an hour respectively 33⅞ miles and 31 miles—an average of over one mile in two minutes—and continued for one hour. Linton covered two miles in three minute and twenty-two and two-fifth seconds, which was one and three-fifths seconds faster than the record of Champion Taylore.

CASES of smallpox are very rare in the German army. The excellent system of vaccination has resulted in making the enormous army almost immune. Not more than a half dozen cases of smallpox appear each year. The regulations demand at least ten punctures in each arm. Every recruit must undergo a revaccination. The one death caused by smallpox between 1874 and 1887 was probably due to the fact that the victim was twice unsuccessfully vaccinated when recruited.

ACCORDING to the calculation of the New York Commercial Bulletin, the fire loss in the United States and Canada for the past month of August amounted to $7,793,500. This loss was only larger than the March loss, which was $7,645,200. The greatest monthly loss, so far this year, was in February, when the fire loss aggregated $12,629,309. Up to August the loss for 1898 amounted to $74,960,350; for 1897 the first eight months' loss amounted to $71,021,700 and for 1896 it amounted to $81,880,050.

The golden stories of the rich strikes made in the Klondike told by some of the returning Argonauts are not sustained by the records. The Engineering and Mining Journal keeps an account of the gold brought from the Alaskan fields and finds that the result of last winter's work was not more than $9,000,000. Most of the gold was mined in Canadian territory and the Canadian authorities have collected royalties on $4,000,000 and estimate that there has been mined, $3,000,000 upon which royalties are yet to be paid.

ANDREW CARNEGIE has notified the Pittsburgh Carnegie library commission that he will personally assume responsibility for the safety of the pictures sent to the annual art exhibition, and recommends that the money heretofore devoted to insuring the safety of such pictures be used in the formation of a sinking fund, to be expended in the purchase of pictures, as well as continuing the insurance after the fund reaches the proper size. The annual cost of insuring pictures in the art department of the library is now estimated at $3,500.

THE United States department of agriculture has received through the department of state a communication from Count Cassini, Russian ambassador, stating that the Imperial Russian Horticultural society will hold an international horticultural exposition at St. Petersburg in May, 1899. The United States is invited to take part in the exposition by sending exhibits and special commissioners to prepare the American section. Exhibits of foreign exhibitors duly accredited will not be subject to customs' inspection at the Russian frontier.

THE American Indies Co., recently incorporated with a capital of $18,000,000, has already secured some of the most valuable properties in both Cuba and Porto Rico. Offices are to be secured soon in New York. The work of securing the properties which the company obtained before its incorporation has been in progress for seven months. During that time the most desirable landed estates, electric lighting, water power, water and steam railway concessions were secured in the best locations in those two islands, which will now be under the dominion of Americans.

GEN. HASKELL DROPS DEAD.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 17.—Brig. Gen. Joseph T. Haskell died suddenly at his home at the Columbus post about 4:30 Friday afternoon. He was stricken with apoplexy, the excitement through which he had passed during the day being the immediate cause of the attack.

Gen. Haskell commanded the 17th infantry at the battle of El Caney and was twice wounded in the left shoulder and knee. He came home about a month ago and was rapidly recovering, the wound in his shoulder, however, had paralyzed his left arm, which he carried in a sling. Friday morning the 17th regiment returned home and Gen. Haskell went to the depot in a carriage to welcome his gallant men. He rode at the head of the regiment through the city to the post and the cheers of the immense crowds of people that lined the streets were directed almost as much to him individually as to the regiment. At the reviewing stand the crowd surrounded the carriage and flowers were fairly showered into the vehicle from every side. Although not as strong as formerly, Gen. Haskell appeared rugged and his sudden death was a terrible shock to his family and friends. At 4:30 Friday afternoon Capt. Clay called at Gen. Haskell's residence to pay his respects. The general was resting at the time, but came down stairs. They had been engaged in conversation about five minutes when Gen. Haskell suddenly started to his feet, clasping his hands to his head, then fell to the floor. The only exclamation he made was "Oh, oh!" Capt. Clay sprang to his assistance and was surprised to find that his pulse had ceased to beat. Post Surgeon Pilcher was summoned and stated that death was caused by apoplexy. Mrs. Haskell was prostrated by her husband's death. Besides the widow two sons survive.

Gen. Haskell was born at Cincinnati, O., November 19, 1838. He was appointed a captain of commissary subsistence in 1862 and served throughout the war. For gallantry he was brevetted major, lieutenant colonel and colonel. He became captain in the 33d infantry July 28, 1866, and was promoted to major of the 24th on June 23, 1872. He became lieutenant colonel of the 17th United States infantry on August 27, 1896.

From January, 1869, until January, 1872, he was in command of the San Juan islands, which at that time were a bone of contention between the United States and Great Britain. This matter was settled by arbitration, Emperor William, of Germany, deciding in favor of the United States.

In 1888 he was appointed a member of the tactics board and helped compile the military tactics which are now used by the army. From 1891 to 1896 he was a member and president of the board of examiners for officers for promotion and was president of the board that examined non-commissioned officers seeking commissions.

When Col. Poland was appointed brigadier general at the outbreak of the war Gen. Haskell as lieutenant colonel assumed command of the 17th United States infantry and led that regiment in the battle of El Caney, in which he distinguished himself by his bravery. He led the regiment through the succession of barbed wire fences that surrounded the block houses at El Caney until he was shot. First a bullet struck his right shoe, bruising his heel. He laughingly remarked to a lieutenant that he had been shot in the heel. The remark was no sooner uttered than he was shot in the left shoulder. In another instant he received a bullet in his knee. Gen. Haskell lay the remainder of the day on the firing line, such situation having been given to his wounds as the improvised hospital service provided. The survivors of the 17th praised the bravery of their commander in the highest terms. More than one declared that if he had not been wounded the regiment would have followed him to the last man. He kept ahead of the regiment and maintained his self possession under a withering fire. The Spaniards had the range perfectly in each line of barbed wire fence and the lines of the regiment were thinned at each obstruction. It was not until Gen. Haskell fell wounded, that their advance was temporally checked. For his bravery at El Caney Col. Haskell was recently promoted to brigadier general.

The fleet as reorganized will consist of the Indiana, Massachusetts, Texas, New York, Brooklyn, Amphitrite, Puritan, Miantonomoh, Terror, Cincinnati, Montgomery, Newark, San Francisco, Detroit, Marblehead, Mayflower, New Orleans, Bancroft, Marietta, Topeka, Castine, Nashville, Wilmington, Machias, Princeton, Fern, Wasp, Hist, Resolute, Potomac, Scorpion and Alvaredo.

FUNERAL MASS.

Imposing Ceremonies Commemorative of the Murdered Empress.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—An imposing funeral mass commemorative of the murdered Empress Elizabeth of Austria, was celebrated at St. Matthews Catholic church Saturday, Cardinal Gibbons being the celebrant. The ceremony was official in character, under the auspices of the Austrian minister and among those in attendance were President McKinley and the members of his cabinet, the ambassadors and ministers of foreign governments in their brilliant diplomatic uniforms, representatives of the United States army, navy and supreme court, and a large gathering from private life. The Austrian minister, Mr. Von Hengelmuller, was attended by all the members of his staff, the military attache, Baron Riedl, in the uniform of the Austrian imperial guard, and Capt. Rodler, naval attache, in the uniform of the Austrian navy, acting as ushers. Minister Von Hengelmuller wore the striking costume of the Hungarian "Magnat," denoting high diplomatic rank. It was of sombre black, satin coat, knee breeches and high boots and a heavy black velvet coat hung from the left shoulder. His sword, scabbard and hilt was hid with windings of crape. As the carriages of the president and cabinet reached the church, Mr. Von Hengelmuller left his pew and met the president at the church door, escorting him to a pew at the front at the right of the chancel. With the president were Secretaries Gage and Wilson, Postmaster General Emory Smith and Acting Secretary Adee. Back of them, as representatives of the army, sat two of the officers of Gen. Miles' staff, Col. Maus and Lieut. Col. Michler, in fatigue uniform, while the judiciary was represented by Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court. Many other officers of the state, war and navy departments, also were present. The diplomatic corps occupied pews opposite those of the United States government officials. With the Austrian minister sat Ambassador Cambon, wearing the heavily gold-embroidered uniform of an officer of highest diplomatic rank, with a wide silk sash from shoulder to hip. He left his pew after the president and cabinet were seated, and crossing the aisle paid his respects to the president and cabinet officers. The German charge d'affairs, Baron Speck Von Sternberg, with the German military, naval and civil attaches, in full uniform, the minister of Switzerland, where the assassination of the empress occurred, and the representatives of Russia, Norway and Sweden, Belgium, Denmark, Portugal, China, Japan, Turkey, Colombia, Venezuela, Costa Rica, Brazil, Peru, Chili, most of them in court and diplomatic attire, were present. In the absence of the British ambassador, Sir Julian Pauncefote sent a large floral cross of white roses and carnations, which was in the middle of the chancel facing the congregation. The embassy was represented by Capt. Paget and Mr. Young.

The church interior was simply arranged for the occasion. Back of the chancel hung long crape draperies, covering the windows and darkening the altar. The pulpit was draped with heavy bands of crape. Cardinal Gibbons was assisted in the mass by a large number of priests and acolytes, the usual rich vestments being put aside for those of black and white.

Want to Retain the Philippines.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Daily Mail's Madrid correspondent says a long conference was held between Senor Sagasta, the premier, and Senor Montero Rios, the president of the Spanish peace commission Sunday, which resulted in the decision that the peace commission shall strenuously defend the retention of the Philippine islands by Spain.

The dedication of the church will be followed by the pontificial high mass, at which Monsignor Martinelli will be celebrant.

PLANS GREATLY CHANGED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The following dispatches were received Friday from Gen. Otis:

MANILA, Sept. 16.

Adjutant General Army, Washington:

In my opinion, based upon present indications, no further force required. Insurgent leaders in politics and army in excitable frame of mind, but better portion amenable to reason and desire to make approved reputation before civilized word.

OTIS, Commanding.

MANILA, Sept. 16.—Adjutant General, Washington, D. C.:—Telegraphed situated briefly yesterday. Insurgents have acceded demand and evacuated entire city of Manila, except small force in one outlying district. No difficulty anticipated and no concessions made to them. They express strong desire to maintain friendly intercourse with United States government in all particulars. They organized congress Thursday at Malolos, about twenty miles north of city, to frame plan of government. Manila very quiet. Military government being perfected gradually and large force policing and cleansing city. Health of command satisfactory. Trade and commerce active. Treasury receipts since August 14, $340,000 Mexican current money. Philippines' monthly expenses will aggregate at least $350,000; nearly one-half required to subsist 13,000 Spanish prisoners. Believe that receipts will largely exceed expenditures. Tariffs and duties imposed, as directed by president on July 12, but received as currency of country as on gold basis would almost double former Spanish duties. United States laws applied for admission of Chinese and opium; sales of licenses for lotteries and other pastimes, opposed by public morals, discontinued.

OTIS, Commanding.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—A dispatch to the Herald from Manila says: The insurgents changed their plans Thursday night, and instead of evacuating all the suburbs of the city, as Gen Otis ordered, they moved from Ermita and Malate to Santana, where they appear to be concentrating in strong force.

It is reported, although it has not been confirmed, that Aguinaldo has ordered that this place be held at any cost. It is more likely a move on the part of Pio Pilar to embarrass the dictator. The former rebel chief, Isabello Artacho, who was condemned to death by Aguinaldo for treachery in May and reprieved and escaped, is leading 15,000 men against Aguinaldo. Artacho is backed by priests.

A Jesuit priest was shot for persuading rebels to desert Aguinaldo's cause.

At the meeting of rebel leaders in Malolos the majority will vote for autonomy under American protection.

Coasting steamers are trading with the provinces under Spanish rule. Aguinaldo demands 50 per cent of freight receipts of steamers trading with the rebel provinces.

All Spaniards in the northern provinces are now prisoners. The rebels seized stocks and cash of the tobacco estates belonging to the Campania Tabacelera, in Cagayan province, and also those of Coprax in Gamarines province. The losses are enormous.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The Manila dispatches stating that Aguinaldo has assembled all of the Filipinos at Malolos gives no apprehension to war department officials, as they feel satisfied that the opportunity for a real crisis was passed when Aguinaldo removed his forces from the suburbs of Manila. So long as the American forces in and about Manila are left untrameled there is no disposition to restrict Aguinaldo in holding meetings of his followers outside of the immediate field of American operations.

Nine Were Drowned.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—The steamship Gloucester, of the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation Co., which arrived here Friday forenoon from Baltimore, reports that at 1:30 o'clock Friday morning she collided with the Gloucester schooner Alice Jordan off Martha's Vineyard, and that nine of the Jordan's crew were drowned. Seven of the crew were saved and brought here on the Gloucester.

Established a New Record.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 17.—A special train of an engine and four cars on the Chicago & Northwestern railway established a new record between Chicago and Omaha Friday, making the run of 493 miles in 8 hours and 29 minutes. It left Chicago at 9 o'clock Friday morning and pulled into the Omaha Union depot at 5:29 p. m.

Southern Road Branching Out.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 17.—It is rumored that the Southern railroad has about consummated plans to secure the Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis railroad and the Kentucky and Indiana bridge in this city. The Southern will thus secure entrance to Evansville and St. Louis.

The Cunard line steamer Aurania, from New York on September 6 for Liverpool, has been reported off the south coast of Ireland, disabled and in tow.

ROOSTER SOLD AT $1,000.

A Texas Bird That Was Winner of Over $5,000 and Champion in Twenty-Seven Battles.

The celebrated gamecock, Commodore Wainwright, after his great victories at Holletsville, Laredo, San Antonio and Caldwell, was sold in the cock pit on Gen. Perdeu's ranch in Burleson county, Tex., for $1,000. Don Diego Montemayo, a sportsman and chicken fancier of Monterey, Mexico, became the purchaser. The money was paid in gold, and while it was being counted out the victorious young rooster crowed lustily. His spurs were bloody from his recent victory and his feathers a little ruffled, but otherwise he looked as fresh as the proverbial spring chicken.

During the successful campaign which the game young Commodore has just completed he was entered in 27 mains and was the victor in every one. It is said that this bird has won more than $5,000 for his owner during his short career. He has fought his last battle, for, according to the terms of the bill of sale which the vendor gave to Senor Montemayo, the great bird is to be used as a breeder, the purchaser obligating himself never to fight the celebrated gamecock again.

This is believed to be the highest price ever paid for a rooster in Texas, but the price would not be regarded as startling in old Mexico, where victorious roosters have often been exchanged for herds of cattle, ranches and silver mines.

Atahualpa was the original pet name of this wonderful bird, and when he crowed he seemed to say it as plainly as ever a feathered youngster pronounced his own name. His trainer made him stand still in a gladiator attitude while the camera was turned on him, and when the snap shot was finished he seemed to understand that he was expected to crow, and then his admirers, all of whom were jingling Wainwright gold in their pockets, gave him a rousing farewell cheer.

Queer Streets of Manila.

The streets of Manila are so modern as to be quite out of keeping with the general appearance of the town. They are perfectly straight, macadamized, and provided with ample granite walks. Of these the Esconta and the Rosario are the best. In both these are excellent shops, kept principally by Chinese merchants, most of whom come from Amoy. Tin-roofed houses line each side of both thoroughfares.

Fires in London.

Of the 3,500 fires to which the London fire brigade was called last year, no fewer than 335 were caused by petroleum lamps.

YELLOW FEVER.

Two Cases Are Reported at Oxford, Miss., by Dr. Gant.

Each Northbound Train From Jackson, Miss., Carries a Load of Refugees—The Infection in Lafayette County, Miss., About Run Its Course.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 19.—Advices from the south Sunday night indicated no material change in the yellow fever situation since Saturday night's report. Following is a resume of the reports received: Dr. Gant arrived at Oxford, Miss., Sunday, and after looking into the two cases of fever in the Jumper family said they were undoubtedly yellow fever. He also located several suspicious cases in the family of Mr. Wood. Oxford physicians do not distrith the board of health expert the dark ming that the cases are a mal type of malarial fever. Dr. Dr. ie at Raymond, Miss., reports that no progressatient who is suspiciously ill be for expert will be sent there Saturday to diagnose the case. The investigation of the suspicious cases in Jackson continues and all suspects so far have been discharged. The patient, Manley, was resting easily Sunday night, but shows symptoms of black vomit. Each northbound train from the city carries a coach load of refugees. Dr. Murray declares that there is no fever at Pontotoc. Inspector Gant has investigated Water Valley and wires that there is no fever in the place. The infection in Lafayette county has about run its course and most of the patients are convalescent. One new case is reported from Taylors and three from Orwood Sunday. The general situation throughout Mississippi seems reassuring.

The situation at New Orleans is unchanged.

REV. DR. JOHN HALL DEAD.

BELFAST, Ireland, Sept. 19.—Rev. Dr John Hall, of New York, died Saturday morning at Bangor, County Down, Ireland. Dr. Hall was on his annual visit to Europe. He died at his sister's residence. His health has been broken down for more than a year. He had hoped to return to New York shortly, and had already engaged passage on a steamer for himself and his wife.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Dr. John Hall, who died Saturday in Ireland, was born in County Armagh, Ireland, on July 31, 1829. He was of Scotch descent. When 13 years of age he entered Belfast college, and was repeatedly Hebrew prize man. In 1849 he was licensed to preach and at once engaged in labor as a missionary in the west of Ireland. He was installed pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Armagh in 1852 and in 1858 was called to the Church of Mary's abbey (now Rutland square) in Dublin. He received from Queen Victoria the honorary appointment of commissioner of education for Ireland. In 1867 Dr. Hall was a delegate from the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in Ireland to the Presbyterian church in the United States, and after his return to Ireland he received a call to the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church in New York. He accepted it and entered upon his labors in November, 1867.

A new church edifice was erected for Dr. Hall in 1875 at a cost of about $1,000,000, on the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-fifth street. He was selected chancellor of the University of the City of New York in 1882.

His salary was understood to be $20,000. In personal appearance Dr. Hall was a remarkable man. He was a man of commanding figure, with massive head, strong face, florid complexion and rather stern expression, clean shaven and with the slight stoop of a student.

Embarkation of Spanish Troops.

Gen. Schofield Will Not Serve.

VICE ADMIRAL FOR DEWEY.

Secretary of the Navy Long Expected to Recommend the Creation of That Grade for the Manila Hero.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A dispatch to the Herald from Washington says: Secretary Long is expected to make special reference in his annual report to the operations of the Asiatic squadron and particularly to the conduct of Rr. Adm. Dewey. Department officials generally believe the best is none too good for that officer, and no surprise would be expressed if the secretary were to recommend that the grade of vice admiral be created in order that it might be filled by the appointment of Rr. Adm. Dewey. As showing the faith put in Rr. Adm. Dewey, the department does not exact from him a statement concerning his doings, but is satisfied to let him have a free hand and take such necessary action as he may deem proper. He is kept well advised of the international situation, particularly with reference to the Pacific, but the department has every confidence in his good judgment.

DEMANDS COMPLIED WITH.

Gen. Otis Informs the War Department That the Insurgents Are Withdrawing From the Suburbs of Manila.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Gen. Otis Thursday cabled the war department as follows:

"MANILA, Sept. 15, 1898.—Adjutant General, Washington, D. C.: Affairs much more satisfactory. Demands for withdrawal of insurgent forces complied with, and all withdrawn or withdrawing Thursday, except small forces in outlying districts, which are not obeying insurgent leader. Aguinaldo requests a few days in which to withdraw them by detachments and punish their commanding officers. Over two thousand already withdrawn. No concessions granted insurgents, but strict compliance with demands of 8th inst. required. General good feeling prevailing. Manila quiet and business progressing favorably. No difficulty anticipated. Have been compelled to confine Spanish prisoners temporarily within limits of walled city.

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE.

The President Has Secured Six Men to Investigate the War Department's Management of the War.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Six commissioners have been secured by the president to investigate the war department's management of the war. They are: Gen. John M. Schofield, Prof. D. C. Gilman, Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, Col. James A. Sexton, Charles W. Denby and Evan P. Howell.

The president concluded to exercise his prerogative in the case of Gen. Schofield, and despite that officers request that he be excused, has ordered him to serve as chairman of the commission.

The president is determined that the investigation shall be made.

PUT UP AT PUBLIC AUCTION.

All the Horses That Belonged to Roosevelt's Rough Riders to Be Sold in New York Next Monday.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—New Yorkers who wish to obtain a souvenir of the famous rough riders will have an opportunity to do so. The war department Thursday ordered that all the horses which had been at Montauk, about a thousand in number, belonging to the 1st regiment of United States volunteer cavalry, by which is meant Col. Roosevelt's rough riders, be sold at public auction. The horses are already on the way to New York by water, and the auction will take place in that city at the earliest possible moment. Many of the animals are highly trained in the style peculiar to the western cow puncher, and it is likely that some of them will be bid in by their former riders.

Officers Elected.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Sept. 16.—The Union Veteran league Thursday elected the following officers: National commander, W. S. Norcross, Lewiston, Me.; senior vice national commander, W. W. Brown, Washington; junior vice national commander, J. Ben Renner, Cincinnati; quartermaster general, Thomas J. Hubbard, Baltimore; chaplain-in-chief, Henry N. Coudon, Washington; surgeon general, John T. Booth, Washington.

Winnie Davis Much Better.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Sept. 16.—Miss Winnie Davis was much improved Thursday and the prospects are good for her rapid recovery to health. The hotel in which she is a guest closed for the season Thursday, but Miss Davis and her mother and the attendants will remain until it is safe to remove the patient.

London.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Next to the highest balloon ascension on record was made here Thursday afternoon from the Crystal palace, Sydenham, by Stanley Spencer, the well known aeronaut, and Dr. Berson. The balloon, which was inflated with pure hydrogen and has a capacity of 56,500 cubic feet, attained an altitude of 27,500.

At a height of 25,000 feet the air was so rarified that the occupants of the car were compelled to breathe compressed oxygen by tubes. The temperature was 61 degrees below freezing point. The atmosphere was clear and the coast distinctly visible.

AT HIS REQUEST.

Capt. Robley D. Evans Relieved of the Command of the Battle Ship Iowa.

The Next Commander of the Iowa Will Be Capt. Silas Terry—The Iowa Will Accompany the Oregon and Other Vessels to Honolulu.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Capt. Robley D. Evans called at the navy department Thursday and had a long talk with Secretary Long, the immediate result of which was the issue of an order relieving him of the command of the battle ship Iowa, which is now being repaired at the New York navy yard. This was done at Capt. Evans' personal request. He has served more than the period of time required by regulations and practice for a captain to command, and his next sea service may be in flag rank. He has been granted a leave of absence, and in the meantime the nature of his next duty will be determined. It will certainly be ashore, and he may be assigned to membership on one of the naval boards.

The next commander of the Iowa will be Capt. Silas Terry, now in command of the receiving ship Franklin at the Norfolk navy yard. He will take the ship around South America and over to Honolulu in company of the Oregon and some colliers. It is said at the navy department Thursday that the sailing orders to the battle ships have not yet been issued, and when they are, they will take the ships only as far as Honolulu. It is not denied that they will ultimately proceed to join Dewey's fleet at Manila if it should be deemed expedient to reinforce him. But as the trip around South America will occupy nearly four months, and many changes in the situation as to the Philippines may be expected to occur before the expiration of that period of time, it can not be certainly foretold whether or not the Oregon and Iowa will ever reach Manila.

The sending of reinforcements to Dewey being regarded as at least a technical violation of the existing truce.

Secretary Long Thursday afternoon decided to assign Capt. Evans to duty as a member of the naval inspection board and he will assume his new duties after a brief vacation.

OVERWORK AND EXPOSURE.

Maj. Gen. Miles Has Malaria, and is Confined to His Bed, But His Friends Are Not Alarmed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Gen. Miles is confined to his bed with a touch of fever resulting in part from the work and exposure of his recent campaigns. The general has been ailing for some days, and, although he came to army headquarters for two hours Wednesday, there was already some evidence of fever. Thursday the fever symptoms were rather more marked and the physician who was called insisted upon the general's remaining in bed. The attack causes no apprehension to the general or his friends.

May Prove a Double Murder.

Fatal Toothpulling.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Jacob Miller, aged 53, died Thursday of paralysis. She had had a tooth extracted, and, while laboring under excitement, sustained a paralytic stroke.

THE FIRST OHIO AT HOME.

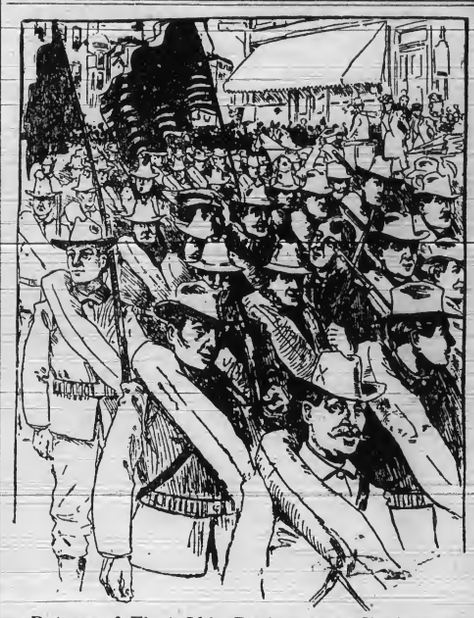
CINCINNATI, Sept. 16.—The 1st Ohio regiment arrived in five trains at the Pennsylvania depot Thursday afternoon and evening.



As each section arrived the people up town, who heard the signal bells and whistles, rushed down and joined the throngs about the cars. Then there were more greetings and tugging at extended hands.

When the last section arrived the troops were permitted to leave the cars and form in line. Then the march to the armory through the principal streets commenced. The boys received hearty cheers along the line of march to the armory, where a substantial luncheon was given the soldiers.

Lieut. Lee, the acting quartermaster at Ft. Thomas, has been designated by the war department as the officer to muster out the 1st regiment, and was at the armory Thursday night to meet the officers and discuss the matter with them.

The mustering out of a regiment is no small task, and it will require weeks of work on the part of the officers to get accounts in shape for the mustering out officer.

The regiment will be assembled at the armory October 15 and formally mustered out.

Return of First Ohio Regiment to Cincinnati.

DEAD EMPRESS IN VIENNA.

The Body of Empress Elizabeth Blessed—A Wreath From the President of the United States.

VIENNA, Sept. 16.—The funeral train arrived at 10 o'clock Thursday evening. Prince Von Liechtenstein, the chief court marshal, the officers of the general staff and a military guard of honor, were waiting at the railway station, which was heavily draped with crape.

The clergy having blessed the remains the procession started for the Hofburg. The whole route was lined with troops and immense crowds, bareheaded, stood silently watching. The soldiers presented arms as the procession passed.

On reaching the Hofburg the remains were transferred to the chapel. Emperor Frances Joseph, with the principal mourners, had driven from Schonbrunn to the chapel to attend the ceremony of blessing the body.

The emperor's coming had been kept a secret from the public. He was accompanied by his daughters and his sons-in-law. After the benediction all departed except the emperor and the relatives who remained alone with the beloved dead until shortly before midnight, when they returned to Schonbrunn.

Among the wreaths the one from President McKinley attracts much attention. It has the Stars and Stripes entwined and bears the inscription:

"FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

Insurgent Vessel Sunk.

MADRID, Sept. 16.—A telegram received by the government from the Viscaya islands, says that the Spanish gunboat squadron has sunk an insurgent steamer off Bulacan, and that many of her crew were drowned.

Costly Blaze in Wheeling, W. Va.

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 16.—Fire Thursday morning destroyed the large factory building of John Arbenz, occupied by the Acme Box company and the Tomato Catsup works of Exley, Watkins & Co. Loss, $50,000.

THOSE ISLANDS.

Archbishop Dozal Hopes the Philippines Will Not Be Returned to Spain.

Incessant Strife and a Lapse Into Barbarism and Natural Indolence of Tropical Races Would Take Place—Prefer to Be American Subjects.

MANILA, Sept. 19.—In an interview here with Archbishop Dozal of the Philippine islands, said: "I earnestly hope the islands will not remain Spanish, because the rebels are now so strong that such a course would inevitably cause appalling bloodshed. The re-conquest of the natives is impossible until after years of the most cruel warfare."

He also expressed the hope that the islands would not become absolutely independent, because it was certain that dissensions would occur which would result in incessant strife and a lapse into barbarism and the natural indolence of the tropical race. The only hope, the archbishop declared, was that a strong western power would intervene now. Delay was dangerous, because the people are intoxicated, vainglorious and restless.

He said it was undeniable that the religious orders must go, because the whole people had determined to abolish them, now that they were able to render their retention impossible. He lay the chief blame upon the Dominicans, Augustins and Franciscan receletans, the richest orders, and next upon the Benedictines and Capuchians, which are of less importance. The Jesuits, Archbishop Dozal says, are comparatively blameless. He added that the rival orders quarrel among themselves, intrigue, act unworthily and slander their opponents, thus increasing their general disfavor.

The provincials, who are approximately equivalent to archdeacons, are mainly responsible. They are utterly beyond the control of the archbishop, who denies possessing much power.

The total number of Spanish priests in the Philippines before the war was about one thousand, but lately every departing steamer has taken fifty or a hundred of them away, now barely 500 remain. A native priest privately stated to the correspondent that the reason the archbishop hopes for the expulsion of the friarly orders is that they have grown too powerful for him and that he wishes to strengthen himself. Several responsible Spaniards assured the correspondent that they would refuse to remain here if Spain was reinstated in the control of the islands. Many of the Spanish soldiers refuse to serve again and Spanish officers are utterly disgusted with the rottenness of Spain's government and prefer to become American subjects.

The annexationists have a majority of 71 in the national assembly but the discussion of the subject has not been finished.

MISS WINNIE DAVIS DEAD.

The Daughter of the Confederacy Succumbs to Malarial Troubles—Sick for Several Weeks.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Sept. 19.—Miss Winnie Davis, daughter of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, died at noon Sunday at the Rockingham hotel, to which place she came as a guest in the early part of the Pier's social season. She had been ill for several weeks, and a fortnight ago her condition became very serious so that consultations of physicians were deemed necessary, but frequent rallies gave renewed hope that she would ultimately recover.

Miss Winnie Davis, the "Daughter of the Confederacy," was born in the confederate executive mansion, at Richmond, Va., in 1863. She was educated principally at home, owing to the trouble surrounding her father and the publicity which attended all movements of the Davis family.

VESUVIUS IS IN ERUPTION.

Great Streams of Lava Are Spreading in Every Direction in a Most Threatening Manner.

NAPLES, Sept. 19.—A state of gloomy apprehension prevails among the population regarding the eruption of Vesuvius, which is hourly becoming more active and menacing. Streams of lava are spreading in every direction. The most threatening one flows through the Vedrino valley, which is almost filled. The observatory, which originally stood at a height of 610 meters, is now only 27 meters above the sea level, owing to the sinking of the ground. Seven new craters have formed around the central one and this has not tended to diminish the fears formerly felt, which were based upon the eruption of stones and scoriæ, similar to that which occurred in 1872.

Why He Was Arrested.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19.—J. W. Crossley, a soldier of the 17th regiment, was arrested for safe-keeping. Crossley fell into the hands of a number of women, who wanted the buttons off his blouse as souvenirs of the Santiago fight. He gave them freely, and the women tore off pieces of his blouse. The lieutenant of his company, perceiving the predicament he was in, directed a police officer to take him in and relieve him from the attack to which he was subjected. Later he was released.

MORE TROUBLE IN FORMOSA.

Another Formidable Rebellion Against Japanese Rulers Breaks Out—Many Killed and Wounded.

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 19.—Mail advices from Japan state that another formidable rebellion against Japanese rulers has broken out in Formosa, this time in the southern part of the island. Two battles have been fought, one near Taichu, the other near Taihoku. The tribes were defeated by the Japanese troops and the police.

Many were killed and wounded on each side, but details are not obtainable. The rebellion is the outcome of an attempt by the Japanese administration to extend its jurisdiction over the semi-savage tribes living in the interior.

According to official reports a summary of rebellious outbreaks in Formosa during the last year shows that 42,000 persons were concerned in 1,700 attacks in different parts of the island. Five hundred persons were killed and wounded by these semi-savages, 1,500 captured and over 300 houses burned. Their booty was valued at 257,000 yen. On the other hand, 946 robbers were killed and 1,450 taken prisoners.

OFF ON AN INSPECTION TRIP.

Secretary of War Alger Leaves Detroit for the Southern Camps—Col. Gardner Will Join Him at Lexington.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 19.—After a week's vacation at his home, Secretary Alger left Sunday night on his tour of inspection of the southern camps and hospitals. Gen. Alger, accompanied by his aide, Maj. Hopkins, started for Cincinnati on the 10 p. m. train via the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad. Gov. Pingree, Brig. Gen. Duffield and Col. Gardner, of the 31st Michigan, saw the secretary aboard his car. Col. Gardner will join the general on Wednesday at Lexington, and will go with him to inspect the colonel's regiment at Knoxville. The camps to be inspected are at Fort Thomas, Lexington, Knoxville, Chickamauga, Anniston, Ala., probably Huntsville, and Jacksonville and Charleston. Secretary Alger expects to reach Washington a week from next Wednesday.

THE TWO EMPERORS KISS.

William, of Germany, and Francis Joseph, of Austria, Meet—The Former Deposits a Wreath on the Coffin.

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—Emperor Francis Joseph, Prince Hohenlohe, the German imperial chancellor, and Baron Von Buelow, the German minister for foreign affairs, received Emperor William at the railroad station. The emperors shook hands and kissed each others' cheeks three times. They then proceeded to the church, where Emperor William, in behalf of himself and the empress of Germany, deposited on the casket containing the remains of the late empress of Austria a floral wreath which his majesty had brought from Germany. The emperor dined at the German embassy after the funeral and started for Berlin Saturday evening.

Two Prisoners Burned to Death.

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Ct., Sept. 19.—Two prisoners confined for the night in the town lockup, Ernst Branford, aged 27 years, and John Marsh, aged 40 years, met their death Saturday in a fire which originated in the cell occupied by Marsh. Branford evidently died from suffocation, probably while asleep. Marsh's body was literally baked. They had been arrested for drunkenness.

Senor Silvela's Call.

MADRID, Sept. 19.—Senor Silvela, the leader of the conservatives, has issued a manifesto calling upon his adherents to use their efforts when peace shall have been concluded to place his party in power. Sagasta and his government, Silvela declares, are entirely responsible for the awful loss of Spanish lives, the destruction of the Spanish navy and the surrender of Spanish territory.

Three Drowned in the Connecticut River.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., Sept. 19.—Three persons were drowned in the Connecticut river off Moramus, in a sudden squall, the victims being Patrick Kelley, aged 26, William Kelly, 24, and William Corman, 18. These young men, with John Hines, rowed up from Moramus Sunday morning to attend services at St. John's church in this city.

Demand That Mussulmans Be Disarmed.

CANDIA, Island of Crete, Sept. 19.—Adm. Noel, the British naval commander here, Friday evening handed Edhem Pasha, the Turkish governor, a demand for the disarmament of the Mussulman population. The pasha is awaiting the instructions of the Turkish government on the subject.

Charged With Forgery.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—A. F. B. Crofton returned from the Klondike rich, met his wife and baby at the Great Northern hotel, and one hour later was arrested by city detectives on the charge of forging a draft on the First national bank for $1,250 three years ago. Shortly after the alleged forgery Crofton went to Alaska and struck it rich. He is now worth many times over the amount involved.

Failures for the week in the United States were 174 against 204 last year, and 23 in Canada against 40 last year.

While farmers with large areas sometimes claim that "farming don't pay," other farmers manage to live and save something on ten acres. One of the successful farmers on a small farm made it a rule when he went to market to bring home more money than he carried. His rule was to endeavor to sell, in value, more than he purchased, and to grow everything on the farm for his own use that the land would produce.

FROM OwEN COUNTY.

[News]

The grocery business in Owenton is getting a hustle on its self.

The Owenton Gun club went to Sanders Saturday and had a fine shooting contest and lots of barbecued mutton. Ollie Garnett who was manipulating the traps met with quite a painful accident. In setting one of the traps the lever slipped from its socket, striking Garnett on the nose and cutting a severe gash. He was knocked down by the blow.

The first instance of a jury strike occurred Monday at this place before Squire Walker. In a suit between a thresher machine company vs Slaughter and others, a jury was summoned consisting mostly of tobacco growers. When they came before the court they protested, as tobacco cutting season was now on and they were compelled to be in the patch. The court assured them that it would take only a few moments. The witnesses were called and the trial of the case begun. At 6 o'clock p. m. the examination of witnesses was still on with a number of witnesses still to be called. The Squire adjourned court to meet Tuesday at ten o'clock. The jury wouldn't have it that way and told the court they had rather be fined, that with big crops in the field and frost in the air it was no time to set on a jury. The court continued the case until the next term.

RUPTURE
You may not know it but we are the largest manufacturers of Trusses, Supporters, etc., in the United States and in your home city, where you can call and see us at your own convenience. We have in our long experience in Fitting Trusses, reduced it to a science. Many Ruptures are cured by a proper fitting Truss. Most people who are ruptured do not recognize the necessity of having a properly fitted Truss. For instance; one of your family is very ill. You go to your physician, and say: so and so is ill, and what would you recommend? The physician says: I must see the case before I can tell what would be best for him. And it is the same way with a person who is ruptured. We do not know what Truss to apply until we examine the hernia. BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1898. NO. 49.

THE Utah Republican platform endorses free silver and McKinley.

THE war with Spain developed a new field for the veterinary surgeons, viz: Chief of surgeons in the army.

BOONE is entitled to 12 delegates in the next Congressional Convention, which is one for each voting precinct in the county.

THE action of the district committee at Walton, last Saturday, is satisfactory to many of the Democrats in this part of the district.

...ng a PINGREE has been renominated by the Michigan Republicans for Governor. He is one of the unique characters of this country.

IT took the county committee only fifteen minutes to decide upon the plan and to draw its order for the mass convention next Saturday.

THE Navy Department has ordered 400 sailors sent to Rear Admiral Dewey's fleet at Manilla. They are to relieve men whose time has expired.

THE office of Secretary of State has been changed oftener than any other cabinet position in the last few years. Seven men have occupied the position in as many years.

SENATOR LINDSAY believes that the United States should hold the Philippines and civilize the people. He says the United States can not afford to permit other countries to apportion them.

VESUVIUS, the most celebrated volcano in the world, is on the rampage again, and threatens great destruction of property. Scientists are able to predict its eruptions, but cannot foretell their fury.

THE Mexican Veteran Reunion, held at Louisville, last week, went on record as favoring the retention of all the territory that has come into the possession of the United States by reason of the war with Spain.

THE veterinary who doctered Mrs. McKinley's pet dog through a severe spell of sickness was afterwards made chief surgeon of a camp of volunteers. Some are unkind enough to attribute his appointment to his success ... dog at the White House.

EACH voting precinct in the county should send a delegation to represent it in the convention next Saturday. Don't remain at home and wait for others to run the convention and then make a kick afterwards if you are not suited with the result of the convention.

IN northern Indiana a new business has been recently developed. A large number of persons are engaged poisoning English sparrows and shipping them to Michigan, where a bounty is paid for heads of the dead birds. It is claimed that Michigan counties have paid out $5,000 sparrow bounty in the last few months, and many of the birds were killed in Indiana.

IT is said that President McKinley will soon promulgate a civil service order that will dispose of a large army of Democrats that are in the revenue service, and make room for Republicans. The November election is drawing near, and the President wants to make peace with the many thousands of the faithful whom he has permitted to remain out in the cold so long.

THE compulsory educational law dose not appear to be enforced at all in this county; at least the information the RECORDER has on that subject leads it to that conclusion. Only last week a would-be patron of the public school came to Burlington for information as to what school district he belonged. The schools were in progress, and had been long enough for the trustees in his district to have called upon him to ascertain the cause of his children not attending the school. He obtained the desired information, and doubtless his children are now attending school. Public opinion in this county was opposed to the law when it was passed, and it has not been given a fair trial that its actual worth might be ascertained.

AT Chickamauga Gen. Alger told the officers in command "that had the War Department been acquainted with the conditions said to have existed at Chickamauga, the troops there would have been removed long before they were." The trouble with the War Department was it refused to credit the reports that were sent broad-cast over the land as to the fearful condition of affairs at Camp Thomas. Had it proceeded on the theory that "where there is so much smoke there must be some fire," and began an investigation three months ago, many a poor fellow who now fills a soldier's grave might have been spared, and the War Department, instead of placing itself in an attitude to receive public censure, would have been applauded.

CONGRESSMAN GROSVENOR, of Ohio, writing to Secretary Alger in regard to the charges made against a surgeon in the army says:

"A few executions of such persons will rescue the Administration from the wrath that hangs over it." The Congressman in his wrath, says further: "I will stand by the Administration to any reasonable and patriotic extent, but I will not stand by and see any man go unpunished who has been guilty of what this man seems to have been guilty of."

And yet there are some who say that the Democrats are the only persons who are criticising the conduct of army officials, and that they are doing so for political purposes. Grosvenor is a Republican who stands close to the President, and he certainly is not to be charged with assisting the Democrats.

WHEN Secretary of War Alger reached Lexington, last week, he met Gen's. Sanger and Wiley, who had the courage to tell him of the abuses they had witnessed in the army, charging rottenness of the rankest sort in the departments of both the Quartermaster General and the Surgeon General. Quartermaster Luddington was present and the charges were made to his face, placing some of the blame at his door. Those newspapers that have tried all along to make light of the great suffering of the soldiers in camp and to excuse the officers for their negligence and incompetency, will hardly class Generals Sanger and Wiley with the "yellow journals," because they have the bravery to mention the neglect to which the soldiers have been subjected, and for naming the men who are responsible to some extent, for the same.

The Pensions.

In their campaign book the Republicans point with special pride to the fact that during the past fiscal year $150,000,000 has been paid out in pensions on account of the Civil War.

We are told that the number of pensioners on the rolls on June 30, 1897, was 576,014; on June 30, 1898, the number was 993,714, being a net increase during the year of 417,700.

Twenty-five years ago Gen. Garfield opined that $30,000,000 per annum would cover all legitimate pension claims, and this would decline in the (then) near future. His belief was shared by other Republicans.

Is it possible that Gen. Garfield was not so patriotic as present day Republicans? Was he less grateful to the veterans? He certainly did not believe in turning the National Government into a soup house, as his successors have done.—Post Dispatch.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Sept. 23rd, 1898.

Frantic appeals are being made to Mr. McKinley by the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee and by Republican candidates for Congress for assistance in various ways. The most pressure is ... ably being brought to get the President to issue a belayed executive order, throwing down the civil service bars to a large number of federal positions, now pending before the Congressional elections. Mr. McKinley has been told that the issuing of that order within the next two or three weeks will be worth many votes to Republican candidates for Congress, because by promising those positions many of those who were at the last election Republican workers but who are now sulking could be got to work again. He is also being urged to declare the Government Printing Office to be outside the civil service law and rules. Mr. McKinley has been told that if he doesn't do these things now, there will be no occasion, so far as party politics are concerned, for him to do them at all. It is doubtful whether he will do all that he has been asked to do, but he has intimated that he will do something.

—SS—

Boss Platt had a conference with Mr. McKinley this week, and there are reasons to believe that he told him that the Democrats had more than a fighting chance to carry New York this year, and asked him to use his influence with the anti-Platt Republicans. There was a report that Mr. McKinley did not want Roosevelt nominated for Governor by the New York Republicans, but if he had any idea of trying to throw "Teddy" down in the convention, he gave it up after talking with Boss Platt and "Teddy" is going to be nominated. While Mr. McKinley will go through the form of ... owing the administration influence to Roosevelt after he is nominated, he would rather see him defeated than elected. If he is defeated he will be shelved for awhile; if he is elected, he may become the young Republican's candidate for the Presidential nomination in 1900.

—SS—

A War Department official is quoted as having said of Secretary Alger's trip of inspection: "Alger is shrewd. During his swing around the camps he will find any number of men who will be willing to appear before the investigating committee to testify that camp life had been one long, sweet dream; that they had been fed on the fat of the land; had been provided with all the comforts of home, and that they had never seen any sickness, suffering, starvation, or dying. It is a good thing to pick out your witnesses and have a quiet little talk with them before they go on the stand."

There is no news in the published statement that the Commission to decide upon a government for Hawaii, the members of which are now on their way from Hawaii to Washington, and settled upon the territorial form of government for the islands. It is quite well known in Washington that the matter was settled long before annexation was accomplished. As long as the islands remain under a territorial form of government there is not likely to be much trouble, but there will be trouble, and lots of it, when an attempt is made to admit them as a State. It will be a long time, if ever, before the people of this country will be willing to see two Hawaiian Senators and three Hawaiian Presidential electors, who may at any time hold the balance of power in the Senate or in the electoral college.

No better answer to the question of why there was such a falling off in the Republican majorities in Maine this year has been heard in Washington than that given by Mr. R. F. Allen, of Lewiston, who replied, when asked the question: "Some Republicans didn't vote; others did—the Democratic ticket."

Nothing could better illustrate the existing fright of the Republicans than the fact that Postmaster General Smith, and Webster Davis, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, have gone on stumping tours. Of late years it has not been considered just the proper thing for a member of the Cabinet to take the stump even in Presidential campaigns, and not since Arthur's administration has one gone on the stump in a congressional or State campaign.

After many trials and many refusals to serve, Mr. McKinley has got together his commission to investigate the War Department, and the work is to begin right away. If Mr. McKinley had any doubts the public statements made to Secretary Alger since he started upon his carefully prepared for inspection of camps and hospitals, by high military officers, have convinced him that the commission will not have much trouble to locate personal responsibility for mismanagement, and worse. But will they be punished when found guilty?

CROP AND STOCK.

No hogs for sale in Boone county.

The mast crop will be large this fall.

Large per cent. of clover hay in stack in Fayette county rotted in the stack.

Lively demand for feeding cattle at Danville court day. They brought $4 03 per 100.

The value of the Trimble county peach crop this year is said to have reached $200,000.

A prominent tobacconist of Hopkinsville says the crop in that county will be the finest grown since 1896.

Excellent demand for cattle at Mt. Sterling, last court day. Between 3,000 and 4,000 cattle on the market. Feeders brought 4 cents.

The breaking of land for wheat was about abandoned previous to the rain, but it was resumed and there is time in which to get in a large acreage.

Miss Madden, a New York actress, bought through Bowerman Bros., of Lexington, six thoroughbred yearlings for $6,000 and will race them herself next season.

Henry county claims to have cut and housed, this year, the largest crop of tobacco raised there for many years, all due to the rains in August, just in time to save the crop.

Commissioner of Agriculture Moore and the Advisory Board of that bureau have decided to inaugurate a series of County Farmers' Institutes in about 20 counties of the state. The meetings will begin in October.

According to reports from London a syndicate is being formed there to buy up all the tobacco grown in this country. American dealers consider the talk of cornering the tobacco crop in this country as ridiculous.

After a hog has passed 250 pounds it is very doubtful if the average feeder can put another ounce on him with profit. Medium weight hogs can be raised between two winters and require less grain for finishing off.

Chickens are dying by the dozen in the Goshen section, in Lincoln county, by a new disease which is called limber neck. They can't hold their heads up at all when once the trouble gets a hold, and they almost invariably die.

There were about 360 cattle on the market Monday, and several flocks of sheep. The cattle were on a drag, but there was a good demand for sheep. Most of the cattle were mountain and Tennessee stuff. —Georgetown News.

An apple weighing one pound and four ounces was brought to this office, says the Stanford Journal, by Mrs. James Jones yesterday. She raised it, and says she has one ripening that will weigh one and a half pounds. They are known as the Pound Pippins.

An epidemic of barn burnings has struck Graves county. T. E. Stubblefield's barn, filled with tobacco was destroyed Saturday; Wood Gordon, Sunday; J. D. Carr's with his crop of tobacco, the same day; and Arch Mason's with his tobacco crop, was laid in ashes a few days ago.

W. J. Green, near Glencoe, has fifteen acres of as fine tobacco as one would wish to see. It is thought that it will make 1,500 pounds to the acre. His corn is also very fine. Thos. Baker, near Sanders, has fifty acres of extra fine tobacco and splendid corn. These two gentlemen are considered among our best farmers. —Owen Herald.

Daviess county farmers say there was never before so much tobacco in a damaged condition in the barns in one season as at present. They say that a lot of tobacco has been housed that was very wet from rains, and the result is that much of it is injured. A great deal of it is rotting, and it will have to be fire-dried to save it.

Uncle Charley Cox, who is one of the oldest and best farmers in Carroll county, being seventy-nine years old, says that he has tried sowing wheat in all manners and conditions, and has found that if it is sown in the light of the moon it makes the best yield and never has any smut. He always sows in the light of the moon in September.

At Kansas City, the fourth annual horse show occurred Saturday. The event was the awarding of the Stilwell purse of $1,000 for gaited saddle horses. First prize was awarded to Monte Cristo, jr., shown by J. T. Crenshaw, of Scott's Station, Ky.; second prize, $250, went to Frenchman, shown by C. F. Nagle, of Lexington, Ky.; third prize, $150, went to Thornton Star, shown by J. A. Potts, of Mexico, Mo.

A Kansas hog-raiser, in giving his experience in feeding hogs, says that five acres of sweet potatoes will fatten more hogs than twenty-five acres of corn. He had sixty hogs that would yield him 18,000 pounds of pork, and he estimates the cost of their feed at not more than $26 in actual cash for labor and other expenses in his potato field. He also claims that this food imparts a flavor to the meat that far surpasses that of corn for the animals.

One of the best-posted tobacco buyers in the burley district, after a trip over the Green river country, tells the Henderson Journal that he has just returned from a trip through Daviess, Hancock, McLean Hopkins, Webster and Union counties inspecting the tobacco crop for this year. He says: "The tobacco crop will be better than any crop we have had since the war, but the crop is the shortest we have had in years, and it will be much shorter next year than this year on account of more wheat being sown."

At a meeting of the Boone county Democratic Executive Committee at Burlington, Ky., September 24, 1898, the following members were present: W. H. Rice, Harry Adams, Richard Stephens, Elijah Parker, David Castleman, B. L. Rice, and Charlts Acra by proxy.

It is agreed and ordered that a mass convention of the Democrats of the county be held in the court house at Burlington on next Saturday, October 1, 1898, at 2 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of selecting 12 delegates to represent the county in the district convention which will meet in Newport, Ky., on next October 8th for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Congress.

D. E. CASTLEMAN, Chairman.
B. L. RICE, Secretary.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

The protracted meeting at the Christian church closed Friday night. Five members were added to the church.

J. W. Agee sold to Wm. Thompson last week 27 head of fancy two year olds at 4½ cents.

Capt. Thos. Gayle, of New Liberty, sold a nice bunch of cattle last week for $3,200.

The improvement in Owenton is very marked this year, in fact for the last three years the town has had a steady growth which is most gratifying, besides three fine modern business buildings, there will be a number of nice residences go up.

John Thornton, of Sweet Owen, was in town Tuesday. He says the farmers will get pretty well through cutting this week. The first setting is pretty good, the late is inferior, but as a wholo the crop is pretty fair. As for corn there are worlds of it, and very little stock to feed it to.

Democrats, remember the mass convention at the court house, next Saturday.

POLITICAL.

W. B. Smith is a candidate for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination.

Major P. P. Johnston, of Lexington, has announced that he will not enter the race for Governor.

Republicans of the Third District nominated Dr. M. P. Creel, of Muhlenburg county, for Congress.

Attorney General Taylor and ex-Congressman John W. Lewis will probably be the only Republican candidates for Governor.

Congressman Walter Evans, in his campaign to succeed himself is evoking the aid of as many Republicans of national repute as will help him.

Judge Pugh's followers have boasted that the administration is backing him in his race for Congress, and that $1,500 is being furnished him to use in his race.

And now the Todd Republicans have got out an injunction against the Evans Republicans in Louisville. Next thing we know, the Judges of the courts will be presiding over all political conventions and counting the ballots at general elections.—Owensboro Messenger.

It is practically certain that the Congress to be elected in November will determine the date of the withdrawal of American troops from Cuba, the form of government to be established, and to settle all the other questions growing out of the war. An extra session for this purpose will be called shortly after the expiration of the present Congress on March 4.

The Sixth district Congressional Convention has been called to meet at Newport October 8. Each county, according to the call, is allowed through its county committee to select delegates in any way the committee may choose. Such a method in the Seventh district would defeat the nominee. Such a system is not good for the party and it simply means that the machine shall have full power in each county to do as the committee may choose. That means, as a finality, a resorting to the worst methods in politics. If the different counties in the Sixth district can stand it, the balance of the State can, but should such a method be recommended by the State committee for the selection of State officers, it ... raise a howl from one end of the State to the other ... ws.

HINTS FOR DAIRYMEN.

The calf ought to be fed three times a day.

Unless the dam was a good one, don't try to raise a heifer calf.

The separator saves labor in setting milk, saves room and waste.

Rapid change from new to skim milk may injure the delicate stomach of the calf,

Barley is highly recommended as food for cattle, ranking nearly as high as wheat.

Unless the person and his clothes are clean it will taint the milk if he milks the cow.

It would seem timely to suggest again that the playful dog ought to be kept away from the cows.

If a heifer is fed upon fat-forming food constantly you will spoil her as a milker. She will learn to take on fat.

Separators should be bought only of the most reliable manufacturers, for unless made of the very best material serious accidents may occur.—Western Plowman.

Lieut. Hobson has at last succeeded in floating the Maria Teresa. The cruiser was towed to Guantanamo Bay and will be put in condition for its trip North.

EVERYTHING indicates that Kenton county will spring a candidato for Congress on the district convention, and Boone ought to instruct for Baker next Saturday. There is no telling what kind of a trick Campbell and Kenton is up to and Boone ought to be prepared to stand to her man.

THE information comes from Covington by the way of the Kentucky Post that a political protocol has been agreed upon by the Democratic leaders in that city—Elliston, Rhinock and Gooch. The protocol, it is said, provides that Col. Berry is not to be opposed by a Kenton county candidate. If Hodge, of Newport, is a party to the agreement Col. Berry's nomination is assured without opposition.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON. : : KENTUCKY.

It has been announced by the American Society of Professors of Dancing that the dizzy and mazy waltz, which is the hugging feature of the terpsichorean business, has got to go. It is out of fashion. Hereafter empty arm dancing is to be in vogue.

The prince of Wales is the champion godfather of Great Britain, his record being 75 occasions on which he has officiated in that capacity. He also holds another unique record in this respect in having stood as godfather to the duke of Marlborough, as well as to the duke of Marlborough's infant heir—that is, godfather to both the father and the son.

There are in the world several kinds of animals that have never swallowed a drop of water in all their lives. These include the llamas of Patagonia and certain gazelles of the far east. A paroquet lived 53 years in the London Zoological gardens without drinking a drop, and some naturalists think that hares take no liquid except the dew that sometimes forms on the grass that they eat.

Boarding house keepers will rejoice to know that the war with Spain will not cut off entirely the supply of their staple table delicacy—prunes. California has come to the rescue with a crop of 84,000 tons this year from orchards which aggregate 55,000 acres. At least 10,000 more acres will be in bearing next year, and a crop of 100,000 tons of green prunes is prophesied for the first year of the next century.

Pope Leo XIII. is said to have accumulated more wealth during his pontificate than any of his predecessors in the chair of St. Peter. Pius IX. collected $10,000,000, and that was looked upon as a large sum. But Leo is said to have acquired twice as much for the vatican. The greater part of the money is said to be deposited in the Bank of England, and the remainder rests in various other European banks.

Probably the smallest monarch in the world reigns over the Hindoo vassal state of Bhopal, and governs a people of more than a million souls. This dwarf is a woman, Djihan-Begum by name; but although she is about fifty years old, she does not appear larger than a child of ten. Her diminutive size does not prevent her, however, from holding the reins of government with a firm hand, and in her realm quiet and order are supreme.

The problem of choosing a president for the Cuban republic has already agitated the patriots who have been struggling against the rule of Spain for years. There is much talk of Dr. Eleuterio Betrances for the first president of the Cubans. He is a noted savant, Hellenist and oculist of Paris. He was born in Porto Rico but has long lived in Europe, and attained great prominence because of his ability as a surgeon and a man of letters.

Empress Elizabeth did not permit herself to be guarded by detectives. As soon as she noticed them she avoided them. Seven Austrian detectives followed her to Switzerland, but they were ordered to remain at Gilon while she went to Geneva. Her majesty often complained of the watchfulness imposed by the Swiss government for her safety. When leaving the hotel on the day she was assassinated, and perceiving detectives outside, she left by a side door to escape them.

Luinaka, the king of Barotse Land, says a traveler, is held in great fear and respect by his people. His court has as much etiquette and ceremonial as that of Louis XIV. His band of musicians make both day and night hideous with their performances. The music is done to drive away evil spirits. Luinaka himself is an imposing spectacle. He wears a long blue dressing gown, trimmed with red braid, trousers and shirt, and on his head a scarlet nightcap, and above it a black teral hat.

Rr. Adm. Sampson will receive as prize money and bounty about $100,000. Rr. Adm. Dewey will receive about $9,000. Rr. Adm. Schley's share will be about $5,000—less than that of some of the captains in the navy who were capturing prizes while Schley was "bottled up" in Hampton Roads at the beginning of the war. The seamen, including the "men behind the guns," will get from $30 to $200 or $300, according to their pay and the number of prizes captured by their respective ships.

The new French quick-firing field gun, which recently made its appearance in the French army maneuvers, is pronounced by experts to be the most important advance in military science since the adoption of smokeless powder. Several batteries of these new guns, attached to the 3d army corps, operating near Chalons, under the personal supervision of Gen. Jamont, have fulfilled the highest expectations. Experiments with live projectiles against wooden screens representing companies show a destructive power absolutely appalling.

From Lucerne, Switzerland, it is reported that the restoration of the famous old Chateau of Chillon, in the Lake of Geneva, which was built in the beginning of the 13th century and has become celebrated by Byron's "The Prisoner of Chillon," is progressing slowly, but surely, most minute care being taken to preserve the original style and coloring in every detail. The hall is nearly finished; the fine ceiling, constructed in 1439 by Aymonet Corniaux, architect to the dukes of Savoy, was in an excellent state of preservation and needed little beyond careful cleaning.

SPENT SUNDAY IN LONDON.

The American Peace Commissioners Reach There in Good Health and Ready for the Work Before Them.

Liverpool, Sept. 26.—The United States peace commissioners landed here Saturday morning from the Cunard line steamer Campania, which reached her landing stage before daylight. They are all in good health and refreshed by the voyage for the work in store for them.

The physical betterment was most marked in the case of Judge Day, who said Friday evening to Senator Davis: "I am getting well accustomed to this sea travel. I like it and could well enjoy another week of it before going ashore."

This points to the fact that the chairman of the peace commission is a much changed man for the better by the rest of a week at sea, salt water baths and the bracing air on the deck of the steamer. His face is ruddy and his eyes are brightened by added vigor.

The commissioners were received by the United States consul, Mr. James Boyle.

The mayor of Liverpool extended to the commissioners an invitation to attend to a function to be held Saturday evening in honor of the British warships now here. The invitation, however, was declined, the commissioners deeming it unwise to accept it.

The commissioners proceeded at 8.15 by a special steamer to the train for London.

All the baggage of the commission and its staff, the boxes of records, etc., was distinctively marked in order to insure expeditious and careful handling.

The commissioners and their party occupied three parlor coaches at the head of the train, followed by two baggage cars for their effects. The Americans were thus cut off from the remainder of the train and secured privacy during the run to London.

London, Sept. 26.—The train with the American peace commissioners on board arrived here at 12:30 p. m. Saturday. The commissioners are staying at the Hotel Cecil, where they will remain until Monday. On Monday they will leave at 7 o'clock in the morning and will arrive in Paris at 7 o'clock the same evening.

THEY DESERVED PROMOTION

A Number of Officers in the Santiago and Porto Rico Campaigns Made Brigadier [illegible] Volunteers.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The president has appointed the following named officers:

To be brigadier generals of volunteers for services in the Santiago campaign:

Lieut. Col. Charles D. Viele, 1st U. S. cavalry.

Col. Wm. M. Wherry, 17th U. S. infantry.

NEW WAR SHIPS

Bids Will Be Opened for the Construction of Harbor Defense Vessels.

The Battery Will Be Composed of Two 12-Inch Breech-Loading Guns, Four 4-Inch Rapid Fire Guns and Secondary Battery of Seven Rapid Fire Guns.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The navy department will open bids on October 3 for the construction of the four harbor defense vessels for which congress made an appropriation on May 4. They are to be of the monitor type, each having one or two turrets, and to cost, exclusive of armament, not more than $1,250,000. The bids are to be on the department's designs, and it is stipulated that the bidders designate the time within which the contract for each vessel will be completed. No bids will be received which names a time greater than 27 months. The penalty which will be imposed in case the contracts are not completed within the limit of time is $100 a day for the first six months succeeding the expiration of that period and $600 for every day thereafter, Sundays in both cases being excepted.

Each vessel is to be 225 feet long on the load water line, and its extreme breadth 50 feet. It is to have a mean draft at normal displacement of about twelve and one-half feet, with a normal displacement of about twenty-seven hundred tons. The total coal capacity, loose stowage, is about two hundred tons. The hull is to be of steel, not sheathed, with double bottoms and close, water tight subdivisions. One military mast is to be fitted with fighting and search light tops. The hull will be protected to the water line by a side armor belt of a maximum thickness not to exceed 11 inches and a mean depth of 5 feet. The barbettes for the 12-inch guns will also have an 11-inch armor belt. The turrets are to be of the balanced type, with armor 10 inches thick. A protected deck will extend the full length of the vessel and will have an armor of not less than 1½ inches.

Each vessel is to be driven by twin screws. The engines, of which there will be two, are to be of the verticle triple expansion type in one watertight compartment. There will be four boilers of the water tube type, constructed for a working pressure of 250 pounds and they are to be placed in one water-tight compartment.

The battery will be composed of two 12-inch breech-loading guns, mounted in an armored barbette turret on the midship line of forward; four 4-inch rapid fire guns in broadside on the superstructure deck and a secondary battery of seven rapid fire guns. The weight of the battery of guns with their mounts and carriages will be about 177 tons. If on trial the average speed shall equal or exceed a speed at sea of 12 knots an hour for two consecutive hours, the vessel will be accepted so far as the speed is concerned. A reduction of $5,000 for a quarter-knot deficiency of speed between 12 knots and 11½ knots, and a [illegible] of $10,000 a quarter-knot deficiency from 11½ knots to 11 knots, will be made. If the speed falls below 11 knots an hour the vessel may be accepted or rejected, at the discretion of the secretary of the navy.

The fact that the Drummond Tobacco Co., of this city, has not made any reduction leads to the belief that the [illegible] deal will go through, even if it has not already been consummated, as to a the Drummond people will cast their lot with the combine.

The Growth of Socialism.

It is argued by deep thinkers that the growth of socialism is due to the large standing armies of the world, in which men are often made to enlist against their will, and thus become discontented with existing conditions. The growth of a stronger race of people is due to the large sale of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is the best medicine for costiveness, dyspepsia, fever, ague and all nervous troubles. Settled Beyond a Doubt That Emma Gill Died in Mrs. Guilford's House.

The Midwife Hired a Team From Bank Brothers on the 11th—The Night Following She Used the Same Team —Mrs. Guilford Will Be Arrested.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Sept. 26.—A search of Nancy Guilford's house Sunday settled beyond a doubt that Emma Gill died there, and it was also learned that her death took place Sunday, the 11th inst. Several incriminating articles belonging to Mrs. Guilford were found in the search of the premises.

It is believed that the first portions of the dismembered body were thrown into Yellow Mill pond between 10 and 11 o'clock Sunday night. Mrs. Guilford hired a team from Bank Bros., on Broad street, that night, and was gone two hours, and the Monday night following she had the same team again and was gone until 1 o'clock the next morning. Mrs. Casperine, who lives on Cedar street, about 400 feet from the bridge where the bundle was thrown off into the pond, positively identified the team as the one she saw being driven on the bridge about 10:30 on the Sunday night in question, and she also saw its return a few moments later. Superintendent Birmingham stated Sunday night that he expected to hear of the arrest of Mrs. Guilford at any moment. He was positive that she would be in custody before many hours.

INVESTIGATING COMMISSION.

Eight of the Members Hold an Initial Meeting in the Office of President McKinley in the White House.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The commission to investigate the conduct of the war department during the recent conflict with Spain held its initial meeting in the office of President McKinley at the white house Saturday. There were eight members present and it was announced that the services of a ninth man were counted upon, though his name was not made public. The eight who were present were:

GEN. GREENVILLE M. DODGE.

Maj. Gen. Granville M. Dodge, of Iowa; Col. J. A. Sexton, of Illinois; Capt. E. P. Howell, of Georgia; Maj. Gen. J. M. Wilson, chief of engineers of the United States army; Hon. Chas. Derby, of Indiana, late minister to China; ex-Gov. Urban A. Woodbury, of Vermont; ex-Gov. James A. Beaver, of Pennsylvania, and Maj. Gen. H. McD. McCook, of the army (retired).

The appearance of Gov. Beaver as a member of the commission was a surprise, as his selection was not known until he appeared at the white house at the beginning of the session.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Dr. Phineas S. Conner, of Cincinnati, has been selected as the medical member of the war investigation commission. Dr. Conner has accepted the appointment and left for Washington Saturday night.

THE MARIA TERESA AFLOAT.

The Spanish Warship Raised and Towed to Guantanamo Bay—The Cruiser Being Put in Condition for Trip North.

PLAYA DEL ESTE, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, Sept. 26.—The wrecking company engaged under Lieut. Hobson in the work of saving the wrecked Spanish war ships has succeeded in floating the cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa. The cruiser, after being got afloat was taken in tow by the Potomac and convoyed by the cruiser Newark, the Scorpion and the Alvarado, proceeded for Guantanamo bay, where she arrived Saturday. The successful issue of the attempt to float her was greeted with the blowing of whistles, the firing of national salutes and by cheers, in which the Cubans joined, disturbing the noon siesta.

Off Siboney the barometer and the wind indicated the approach of a hurricane and the towing power was increased.

The Newark, under Capt. Goodrich, rendered valuable assistance in the work of saving the Maria Teresa. The cruiser is being put in condition for her trip north by the repair ship Vulcan.

A New Disease Among Cattle.

NORLESVILLE, Ind., Sept. 26.—A new and peculiar disease has made its appearance among the cattle in the western part of this county. It is causing the owners of cattle much uneasiness. The disease affects the eyes alone. It begins with a swelling of the eyes, then a white scum appears over the eyeball, the swelling gradually goes down, and in the center of the eye appears a red, cancerous growth, which pushes outward. Prof. Bitting, of Purdue university, has been asked to explain the new disease.

SHE SLEEPS HER LAST SLEEP

The Remains of Winnie Davis Buried by the Grave of Her Father in Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 24.—Varina Anne Jefferson Davis, "the Daughter of the Confederacy," sleeps her last sleep in the bosom of the land she loved so well. Her remains arrived here at 8:40 o'clock Friday morning in a combination Pullman and parlor car of the New York, New Haven & Hartford road, which was attached to the regular train from Washington, and were met at the depot by Lee camp, Confederate Veterans, of which she was a member, and delegates from Pickett camp. Col. Archer Anderson, Hon. J. Taylor Ellison, Col. E. L. Hobson and Dr. George Ross and their wives received Mrs. Davis and those of her immediate party who were on the train. The casket was borne to the hearse from the funeral car by the gentlemen selected for active pall-bearers, and the guard of honor and the veteran escort followed in column of fours. There were four beautiful white horses attached to the hearse, each one being led by a colored man.

The casket was placed in the lecture room of St. Paul's church, and Col. Laughton dismissed the escort. Two members of the guard of honor remained constantly on duty, being relieved every half hour. Upon being deposited in the lecture room the casket was surrounded by floral tributes from Georgia, Virginia, South Carolina and other states.

To the left of the casket was the furled flag of the confederacy.

St. Paul's church, in which the funeral services were conducted, and of which Rev. Dr. Hartley Carmichael is the rector, was the church in which Mr. Davis was confirmed and was seated when he received, on April 3, 1865, the message from Gen. Lee which necessitated the evacuation of Richmond by the confederate troops.

Rev. Dr. Carmichael announced the first hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," which was a favorite of Gen. Robert E. Lee. After the hymn had been sung Rev. Dr. Hoge read the psalm for the day and "Nearer My God to Thee" was sung. Dr. Carmichael read the lesson. "Art Thou Weary" was then sung and at its close the veterans moved out with the casket. Mrs. Davis was prostrated and it was several minutes before the grief-stricken mother could rise. The scene was deeply affecting and those who witnessed it were greatly moved. Many an old soldier, dressed in gray, wept freely as he witnessed the grief of the aged lady.

The crowd about the church when the casket was taken out and placed in the hearse was of immense proportions.

The procession was headed by the marshal and his staffs, Gen. Alonzo Phillips and staff, then came six companies of state troops and the Richmond howitzers. Then came the veterans' organizations headed by the 1st regiment band playing the "Dead March in Saul." Amid the tolling of bells of many churches the procession started toward Hollywood cemetery, marching between dense lines of humanity the entire distance. The procession was nearly a mile in length, though the carriages were driven two abreast.

Arriving at the cemetery the remains were deposited in a grave by the side of her distinguished father.

MAY ARM THE FILIPINOS.

Plans of Germany to Obtain Possession of the Philippines—Startling Statement of a California Man.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—A former resident of the Philippines, now in Frisco, who has secret information of the plans of the Germans to obtain possession of the islands, declares that the German emperor's plans includes sending 150,000 rifles to Aguinaldo with some trained artillery officers, and when Aguinaldo has proved successful in worrying the Americans in to relinquishing their control of the islands that the Germans will step in and seize the islands under the plea of protecting their trade. It is claimed that knowledge of this plan induced the government last week to order the dispatch to Manila of the 6,000 volunteers in camp here.

What the Filipinos Want.

MANILA, Sept. 24.—The Filipino national assembly has decided to request the Americans, first, to recognize the independence of the islands; second, to establish a protectorate over their external affairs and to induce the powers to recognize their independence; third, to appoint a joint commission of Americans and Filipinos for the arrangement of details to "reciprocate the American services."

Ex-Secretary Sherman Convalescing.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Ex-Secretary Sherman has so far recovered from his illness that his physician, Dr. Frank Hyatt, has left the city for a few days. On his advice Mr. Sherman has abandoned his speechmaking plans in Ohio.

The Attempted Poisoning of Aguinaldo.

MANILA, Sept. 24.—A careful investigation of the attempt to poison Aguinaldo shows that the cook is not dead, as reported, and that no priests are implicated.

THE CRISIS NEAR

Gen. Zurlinden Takes Another Step Toward the Dictatorship.

He Comes Forward as the Defender of the Army, the Prosecutor of Its Supposed Calumniators and Opposes a Revision of the Dreyfus Case.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—The situation here is generally admitted to be grave by both press and people. The conflict between the civil and military authorities is becoming acute. The Zurlinden and unexpected action Zurlinden, the military governor of Paris, in prosecuting Col. on the charge of forgery and using forged documents, assumes a grave aspect on account of the circumstances attending this intervention of the military authorities in a civil court. At the present moment, when the political atmosphere is surcharged with dangerous electricity, generated by the Dreyfus affair, the general, who has just quitted the cabinet, in defiance of civil authority, takes, without consulting his successor or the premier, an important step. In ordinary circumstances, the military governor is empowered to act independently; but, now that the Dreyfus question has become a great national matter, every proceeding in the affair has state importance.

Gen. Zurlinden's ignoring of this obvious fact is very significant. He comes forward as the defender of the army, the prosecutor of its supposed calumniators, and the resolute opponent of a revision of the case. From this to an appeal to the public in the line of the establishment of a dictatorship, there is no wide step.

Picquart was transferred Thursday afternoon to the military prison of Cherche Midi.

The Matin affirms that it has authentic information that the name of Dreyfus was never once mentioned in the mass of documents brought against him. It adds that the only serious document is the so-called bordereau. The documents in the case, it appears, consist entirely of fragments of letters referring to everything except Dreyfus, and the whole matter, the Matin adds, "constitutes such a fairy tale that no sober-minded person would dream of accepting it."

A PEREMPTORY MESSAGE.

Imperative Order Sent to Our Commissioners—The Spaniards Must Leave the Island of Cuba at Once.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—A very peremptory message of instruction has been sent to the Cuban military commission and by them made the basis of a note to the Spanish commissioners. The authorities in Washington will not make public the terms of the note, but its general tenor is that the United States will not be satisfied with any further delay in the evacuation of Cuba. It is to the effect that the terms of the protocol called for the immediate evacuation of Cuba and that Spanish sovereignty must be relinquished. The American commissioners have been informed that the evacuation of Cuba can not be delayed.

Mohican May Never See Service Again.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24.—The old man-of-war, Mohican, now at Mare Island, will go out of commission in about two weeks, and it is doubtful if she will ever see service again. The Mohican was aground at Honolulu and the pumps were kept pretty busy on the voyage to this port.

Insurance Companies Indicted.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 24.—The Franklin county grand jury, on the advice of Commonwealth's Attorney Robert B. Franklin, Friday morning returned indictments against 74 leading insurance companies of the country, doing business in this state, charging them with being a trust or combination to control insurance rates and to prevent competition in this state. The indictment also charges conspiracy. The local board of underwriters and local coal dealers were recently indicted on the same charges.

ARRIVE AT CHICKAMAUGA.

Secretary Alger and Surgeon General Sternberg Inspect Leiter and Sternberg Hospital—Cheering Words.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 23.—Secretary of War Russell A. Alger, Surgeon General Sternberg and party have made a thorough inspection of Chickamauga Thursday. The party left the city in their special car at 8:15 Thursday morning, and since have been busily engaged going from place to place over the battlefield. The first place visited was Leiter hospital, where about an hour was spent.

From Leiter the party went to Sternberg hospital, where another hour was spent. In both hospitals Gen. Alger and Gen. Sternberg spoke cheering words to each and every one of the many patients and shook hands with every nurse. One remark he repeated was, "Honor you brave boys as much as I do any of the war's heroes."

TWO SUSPECTS ARRESTED.

One of Them Admits That He Sent Mrs. Guilford a Letter to Pay for the Murder of Emma Gill.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Sept. 24.—Startling disclosures were made today in the Yellow Mill pond tragedy. At 9 o'clock Friday night Detectives Arnold and Cronan arrived in this city from Southington, Ct., bringing with them as prisoners two of the leading young men of that place. The prisoners are Harry Oxley, son of a confectioner in Southington, and Howard Guernsey, son of Sherman F. Guernsey, a congregational deacon of that place.

Against Oxley the police have the strongest kind of evidence, for they have discovered beyond doubt that it was he who furnished the money that defrayed the expense incurred by the criminal operation that Emma Gill underwent. That Dr. Nancy Guilford was the midwife to whom this money—a sum between $100 and $200—was sent there is not the slightest doubt, and the authorities go so far as to say that Dr. Nancy Guilford is concerned in the murder.

There is no secret about the belief of the police that Emma Gill was not only operated upon in the Guilford house, but that her frightful butchery was likewise accomplished there.

YELLOW FEVER AT HAVANA.

Forty-Three Cases of the Most Dangerous Type Are in the Hospital—Twenty-Two Deaths Officially Reported.

HAVANA, Sept. 24.—Of 8,000 patients in Havana hospitals, 43 are suffering from yellow fever of the most dangerous type, the deaths averaging three a day in the hospitals. Twenty-two deaths from yellow fever have been officially reported.

Ten People Drowned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—The steamer Alameda brings news from Australia of the wreck of the schooner C. C. Funk on Flinders island, July 31. The victims are: Capt. and Mrs. Nesson and two children, and six members of the crew. Two members of the crew were the only survivors.

EMPEROR OF CHINA RESIGNS.

Prince Kung's Grandson May Be Placed on the Throne, With the Empress Dowager as Regent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The Chinese minister, Mr. Wu Ting Fang, Friday received a cable dispatch from the Chinese foreign office at Pekin giving the text of the edict issued by the emperor Thursday, in which, owing to the critical condition of Chinese affairs, he calls back to power the Empress dowager and commits to her hands the direction of the vast affairs of the empire. The edict, freely translated from the cipher cable, is as follows:

"Now that China is distnrbed, and there is need that all bnsiness shall be well done, we, the emperor, agitated from morning to evening for the welfare of all affairs and fearful lest errors may occur, observing from the beginning of the reign of Tnng Chi that the Empress Dowager had twice given instructions to the emperor, each time with signal ability and success, so we now, considering the important interests of the empire, have begged the empress dowager to give to the emperor the benefit of her ripe experience and her instruction. The dowager empress has been pleased to accede to this request. Therefore it is to the good fortnne of the whole empire that this auspicious event is brought abont. From Friday the empress dowager condncts the business in the imperial apartments, and on the eighth day of the present month (Chinese calendar, meaning Friday English calendar), we will take all the princes and ministers to perform the ceremony in the Chin Chung palace. Let the yamen (foreign office) prepare that the ceremony may be performed with fitting honors."

The Chinese minister was seen at the legation Friday and talked freely concerning the edict. He said there was no secrecy about it, nothing to indicate that it was a triumph of one foreign element over another and that its essential purpose was to strengthen China herself at a time when serious foreign problems were presented. It was quite natural, he said, that the dowager empress should be called to the aid of the emperor, owing to dynastic reasons. The present dowager has survived three dynasties, beginning with that of Emperor Hsien Fung.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—According to special dispatches received from Pekin, members of the European community there believe the emperor's life is in danger. It is added that the dowager empress desires to place Prince Kung's grandson on the throne. The emperor, it is added, realizes the strength of the conspiracy against him and has ordered the guards at the palace to be strengthened.

Alger and Party Spent Sunday Visiting Military Camps at Jacksonville.

Sickness, Says Alger, is Largely the Fault of Commanders, Division, Regimental and Company Commanders—Words of Praise for Gen. Lee.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 26.—Secretary Alger and party, consisting of Gen. Sternberg, surgeon general; Gen. Ludington, quartermaster general, and others, spent the day in Jacksonville visiting the camp of the 7th army corps. The distinguished party was met at the station by Gen. Lee and a committee of citizens.

Gen. Alger proceeded at once to the camp of the 1st division and during the day inspected the three division hospitals, going through every ward. He shook hands and spoke encouraging words to the sick men, and in one instance a discharge was asked for by a sick man. His name was taken, and the secretary said that it would be attended to. The regiments of the three divisions were reviewed, that of the 3d division being after dark with the light of the moon hid behind a hazy sky. At the conclusion of his labors Secretary Alger said in response to a question: "I am highly delighted with all I have seen and am very agreeably surprised at the conditions that I find existing in Camp Cuba Libre."

As Jacksonville has been considered to have the best and healthiest camp in the country, his statement means much.

A luncheon was tendered to the secretary and party at noon and in a response to a toast drunk standing he said:

"I have visited Jacksonville once or twice before, but never with the same interests as to-day. I have listened with pleasure, but with surprise, to the resolutions that have been read as to how the citizens of Jacksonville have got along with Gen. Lee. Any one can get along with him that will let him have his own way. I know him pretty well and you have been sagacious in letting him run things here. I am glad the soldiers have been orderly, and of course, that has been due to Gen. Lee. (Laughter). The health of this camp has been better than that of any other in the country. Twenty-five per cent. of that has been due the city of Jacksonville and 75 per cent. has been due to Gen. Lee, for, of course, the subordinate officers don't count (applause and continued laughter.) Sickness is largely the fault of commanders, division, regimental and company commanders. Gen. Lee is not looking very well and I have granted him a short leave of absence.

"The organizing and equipping of an army of 250,000 men carrying on a war in two continents in the space of three months has been a tremendous undertaking. The secretary of war has been ably assisted in this undertaking by the surgeon general and the quartermaster's department. They have been criticised, but not to the extent the secretary of war has been, yet I know the work they have accomplished has been little short of miraculous. When this war began the clothing that the men have worn was on the back of animals. There was no ammunition, no transportation; there was nothing beyond the war department but a great, rich nation, burning with patriotism. Almost in a night an army was organized and equipped that paralyzed the nation with what it had to deal, and has awakened the admiration of the world. I have no apology to make for what has been done. I am willing to let the record of the campaign stand and speak for itself.

"United States Senator Morgan said to me before he left for the Hawaiian islands:

"'The world has never seen, nor will it see again, the mobilization of such an army, and the accomplishing with it of what has been done with this one in such a short period.'

"It matters not what may become of me. I may be buried in oblivion, or in the grave, but the unbiased historian will give the world the impartial record of what has been accomplished, and the record will stand forever as a monument to the greatness of this nation and of its boundless resources. We are a great nation. We don't have to depend on any other on earth, and our resources are such that we can be independent of all. We should have a standing army enough for our needs. We should have a great navy that we may take our place among the leading nations of the world.

"When this began I issued an order that the North and south should be brigaded together. They have united and it is proven that the sectional lines of the north and the south no longer exist, and I thank God that I have lived to see the day when we have a United country.

"I thank you, Gen. Lee, for the welcome and the hospitality of to-day, and I hope for the continued prosperity of this city and this nation." (Great and continued applause.)

Assurance Given That the Great Industrial Interests of the United States Will Not Suffer.

The assurances of a member of the American commission is given that the industrial system of the United States will not be disturbed, and that there is not the slightest reason for apprehension on the part of Americans that any of the great industries are to be sacrificed.

While passing through the Big Bone country, last week, we heard loud explosions of dynamite and rattle of small arms with pick and shovels. First we thought the battle of Bunker Hill or Caney was being rehearsed by a brigade of lufantry, but come to find out it was Chas. Rev. Moore, of Georgetown, enjoys a joke, perhaps better than most men, and tells of the following one which happened at his town: A negro man was seen coming up the street with a live coon on his back by a ventriloquist and straight way Mr. V. determined to have some fun at the old negroe's expense. Getting on the opposite side of the street and giving some bystanders the tip, quietly waited until the negroe came wagging along. Throwing his voice into the coon, he made it say: "Sambo, where you going with me?" Sambo threw him on the side walk, put one foot on his neck and said in a voice flavored with 95 per cent. superstitious fright and the other 5 per cent. ready to run, "What on dis earf is de mattah wid you?" Coon of course made no reply, (how could he). Finally Sambo souied up and started again. Mr. V. threw his voice as before and the coon squalled out, "Say, Sambo, where you going with me?" Whack the coon went to the side walk and as the crowd yelled the negro walked away and said as he went: "Dat coon is er fool ter bleve I'se goin ter tote him any whar when the debil am dun gon an got him sarten." Mr. Moore don't say that the ventriloquist loved coon as well as the Hon. Co. Atty. of Boone, and took it to the hotel where it was served in grand style, "baked a-la-sweet potatoes, &c." but we think its likely he did.

Bullittsville.

The fever of matrimony is raging in our midst at present. This week Mr. Yancy Clore will lead to the altar Miss Fannie Helm. Next week Mr. Chester Davis and Miss Bertha Gaines, and Mr. Ves Gaines and Miss Eunie Duncan will celebrate their marriage in a double wedding. I believe the day is set for the 5th of October. We will send you an account of this wedding in our next communication. Judging from the frequent visits of one of our Doctors to two or three fair patients I shouldn't be surprised at the announcement of another marriage in the near future.

Your correspondent is becoming concerned about his central organ of circulation. He is conscious of symptoms of pericarditis and fears that the inflammation may penetrate to the inmost recesses of this organ and cause its ruin. He is striving hard to allay the suffering with the application of flattering unctious, but they do not seem to have the desired effect.

Miss Sheba Roberts, daughter of our popular Judge, has been spending several days with Miss Annie Gaines. Miss Sheba is a great favorite with both the ladies and gentlemen of our social circle.

Miss Fannie Willis has been entertaining, for two weeks, Miss S. Orridge Barnard, of Cynthiana. Miss Barnard is a beautiful and charming little brunette, with artless and most engaging manners which render her very popular with all those whose pleasure it was to meet her. During her stay in our midst she had at her command the handsomest turnout and the most gallant escort our social circle can boast of.

Mrs. Chas. A. Gaines has been entertaluing, as boarders, for two weeks, Mr. Johnsou, wife and two sons, from Covington. They came out on a country outing. They have traveled extensively in Europe.

Sunday, Miss Zayda Gaines entertained Miss Katherine Coolidge and her escort, Mr. John A. Kreis, jr., of Avondale. Miss Coolidge is one of those angellic little bodies that makes every one in her presence feel that they are nearer heaven than they ever were before; her lady like deportment, beautiful face and exquisite singing render her one of the most charming ladies we have ever met.

Last week it was both our privilege and pleasure to spend a portion of an afternoon in the school room on Garrison. Miss Mary Gaines has charge of this school. We were pleased to see Miss Mary getting along so nicely with her school: She had 22 pupils under her charge and she ruled them with a rod of love. From the observation we made I predict Miss Mary will make a successful teacher. She showed a marked interest in her vocation and the children entrusted to her. The children on the other hand seemed to appreciate her kind and positive rulings.

Your correspondent has entered upon a business venture that he hopes will keep him actively engaged for some time to come, and at the same time prove remunerative. He is also the State agent for the company in Kentucky. Any one wishing to buy a machine and build their own fence or have their fence built, can secure the same by applying to G. C. Graddy at Bullittsville.

Mrs. Arlie Lermond, of Silverville, Ind., is the guest of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Emma Lermond.

Mrs. Lora Rouse has withdrawn from the partnership with Mrs. Ella Rouse and will hereafter devote herself to the millinery business.

Mr. C. Y. Coffman, while riding on the high seated delivery wagon of Rouse Bros. on Saturday last, was thrown violently to the ground by the near fore wheel pitching into a deep rut, breaking his right shoulder.

Mr. T. K. Fleming, on last Saturday week, killed a copperhead snake in his front yard which was over three feet in length, and was as thick as a man's arm. There is a deal of unnecessary excitement about it as it probably is the only one of the species left though they swarmed in that locality years ago.

Mrs. Martha Allphin and Mrs. Maggie Williams, of Critteudeu, Mrs. America Remington, of Brookfield, Mo; Mrs. Emma Propes, of Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Rogers, Mrs. Julia Peak, and Mrs. Jaue Johnson, of this locality, togther with B. W. Records, of Sparta, spent a pleasant day with Mrs. Tabitha Vest on Wednesday the 21st inst. Eight of the ladies were schoolmates forty years ago.

The negroes in town are in the habit of congregating on the steps of the bank. On Sunday afternoon they were there in force, using vile language and making a great deal of noise. Richard Staten, who lives next door to the bank came out and asked them to go away from there and make their racket elsewhere. He was hooted at, and then he threw rocks at them which caused them to do the same and for a time it looked as if there might be a riot. A great many of the citizens are complaining about the conduct of these noisy rioters and it may be the indignant whites may take measures to quell these disturbances.

A gentleman named Adams visited our town last week, who gave out that he wished to buy or lease a piece of ground with a view to feeding stock as a business. He looked at several tracts and it is said has an option on one. Prima facie it seems that Walton can not be the most desirable place for that kind of business. One gentleman who had conversed with him gave it as his opinion that he would probably put up a distillery. There are others who think he is a speculator who has information that this is in the belt for natural gas, that it has cropped out here, and it is a well known fact that several springs in the neighborhood have been regarded as useless since years ago on account of the water being so strongly impregnated with gas or coal oil. The writer has conversed with many old residents in the last ten years, who have given many hints on the subject.

Friday night about 11 o'clock Mr. Ran Rouse, at the corner of Pike and Verona Avenue, was aroused from his peaceful repose by a knock at his door. Going to and opening it he saw 2 lads who asked permission to stay all night. Peering at them very closely Mr. Rouse saw that they were school boys, having their books with them and wearing uniforms. He concluded they were runaways from some school, and such was proved to be the fact. They were taken in (desperately tired) and cared for. Mr. Rouse, next morning, telephoned Chief Pugh whether any lads were missing and in reply was requested to hold them. Then came a message that two boys were missing from the Orphans' Protestant school. Superintendent Melbourne came out and took them back. They had a rough time, having walked the track, trestles, tuunels, and all. They were Charles Tranter, 13, and James Reynolds, 10. The latter was worn out and wanted to lay down and sleep on the track.

ONE BY ONE

Yancy Clore died at his residence out on Gunpowder creek, last Tuesday morning, aged 82 years, 11 months and 28 days.

The deceased was a son of Ephriam and Amy Clore, who came from Madison county, Virginia, in 1829, and settled in what is now called the Frogtown neighborhood, this county, where they resided two years, and then moved to the farm where their son died on the 20th inst.

Yancy Clore was born in Madison county, Va., October 22d, 1815, being fourteen years old when he came to this county. At the death of his father, nearly fifty years ago, he became the owner of the homestead, where he spent a long and useful life, amassing considerable of this world's goods.

His wife was a daughter of Joseph Weaver. They were married Dec. 20th, 1853, and to them were born four children, Joseph H., and L. E. Clore, and Mrs. W. T. Davis and Mrs. W. H. Rouse. The wife and all the above children, except L. E. Clore, are living.

Mr. Clore occupied the farm where he died for 67 years, and owing to his skill as a tiller of the soil his farm has at all times, been in a high state of cultivation. He did not encourage extravagant expenditures of money, but had everything about his place that was condusive of comfort both in doors and out. His advise on questious pertaining to farming was often sought by his neighbors, and his opinions, always based on a practical experience, were never found to be erroneous. He was practical in all things, a quiet and honorable citizen and kiud and indulgent husband and father, whose long life was worthy the emulation of all.

The burial took place from the family residence, last Wednesday at 2 o'clock, the remains being laid to rest in the family cemetery, where his father and mother have rested for nearly a half a century.

A brief service was conducted at the grave by Elder Martin L. Aylor, and the earth closed over the remains of another worthy man. The funeral was in charge of John Aillson, the popular funeral director of Covingtou.

The bride on the occasion was Miss Bessie Grattan, the charmiug and handsome daughter of Mrs. Kirtley and one of Covington's leading society womeu. The groom was Mr. R. R. Revill. Circuit Court Clerk Miller's popular deputy, which office he has held for several years past, and one of Covington's leading young society men. The ceremony took place at 7 o'clock in the spacious parlors of the home of the bride, which had been elaborately and artistically decorated with the national flower, golden-rod. At the appointed hour the bride and groom entered from the drawiug room, keeping step with Mendelssohn's Wendiug March, that resounded through the halls from the piano presided over by Miss Zayda Gaines, of Bullittsville, Ky. They were met in the center of the room by Rev. J. A. Kirtley, a Baptist minister of Petersburg, Ky., also an uncle of the bride, who pronounced the words that made them husband and wife. There were no attendants. Following the ceremony au elegant collation was served. The bride was attired in an exquisite traveling habit of gray broadcloth, and the happy pair left on the late train for the East, where they will spend their honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Revill will be at home to their friends after October 10 at 521 Greenup street.—Thursday's Euquirer.

"Prevent the prize fight in your county to-night at all hazards," read the telegram Sheriff Beall received from Gov. Bradley, last Friday evening. THE ORDINARY PEOPLE.

Society Would Go to Pieces Without the Common Folk.

The Burden of the World is Borne by Them—A Few Great Doctors Could Not Care the Sick—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Talmage, D. D.

From a passage of Scriptnre that probably no other clergyman ever preached from, Rev. Dr. Talmage, in this discourse, sets forth a truth very appropriate for those who have unhealthy ambition for great wealth or fame. The text is I. Chron. xx., 6, 7:

"A man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand, and six on each foot; and he also was the son of a giant. But when he defied Israel, Jonathan, the son of Shimea, David's son, slew him."

Malformation photographed, and for what reason? Did not this passage slip in by mistake into the sacred Scriptures, as sometimes a paragraph utterly obnoxious to the editor gets into his newspaper during his absence? Is not this Scriptural errata? No, no! there is nothing haphazard about the Bible. This passage of Scripture was as certainly intended to be put in the Bible as the verse, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," or, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son."

And I select it for my text to-day because it is charged with practical and tremendous meaning. By the people of God the Philistines had been conquered, with the exception of a few giants. The race of ghants is mostly extinct, I am glad to say. There is no use for giants now except to enlarge the income of museums. But there were many of them in olden times. Goliath was, according to the Bible, eleven feet four and a half inches high. Or, if you doubt this, the famous Pliny declares that at Crete, by an earthquake, a monument was broken open, discovering the remains of a giant 46 cubits long, or 69 feet high. So, whether you take sacred or profane history, you must come to the conclusion that there were in those times cases of human altitude monstrous and appalling.

David had smashed the skull of one of these giants, but there were other giants that the Davidean wars had not yet subdued, and one of them stands in my text. He was not only of Alpine stature, but had a surplus of digits. To the ordinary fingers was annexed an additional finger, and the foot had also an additional addendum. He had 24 terminations to hands and feet, where others had 20. It was not the only instance of the kind. Tavernier, the learned writer, says that the emperor of Java had a son endowed with the same number of extremities. Volcatius, the poet, had six fingers on each hand. Maupertuis, in his celebrated letters, speaks of two families near Berlin similarly equipped of hand and foot. All of which I can believe, for I have seen two cases of the same physical superabundance.

But this giant of the text is in battle, and as David, the stripling warrior, had dispatched one giant, the nephew of David slays this monster of my text, and there he lies after the battle in Gath, a dead giant. His stature did not save him, and his superfluous appendices of hand and foot did not save him. The probability was that in the battle his sixth finger on his hand made him clumsy in the use of his weapon, and his sixth toe crippled his gait. Behold the prostrate and malformed giant of the text: "A man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand and six on each foot; and he also was the son of a giant. But when he defied Israel, Jonathan, the son of Shimea, David's brother, slew him."

Behold how superfluities are a hindrance rather than a help! In all the battle at Gath that day there was not a man with ordinary hand and ordinary foot and ordinary stature that was not better off than this physical curiosity of my text. A dwarf on the right side is stronger than a giant on the wrong side, and all the body and mind and estate and opportunity that you can not use for God and the betterment of the world is a sixth finger and a sixth toe, and a terrible hindrance. The most of the good done in the world and the most of those who win the battles for the right, are ordinary people. Count the fingers of their right hand, and they have just five—no more and no less. One Dr. Duff among missionaries, but 5,000 missionaries that would tell you they have only one common endowment. One Florence Nightingale to nurse the sick in conspicuous places, but 10,000 women who are just as good nurses, though never heard of. The "Swamp Angel" was a big gun that during the civil war made a big noise, but muskets of ordinary caliber and shells of ordinary heft did the execution. President Tyler and his cabinet go down the Potomac one day to experiment with the "Peacemaker," a great iron gun that was to affright with its thunder foreign navies. The gunner touches it off, and it explodes, and leaves cabinet ministers dead on the deck, while at that time all up and down our coasts were cannon of ordinary bore, able to be the defense of the nation, and ready at the first touch to waken to duty. The curse of the world is big guns. After the politicians, who have made all the noise, go home hoarse from angry discussion on the evening of the first Monday in November, the next day the people, with the silent ballots, will settle everything, and settle it right, 1,000,000 of the white slips of paper they drop making about as much noise as the fall of an apple blossom.

Clear back in the country to-day where are mothers in plain aprons and dresses fashioned on a rough last by a hand as far at the end of the jane, rock-ribbed as the hills that are to be the Martin Luthers, and the Faradays, and the Edisons, and the Bismarcks, and the Gladstones, and the Washingtons, and the George Whitefields of the future. The longer I live the more I like common folks. They do the world's work, bearing the world's burdens, weeping the world's sympathies, carrying the world's consolation. Among lawyers we see rise up a Rufus Choate, or a William Wirt, or a Samuel L. Southard, but society would go to pieces to-morrow if there were not thousands of common lawyers to see that men and women get their rights. A Valentine Mott or a William Parker rises up eminent in the medical profession; but what an unlimited sweep would pneumonia and diphtheria and scarlet fever have in the world if it were not for 10,000 common doctors!

The old physician in his gig, driving up the lane of the farmhouse or riding on horseback, his medicines in the saddle bags, arriving on the ninth day of the fever, and coming in to take hold of the pulse of the patient, while the family, pale with anxiety, and looking on and waiting for his decision in regard to the patient and hearing him say: "Thank God, I have mastered the case; he is getting well!" excites in me an admiration quite equal to the mention of the names of the great metropolitan doctors of the past, or the illustrious living men of the present.

Yet what do we see in all departments? People not satisfied with ordinary spheres of work and ordinary duties. Instead of seeing what they can do with a hand of five fingers, they want six. Instead of usual endowment of 20 manual and pedal addenda, they want 24. A certain amount of money for livlihood, and for the supply of those whom we leave behind us after we have departed this life, is important, for we have the best authority for saying, "He that provideth not for his own, and especially those of his own household, is worse than an infidel;" but the large and fabulous sums for which many struggle, if obtained, would be a hindrance rather than an advantage.

The anxieties and annoyances of those whose estates have become pleothoric can only be told by those who possess them. It will be a good thing when, through your industry and prosperity, you can own the house in which you live. But suppose you own 50 honses, and you have all those rents to collect, and all those tenants to please. Suppose you have branched out in business successes until in almost every direction you have investments. The fire bells rings at night, you rush upstairs to look out of the window to see if it is any of your mills. Epidemic of crime comes, and there are embezzlements and absconding in all directions, and you wonder whether any of your bookkeepers will prove recreant. A panic strikes the financial world, and you are like a hen under a sky full of hawks, and trying with anxious cluck to get your overgrown chickens safely under wing. After a certain stage of success has been reached you have to trust so many important things to others that you are apt to become the prey of others, and you are swindled and defranded, and the anxiety you have on your brow when you were earning your first $1,000 is not equal to the anxiety on your brow now that you have won your $300,000,000.

The trouble with such a one is that he is spread out like the unfortunate one in my text. You have more fingers and toes than you know what to do with. Twenty were useful, 24 is a hindering superfluity. Disraeli says that a king of Poland abdicated his throne and joined the people, and became a porter to carry burdens. And some one asked him why he did so and he answered: "Upon my honor, gentlemen, the load which I cast off was by far heavier than the one you see me carry. The weightiest is but a straw when compared to that weight under which I labored. I have slept more in four nights than I have during all my reign. I begin to live and to be a king myself. Elect whom you choose. As for me, I am so well it would be madness to return to court."

"Well," says somebody "such overloaded persons ought to be pitied, for their worriment are real, and their insomnia and their nervous prostration are genuine." I reply that they could get rid of the bothersome surplus by giving it away. If a man has more houses than he can carry without vexation let him drop a few of them. If his estate is so great he can not manage it without getting nervons dyspepsia from having too much, let him divide with those who have nervous dyspepsia because they can not get enough. No! They guard their sixth finger with more care than they did the original five. They go limping with what they call gout, and know not that like the giant of my text they are lamed by a superfluous toe. A few of them by charities bless themselves of this financial obesity and monetary plethora, but many of them hang on to the hindering superfluity till death; and then, as they are compelled to give the money up anyhow, in their last will and testament they generously give some of it to the Lord, expecting, no doubt, that He will feel very much obliged to them.

Thank God that once in a while we have a Peter Cooper, who, owning an interest in the iron works at Trenton, said to Mr. Lester: "I do not feel quite easy about the amount we are making. Working under one of our patents we have a monopoly which seems to me something wrong. Everybody has to come to us for it, and we are making money too fast." So they reduced the price, and this while our philanthropist was building Cooper Institute, which mothers a hundred institutes of kindness and mercy all over the land. But the world had to wait 5,800 years for Peter Cooper.

I am glad for the benevolent institutions that get a legacy from men who, during their life, were as stingy as death, but whoin their last will and testament bestowed money on hospitals and missionary societies; but for such testators I have no respect. They would have taken every cent of it with them if they could, and bought up half of Heaven and let it out at ruinous rent, or loaned the money to celestial citizens at 2 per cent. a month, and got a corner on harps and trumpets. They lived in this world 50 or 60 years in the presence of appalling suffering and want, and made no efforts for their relief. The charities of such people are in the "Paulo-post future" tense; they are going to do them. The probability is that if such a one in his last will by a donation to benevolent societies tries to atone for his lifetime of close-fistedness, the heirs-at-law will try to break the will by proving that the old man was senile or oazy, and the expense of the litigation will about leave in the lawyer's hands what was meant for the Bible Society. O, ye overweighty, successful business men, whether this sermon reach your ear or your eyes, let me say that if you are prostrated with anxieties about keeping or investing these tremendons fortunes, I can tell you how you can do more to get your health back and your spirits raised than by drinking gallons of bad-tasting water at Saratoga, Homburg or Carlsbad. Give to God, humanity and the Bible ten per cent. of all your income, and it will make a new man of you, and from restless walking of the floor at night you shall have eight hours' sleep, without the help of bromide of potassinm, and from no appetite you will hardly be able to wait for your regular meals, and your wan cheek will fill up, and when you die the blessings of those whom but for you would have perished will bloom all over yon grave.

Perhaps some of you will take this advice, but the most of you will not. And you will try to cure your swollen hand by getting on it more fingers, and your rheumatic foot by getting on it more toes, and there will be sigh of relief when you are gone ont of the world, and when over your remains the minister recites the words: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," persons who have keen appreciation of the indicrous will hardly be able to keep their faces straight. But whether in that direction my words do good or not, I am anxious that all who have only ordinary equipment be thankful for what they have and rightly employ it. I thank you all have, figuratively as well as literally, fingers enough. Do not long for hindering superfluities. Standing in the presence of this fallen giant of my text, and in this post-mortem examination of him, let us learn how much better off we are with just the usual hand, the usual foot. You have thanked God for a thousand things, but I warrant you never thanked Him for those implements of work and locomotion, that no one but the Infinite and Omnipotent God could have ever planned or made the hand and the foot. Only the soldier or that mechanic who in a battle or through machinery has lost them knows anything adequately about their value, and only the Christian scientist can have any appreciation of what divine masterpieces they are.

Sir Charles Bell was so impressed with the wondrous construction of the human hand that when the earl of Bridgewater gave $40,000 for essays on the wisdom and goodness of God, and eight books were written. Sir Charles Bell wrote his entire book on the wisdom and goodness of God as displayed in the human hand. The 27 bones in the hand and wrist, with cartilages and ligaments and phalanges of the fingers all made just right to knit, to sew, to build up, to pull down, to weave, to write, to plow, to pound, to wheel, to battle, to give friendly salutation. The tips of the fingers are so many telegraph offices by reason of their sensitiveness to touch.

The bridges, the tunnels, the cities of the whole earth are the victories of the hand. The hands are not dumb, but often speak as distinctly as the lips. With our hands we invite, we repel, we invoke, we entreat, we wring them in grief, we clap them in joy, we spread them abroad in benediction. The malformation of the giant's hand in the text glorifies the usual hand, fashioned of God more exquisitely and wondrously than any human mechanism that was ever contrived. I charge you to use it for God and the lifting of the world out of its moral predicament. Employ it in the sublime work of Gospel hand-shaking. You can see the hand is just made for that. Four fingers just set right to touch your neighbor's hand on one side, and your thumb set so as to clinch it on the other side. By all its bones and joints and muscles and cartilages and ligaments the voice of nature joins with the voice of God commanding you to shake hands. The custom is as old as the Bible, anyhow. John said to Jehonadad: "Is thine heart right as my heart is with thine heart? If it be, give me thine hand." When hands join in Christian salutation a Gospel electricity thrills across the palm from heart to heart, and from the shoulder of one to the shoulder of the other.

With the timid and for their encouragement, shake hands. With the troubled in warm-hearted sympathy, shake hands. With the young man just entering business, and discouraged at the small sales and the large expenses, shake hands. With the child who is new from God and started on unending journey, for which he needs to gather great supply of strength, and who can hardly reach up to you now because you are so much taller, shake hands. Across cradles and dying beds, and graves, shake hands. With your enemies, who have done all to defame and hurt you, but whom you can afford to forgive, shake hands. At the door of the churches, where people come in, and at the door of churches where people go out shake hands. Let pulpit shake hands with pew, and Sabbath-day shake hands with week-day, and earth shake hands with Heaven. Oh, the strange, the mighty, the undefined, the mysterious, the eternal power of an honest handshaking!

TWAIN'S LAST TRIP AS PILOT.

He Ran the Boat Twenty-Five Miles Out of Her Course While Racing.

"About the only man that I ever knew to leave the river and go writing books," said the man at the wheel, directing his observations at the usual crowd that gathered about him in the pilot house, "was Sam Clemens. They say he's pretty rich now, but I understand he never runs across an old chum without swapping a few lies with him and paying for the drinks. Sam never got to be much of a pilot himself, but used to know all of them, and write them up in the papers better than anybody ever could. He was about as green a looking creature as ever come from Pike county, when he was on the old Blue Bird way back in the 50's, and to look at him you would have thought he wasn't worth sweeping up, but he could write then till you couldn't rest, and some of the funnlest things that ever was printed about the river were gotten up by Sam.

"The first thing that I remember of his, that set everybody talking and wondering who that boss yarn teller, Mark Twain, was, was that account about the great flood in the Mississippi, in early times, when the water was over every thing, and Vicksburg and Natchez were the only dry spots between Cairo and the gulf. At Orleans the boats landed along side of the top story of the St. Charles hotel. Well, of course, that was the boss flood and nobody could talk of old-time boating like that; and so Clemens got to be too big a mun to stay on the river, and, as I said, he quit and went to writing books. But he wasn't much of a pilot, anyhow. His mind didn't run that way, and when he was at the wheel he was always running over something and getting the boat into trouble.

"He would just as like as not go sound asleep on watch, and run the boat into the bank, head on, if you didn't keep a watch on him, and if there was a snag to be found he would go miles out of his way just to get a whack at it, and he was never happy unless he was bonneing something. Why, you would think he was getting the biggest kind of wages from the government to just clear the river of snags, if you'd see how he hustled them out of the way. But that wasn't the worst of it, for sometimes he would lose his bearing and get lost in side streams, and it would cost the captain half he would make on the trip to get back to the Mississippi.

"One day the old Blue Bird—that was the last boat he steered on—got to racing with the Yellow Hammer, a Wabash packet, and as the water was pretty high, Sam thought he would show off by running a chnte and coming out two or three miles ahead. Well, in he goes, full tilt, picking his way through the timber and keeping his eyes on the limbs that reached near to the chimneys, so as not to get them knocked overboard. The bird was just flying through the woods, and Sam he was a sweating like a bound boy at a husking. And the wheel! You just ought to have seen it spin; you'd have thought to look at Sam, that he was at last doing some diamond breastpin piloting. And I reckon for a spell he thought he was, but in about two hours the mate, he comes on deck, for, as it was the second watch, the captain was asleep, and says to Sam as how he thought the Bird was going to Memphis that trip.

"'That's where we're going,' says Sam, as soon as he could gather wind enough to speak.

"'Making a side run to Jacksonport, eh?' says the mate.

"'Haven't heard of it,' says Sam.

"'Haven't, eh?' said the mate, looking at him curious like.

"'No,' says Sam, pulling the wheel hard down, so as to bring the boat round a short turn.

"'Then what on earth are you doing in White river?' says the mate.

"'In White river?' says Sam, turning white about the gills, and shaking like he had a chill.

"'That's where we are,' says the mate, 'and you are 20 miles from the mouth at that.'

"'Oh, my!' says Sam. 'I thought I was in a chute.'

"'Well,' says the mate, 'you'd better turn this boat around and shoot out of here before the old man gets up or you'll be looking for a skiff to get back to the Mississippi. Do you hear me?'

"Then Sam he turns the Bird around, and hollers down to the engineer, 'Jack, if you love me, give her steam.'

"Well, the mate kind of liked Sam for his funny yarns, so he kept it all from the old man till the boat got back to Orleans, when Sam quit, and that was the last of his piloting."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Peach Fritters.

Made either with fresh or canned fruit. Lay the halves of ripe, tender peaches on a flat dish, sprinkle with sugar and let stand for an hour. Dip each piece separately in batter and cook to a golden brown in deep, boiling fat. The batter should be mixed several hours before it is needed. Batter—One-half cupful of cold water, well beaten yolks of two eggs; add to this gradually an even cupful of sifted flour, tablespoonful of olive oil. Beat vigorously for three minutes; just before using, add pinch of salt and the whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth.—Ladies' World.

Scrambled Tomatoes.

Two cupfuls of ripe or canned tomatoes, one cupful of fine bread crumbs, one large tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and sugar to taste. Put all together in a bowl. Place an iron spider upon the stove and let it get as hot as possible. Turn in the mixture (when the pan is hot) and stir for ten minutes. They can be put in a baking dish with crackers and a thin layer of cheese on top and baked. —N. Y. Ledger.

WORN-OUT MATERIAL.

Republicans Are Again Employing Old Methods in This Year's Campaign.

The republicans seem to have come to the conclusion that they cannot avoid taking notice of the fact that the democratic party stands squarely on the financial issue. So their mills have started up again for the purpose of putting out a goodly quantity of material of a character warranted to kill off silver sentiment at sight. But as this warrant is of the same kind that has been so frequently found defective, the takers of this latest grist will not be sure of its effects. The grist being ground by the mills is not new material, but is the same that was thoroughly ground two years ago. We cannot blame them for this, as the original material was very expensive, (they paid at the rate of $2,000 a night for some of it) and we cannot expect them to purchase any new opinions in an off year.

One of the mills in Indiana has started to grind out "open letters to Senator Turpie." These letters are not expected to reach Senator Turpie, but this is merely an artistic setting for the opinons to be set forth, it being hoped that the coupling of a great name with the literary venture will cause the psendo-epistles to be read. The writer in this case is R. S. Taylor. He rushes into print with some brandnew (?) ideas—they were new about 20 years ago.

One of the first fine thoughts of the gentleman is expressed in these words: "Inasmnch as we have had unlimited coinage of gold for 100 years and as no one is proposing any change in the law in that respect, this demand for the free and unlimited coinage of gold seems to be unnecessary." How delighted the gold standard men would be and how delighted the currency contractionists would be if the democrats would eliminate from their platform that clause. The gold standard man would then be able to assert that the silver men were waging war on gold as a money metal, and the currency contractionist would be able to hope that the silver men, once in the saddle, would assist in demonetizing gold, as was attempted in Europe about 1857. The contractionist does not care which metal is thrown out. The loss of either will secure the end he desires. But the democratic party is determined to make its position plain, and to demonstrate to the people that it is not fighting a money metal, but is fighting the base principle of contracting the currency of this growing nation. The man that would demonetize gold receives notice that if he attempts to carry out his scheme he need expect nothing but war from the party that is of and for the people.

Mr. Taylor reasserts the old sophistry that silver would at once drive gold "out." Out where, Mr. Taylor? Not out of the country surely, for that could be done only if the balance of trade were against us, and when the balance of trade is against us, the gold will go anyway. Not out of circulation, for some one must own the gold, and the holders of $650,000,000 of money cannot afford to have their property not earn them interest. The idea of money going out of circulation is a fairy tale. Gold did not go out of circulation even during the war, but was mightily active, paying customs duties and performing other duties that were legislated to specie. It was not found much then in the hands of the common people for the reason that there was too great a demand for it in fulfilling the special functions delegated to it by congress. It was not everywhere in evidence because it had been "detailed to special duty." But the congress that remonetizes silver will not "detail gold to any special duty" and will not confer extraordinary privileges upon it. Hence it will be found in the hands of all the people as usual. There is no "out" that it can go to and pay interest to its owners.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Republican newspapers are figuring what the republican majority will be in the next senate. Wait until the incubator finishes the job before you begin to count.—Kansas City Times.

——Mr. Hanna predicted that there would be no war, but he can console himself that it has afforded him an opportunity to run a competitive train against Bushnell's for hauling Ohio soldiers back home from camp hospitals for electioneering purposes.—St. Louis Republic.

——There are at least 50,000 democrats in Missouri who will be willing to walk ten miles to get a chance to kick the political life out of any candidate for governor or senator who stands for "paring" with the gold standard imperialism of the Hannacrats. They will do it, too!—Mississippi Valley Democrat.

——"Apparently the best satisfied man in the country is Nelson Dingley," says the Nashville American; "the war measure bill made it unnecessary to investigate the tariff bill." The hour of accounting is at hand, though. Mr. Dingley will be on the gridiron again when it comes to getting the revenue back to a peace basis.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Irritation over the prohibitory law in Vermont and overconfidence in Maine are good enough for any irresponsible commentator on the September elections. But the president cannot afford to be mistaken. If there is to be a series of republican disasters this fall, extending even to the loss of the house of representatives, the president will inevitably be held responsible. He is the head of his party and the only member of it in a position to do or refuse to do the things which may affect the vote of the whole country.—N. Y. Times.

AN EQUITABLE RATIO.

Bimetallists Favor the Coinage of More Money to Help Trade and Industry.

Bimetallists want more 100-cent dollars, and goldites fewer 100-cent dollars—the fewer the better for them. Bimetallists do not fix an unalterable ratio for the coinage of the metals; but demand that there be free coinage of both metals, and favor the existing ratio of sixteen to one, because it is has never been demonstrated that free coinage of both metals cannot be maintained at that ratio; but on the contrary it has been demonstrated by a record of 80 years in this country and in Europe that this is an equitable one.

It would be financial folly to advocate any other ratio under existing conditions; and the goldites know it. Hence they do not advocate any other ratio; but howl—to scare the people, and to prevent them from having all the money they ought to have—"50-cent dollars!" A ridiculous contradiction in terms, as they know it.

Bimetallists are willing to concede that ratios have been changed and may be again; but in order to ascertain what the ratio ought to be conditions must be such as to prevent discrimination between the metals; and these conditions the United States is powerful enough and rich enough to establish unaided by and independent of any European government. Before silver was demonetized in 1873, silver dollars were at a premium of from two to three cents above gold. That was under free coinage. Would it not be folly to change the ratio without some evidence that it is not equitable?

Bimetallists favor free coinage of silver and gold by the United States at the ratio of sixteen to one as the present ratio—a ratio that differs but little from the coinage ratios of the governments of Europe and other portions of the world. They favor this because the business of the world would be benefited by the infusion of more money into the channels of trade. Bimetallists do not want an inequitable ratio. If it is found that sixteen to one is an inequitable ratio after it has been tested, then it can be changed by increasing or diminishing it as may be necessary. But in all probability no change will be necessary.

Does the country need more dollars? Then coin them out of silver and gold. The more the merrier. We don't want dollars based on bonds, but dollars that have the genuine metallic ring to them, and that the tax payers do not have to pay double interest on —interest not only to the banks but to the bondholders. — Illinois State Register.

UNITED DEMOCRACY.

The Party Still Stands by the Declarations Made in the Struggle of 1896.

The democratic party was never more a unit in purpose and work than it is at the present time. It was united on the question of freedom for Cuba; it was united on demanding that retribution be administered to her for the sinking of the Maine and the murder of 266 American seamen. It stood united in favor of the most vigorous policy in the prosecution of the war and to the extent that the national administration has carried out the will of the people, has been and is as united in its support as is the republican party. The democratic party is united upon the principles of the Chicago platform. The issues upon which the party battled for victory but which met with temporary defeat in 1896, are still alive and are the issues of 1898-99 and 1900.

No scheme of government and no principle which fails to recognize the interests of the toiling masses can be enduring in this country. The democratic party still stands by the principle that would abolish government by injunction. The democratic party still believes that our system of currency and the unequal coinage of gold and silver at our mints are crying wrongs for which there must be redress before this country will see lasting and substantial prosperity. The democratic party is united on the tariff question. The Dingley bill is a revenue destroyer, a labor paralyzer, destructive to American industry and is honeycombed with glaring favoritism to trusts and monopolies as against the men who toil and sweat in workshops, in factory and upon the farm.

The democratic party will go on fighting as in the past for human right, for justice and equality and neither the fever of war nor the temporary vaporings of those who discourse with vagueness "our new responsibilities" or of "the duties providentially laid upon us" will detract from the main issue. The greatest reforms of the future will be accomplished in dealing with our domestic affairs and in handling them properly and we need not lose sight either of maintaining our relations with the rest of the world.

Glut in the Treasury.

Three hundred millions of dollars are now locked up in the treasury. There are only $346,000,000 of greenbacks in existence. Thus a sum amounting to seven-eighths of the standard paper currency of the country is withdrawn from the uses of the people at that time of year when money is most pressingly needed for active circulation. With the national treasury full to repletion the people cannot get money enough for the transaction of their ordinary business. And for what they do get the money lenders are charging them an extortionate interest. This is one of the effects of the single gold standard. How do the business men and wage-earners and farmers of the country like it? It suits the bondholders and shylocks. —N. Y. World.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS

SHEEP, BARN AND RACK.

A Convenient Structure—Is Large Enough to Accommodate from 50 to 75 Animals.

I should build not less than 20 by 30 feet and 16 feet high. This height is perhaps greater than would be needed for mere coarse feed for the number of sheep named, but an extra two or three feet in height costs very little and I like that the vast majority of barns are too small. I have never known one that was too large.

[illegible] for required to frame a barn of [illegible] will be no greater than for a [illegible]. No purline plates will be needed, but one interior bent. Use plank or square timber for the frame; address self for this will be reduced neatly. Dress for the posts use two 2x6 8-ft. pieces, using timbers of the same dimensions for the joist bearers. Slip the ends of the joist bearers between the two pieces making the post, thus you have a mor-tise and tenon made without auger or chisel. Use two 2 by 8 sticks for plates spiked together, as in making a V-shaped trough.

Instead of the short braces, such as are commonly used in heavy timber frames, make the plate braces extend from the foot of the posts and spike to each nailing girt. This strengthens greatly the entire structure. Use three pieces 2 by 8 at each bent for joist bearers. Bolt and spike one to either side of the posts. The nailing girts for the siding, supposing it to be put on up and down, are spiked to the outside of the posts; 2 by 4-inch are strong enough for these. I append a list of the timber needed for the frame. Local conditions may determine the kind of a roof and the kind of siding used.

Have two 8-feet doorways at either end for convenience in hauling out manure. Have three double windows on either side. Place the sash beside each other instead of one above the other. Fasten them with spring bolts so that they can be revolved to admit of ventilation without admitting rain or snow.

Place a double rack through the middle lengthwise, thus dividing the barn into two stables. If additional feeding room is needed place racks along the wall. Take hay in at one end by hand. Just in front of the door at which hay is taken in have a trap door in the floor through which hay may be thrown to the rack below. I append a drawing of the rack I use, a rack that is almost ideal. In the double racks, we walk in them when distributing grain. This is done while the racks closed, so that all the sheep are let at their grain at once. Grain, ensilage, roots, cut fodder and hay may all be fed in this rack without waste or danger of getting any of the feed in the wool.

The cut above shows an end view of the rack with all the crossboards left off as it is open for the sheep to feed. The dotted lines show the way the wings revolve and the position they take when the rack is closed. Use boards a foot wide for the bottoms of the troughs, also for the one joining the troughs and for the wings. Use 6-inch ones for the sides, making the troughs 5 inches deep. Make bottom of trough 11 inches above foot of posts. Make racks just long enough to fill the spaces designed for them, in this case about 14 feet. For this length of rack I use middle posts. Two-inch square stuff is large enough for posts, and even lighter will do for the arms of the wings. Fasten the wings on with bolts. A wall rack I make just two-thirds as wide, leaving off one trough and wing. Framing lumber for barn: 15 2 by 8-inch 16 feet long, 34 2 by 8-inch, 15 feet long, 12 2 by 4-inch, 17 feet long, 10 2 by 8-inch, 20 feet, 12 2 by 4-inch, 15 feet, 49 2 by 4-inch, 14 feet. This includes joists, supposing that a tight floor is to be put under hay mow. Use strap hinges for the doors and cut at least one of each pair of doors in two.—H. P. Miller, in Farm and Home.

WHEAT AFTER CORN.

Good Rotation Where Proper Pains Are Taken in the Preparation of the Ground.

When a regular system of rotation is carried out with the different crops it may be necessary to have wheat follow corn. This is a very good plan where proper pains are taken in preparation of the soil.

The corn should be cut off as soon as a sufficient maturity has been reached. If the weather is dry and the fodder is put up in reasonably small shocks it can be cut as soon as the grain begins to harden well, or a part of the shock can be cut and put up and allowed to dry, partly at least, before putting up a full shock. One advantage in putting up in small shocks is that the corn will dry out quicker and can be shocked and cribbed earlier than if in large shocks. But when the land is to be sown to wheat, it is generally best to put up the corn in good-sized shocks in order to save room.

With a good corn harvester it is not so much work to put up the corn in good-sized shocks as when it is done by hand. It is always an item to cut the corn reasonably close to the ground, as the corn in the shocks is less liable to be injured. Then the stalk stubs will not interfere so much with the work of preparing the soil as when the stalks are cut off high.

When thorough cultivation has been given the corn during growth, so that the weeds have been kept down and the soil is in good tilth, one of the best ways of preparing the soil for wheat is to go over it carefully with disk harrow, cutting about four inches deep; then fine and level the surface with a good smoothing harrow. In most cases this is all the work necessary and the soil is ready for the drill.

One of the objections to sowing wheat after corn is that the plowing must be done late and the soil is left too loose and mellow, too deep and the wheat plants freeze out badly.

When the drill is used on a loose, loamy soil, in many cases a thorough harrowing that will fine and level the surface, leaving the under soil undisturbed, is all that is necessary to fit the ground for the seed.

In all cases it will pay, however, to harrow, and if necessary roll and drag the ground until three or four inches of the surface is thoroughly prepared.

With wheat as with all other crops, thorough preparation of the soil before seeding is essential to good germination and a good start to grow. By cutting the corn early—as soon as it is sufficiently matured the better—opportunity is given for preparing the land in good tilth and of sowing the seed in good season.—St. Louis Republic.

SLOP FOR THE PIGS.

It Is Quite a Neat Job to Prepare It Quickly and in the Proper Proportions.

Feed for winter pigs should be in the form of slop. House slops are excellent. The best preparation for slop from the ordinary feed is a mixture of ground corn, oats and linseed meal. Grind two bushels of corn with one of oats and add 20 pounds of linseed meal for every 150 pounds of the mixture of corn and oats. Soak the mixture as long as possible without souring. It is a mistake to feed half-soaked feed. The object of soaking feed is to make it more palatable and digestible. Grinding the feed is an imitation of mastication, therefore, the finer it is ground the better the imitation, and soaking the feed is an imitation of digestion. The soaked feed should not be so thick as to be lumpy, neither should it be thin enough to be watery. It should not be so watery that water will gather on the top of a pailful after standing awhile; nor so thick as to "stand up" when thrown in the trough. It is a neat job to make a nice barrel of slop from ground feed; and much of the success in its use depends upon its proper preparation. Clean troughs regularly in feeding and plenty of trough room are things very essential to successful pig feeding. We have been able to produce 17.4 pounds of growth for every equivalent of a bushel of corn, by following the above methods. This, of course, cannot be done with the runty pig.—D. A. Kent, in Prairie Farmer.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Pounded oyster shells are good for hens.

Corn meal and kitchen scraps make a good feed for ducks.

It is always best to darken the place where the nests are arranged.

The faster the turkeys are made to grow the more profitable they may be made.

The profit and rapid development of chickens depends largely on the start they get.

Reduce the winter stock of poultry as much as possible to layers. They will pay their way and leave a profit.

The earliest maturing fowl of the large breeds is the Langshan, which begins to lay when seven months old.

Minorcas, leghorns and black Spanish are the three breeds that are preeminently valuable for egg production.—St. Louis Republic.

Polishing Horns and Hoofs.

Soak horns in warm water till pith or core can be removed; this also softens horns, making them more easily worked. Smooth by rasping, scraping and sandpapering, using fine emery paper last. To polish, rub with cloth moistened with linseed oil dipped in tripoli, finally rubbing with the hand. The horns may be more easily handled by inserting a stick fastened with a screw through the horn and held in a vise. Hoofs may be polished in the same way, making neat match safes.—Country Gentleman.

AN AUTUMN IDYL.

In Which Is Depicted Somewhat of the Sorrowfulness of the Expiring Year.

A great wave of perspiration had swept up from the briny depths of the sea of humanity, and on its white-capped top the month of August had taken passage to the shoreless realms of eternity.

Tip-tilted on the petals of the blooming melancholy days of poesy and song, September in her golden glory stood, and from her harvest finger ends threw ripening kisses to the world.

There was no sadness in her eyes, and in her voice was only the music of rich, ripe fruit falling to the ground.

As she swept along on the crimson tide of her leafy glory, a simple Oyster crossed her path.

In his face was the shadow of Fate.

His requiem was sounding in the key of R.

September saw him, but she wot not what he was to her, nor she to him. She nodded at him smilingly.

"Good morrow, Master Lowly," she sang. "Look upon me, I prithee. Am I not indeed in it?"

The Oyster was amazed.

"I beg your pardon," he answered, though he knew full well what she had said.

"Dearie me, Master Lowly," she chirruped, "do but look at me. Am I not in it?"

"Do you me— the soup?" lugubriously inquired the Oyster.

"No, indeed. Why should I?" laughed the warm September. "I mean the Autumn, of course, stupid."

Then the Oyster sighed as if his shell would break, and he wondered why one could be so heartless as to jest upon such a serious subject.—Washington Star.

FELL FROM A SCAFFOLD.

From the Herald, Watertown, N. Y.

John Young, of Le Roy, N. Y., is 72 years old, and is well known in that and neighboring towns. While putting some weather boards on a barn, standing on a scaffold twenty-two feet from the ground, he felt dizzy, lost his balance and fell to the ground. The side of his face, arm and one entire side of his body, on which he struck, were badly bruised. Picked up and carried to the house, he was under a doctor's care for several weeks. The doctor finally came to the conclusion that his patient had received a stroke of paralysis and was beyond medical aid. He could not use one arm, or turn over in bed.

One day, while lying on the bed, he read of a case something like his having been cured with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He coaxed his granddaughter to get him a box of the pills. After that box had been used he secured another. In three weeks he began to feel a little life in his arm; at the end of four he could move his fingers; at the end of two months he could walk, and in three months he could shave himself with the injured hand.

As he told his story in the Herald office, he looked the perfect picture of health. He carries a box of the pills in his pocket, and whenever he does not feel just right, he takes them. They cured him after doctors had given him up, and his death was daily expected.

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves are contained, in a condensed form, in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female.

PRACTICAL KINDNESS.

One Hundred Thousand Grateful Soldiers.

These war times have tried men's souls in many unexpected ways, but like a shaft of sunshine and good cheer out of the cloud of privation and endurance has been the work that The American Tobacco Co. has done among the U. S. Soldiers and Sailors ever since the war began—for when they discovered that the camps and hospitals were not supplied with tobacco they decided to provide them, free of cost, with enough for every man, and have already given outright to our Soldiers and Sailors over one hundred thousand pounds of "Battle Ax Plug" and "Duke's Mixture" Smoking Tobacco, and have bought and distributed fifty thousand briar wood pipes, at a total cost of between fifty and sixty thousand dollars.

This work has been done quietly and thoroughly, by establishing headquarters in each camp, so that every camp and every hospital of the United States Army has been supplied with enough tobacco for every man and for sailors on thirty United States Ships in Cuban waters have shared with the soldiers this most welcome of all "rations."

Perhaps it will be only fair to remember when we hear the remark again that "corporations have no souls," that there is one American corporation whose soul has been tried and has not been found wanting in "practical kindness."

Tickets.

When a manufacturer has succeeded in making his name a guarantee of the excellence of his goods he has reached the highest point attainable in the commercial world. As an example the name of Wm. Simpson & Sons on any fabric is a guarantee of the highest standard of quality, color and finish. Every piece of their goods bears a ticket on which appears the name William Simpson & Sons. This insures the quality. Dealers who have sold and women who have bought and worn the material made by that house are assured of the excellence of every piece of goods which bears the name, and the women of the United States who have worn Simpson's prints as long as they can remember are still wearing them and will naturally insist upon having the goods bearing that particular name on the ticket because they give the most perfect satisfaction.

BREAD, POTATOES and MILK.

A Dyspeptic's daily diet.

Dyspepsia is one of the most prevalent of diseases. Thousands of people suffer from it in a more or less aggravated form. Few diseases are more painful to the individual or more far reaching in their effects on human life and happiness. What the dyspeptic needs is not local treatment, not mere temporary stimulus. The real seat is the lining up of the entire system. Fortify the system and it will do its own fighting, and promptly eject any intruding disease. The success of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla in curing indigestion and dyspepsia is due to just this quality which it possesses, of renewing the vital forces, repairing the waste and loss of the body. The ordinary treatment brings the food down to the level of the weak stomach. Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla puts strength into the stomach, and brings it up to the level of the strong food fit for men. It does this by strengthening the entire system. The stomach cannot stay weak when all the other organs are gaining strength. What Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla will do for dyspepsia is best illustrated in cases like that of M. S. Shields, Meridian, Miss. Mr. Shields had got down to the last level of dyspepsia. But let him tell his own story:—

"For years, I was afflicted with dyspepsia which grew worse until I could eat nothing but bread and potatoes seasoned with a little salt, and drink only a little milk. I became so bad that a trifle too much of even these caused terrible suffering in the regions of the stomach, darting pains back of the eyes, attended with dizziness and partial loss of sight. The only way I could get relief was by vomiting. Finally I had such a severe attack that the entire left side of my body felt numb and partially paralyzed, and in this condition I was taken to my room unconscious. The physicians failed to help me, and none of the many remedies I took did me any good. At last a friend presented me with a bottle of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla and before I had used half of it, I could see a decided change for the better. I used three bottles and was so completely cured that for four years I have not been troubled with the old complaint, but am rugged and hearty and able to eat anything that can be eaten. It would be impossible to say too much in praise of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and I would not give one bottle of it for a dozen of any other kind."—M. S. Shields, Meridian, Miss.

Try Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla if you are dyspeptic. If you want more testimony to the value of the medicine, get Dr. Ayer's Curebook. It is sent free on request by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell.

WHAT THEY EXPECT.

An Instance of the Unreasonable Expectations of Some New Women.

She was a new woman and was rather proud of the fact that she had a place in the world of business that enabled her to regard herself as being on an equality with man. But there was one thing that annoyed her.

"I go down on the car early every morning," she said, "with a young man who lives a little farther out than I do, and I don't mind saying that he doesn't know what courtesy and gentlemanliness is."

"What does he do?" inquired her big brother, who doesn't think very much of new women, anyway, and is consequently opposed to his sister being in the world of business.

"It isn't what he does," she replied; "it's what he doesn't do. Time and again he has let me stand up all the way downtown, when it would seem as if the very least he could have done was to get up and offer me his seat."

"That is wrong, isn't it?" returned the big brother.

"It's contemptible selfishness; that's what it is," she answered.

"The fact that he is in possession of a seat," went on the big brother, "of course does not entitle him to it if a fellow clerk of the opposite sex happens to want it. And yet men in business will do those things. Why, I know a girl who has twice the grievance you have in that line."

"What's happened to her?" she asked.

"Man there first and refused to give up when she came along," he explained.

"Give up his seat?"

"No; give up his job. She has discovered that it would just about suit her, but the next big bottle of a man hasn't chivalry and courtesy enough to get up from his desk, bow politely and say: 'Madam, permit me to offer you my job.' Actually, he just hangs right on to it himself and lets her go hunting round for something to do. Most ungentlemanly, isn't it? But, do you know, I think the old-fashioned courtesy is—"

However, she did not wait to hear about that. She merely said he was a mean thing and didn't understand what was due to a lady at all. And he himself admits that constantly changing conditions make it mighty hard to find out.—Chicago Post.

A SMALL BOY'S SCHEME.

He Had an Idea About What Which Promised a Splendid Result to His Mind.

A small boy who is not familiar with rural ways was taken by his fond mamma for a brief stay in the country.

On a farm in a neighboring county he waxed fat and sunburnt, and picked up a wondrous store of astonishing experiences.

One day the farmer smilingly said to his mother:

"Just ask your boy what he hid two eggs in the stable for?"

So the very first opportunity the mother said to the six-year-old:

"My dear, what did you do with those eggs you took from the hen house?"

"Oh, mamma," replied the boy, "I didn't want you to know about it."

"Why, it's all right," said mamma, "I only want to know what my boy did with them."

"I hid them in the stable," said the little fellow.

"And what for?"

"'Cause it's my scheme."

"Your scheme? And what is your scheme?"

"Why, you see, mamma," said the little philosopher, "when eggs is borned in a chicken house they is always little chickens, an' I fink if they was borned in a stable dey might be little horses!"

It is needless to add that up to the time of his leaving the farm the miracle was still unaccomplished.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

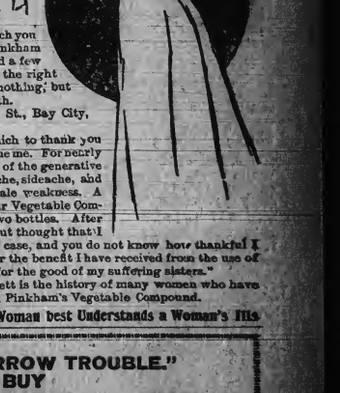
Two Different Views.

She was a charming young lady and naturally had many admirers of the so-called stronger sex. One evening one of them called and the conversation chanced to drift toward another.

"I think Mr. Davis is quite an intellectual young man," she observed.

"Oh, yon do," sneered the other.

"Why, yes," she replied. "It seems to me that he is a very hard thinker on many important subjects."



"Well, now that I come to consider it," retorted the undaunted rival of Mr. Davis, "I believe you are right. I never knew a man who thought with so much difficulty."—Chicago Evening News.

MANY FEMALE ILLS RESULT FROM NEGLECT.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks May Produce Displacements That Threaten Women's Health.

Apparently trifling incidents in women's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slipon the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks, may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started.

The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. Mary Bennett, 314 Annie St., Bay City, Mich., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can hardly find words with which to thank you for the good your remedies have done me. For nearly four years I suffered with weakness of the generative organs, continual backache, headache, sideache, and all the pains that accompany female weakness. A friend told my husband about your Vegetable Compound and he brought me home two bottles. After taking these I felt much better, but thought that I would write to you in regard to my case, and you do not know how thankful I am to you for your advice and for the benefit I have received from the use of your medicine. I write this letter for the good of my suffering sisters."

The above letter from Mrs. Bennett is the history of many women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Thursday morning during the heavy rain two traveling umbrella menders while coming toward town on the Warsaw and Sparta pike found an old man about 60 years old lying on the ground at the bridge near town in an exhausted and almost drowned condition. They carried him in a barn and came to town and informed the authorities who drove out in a wagon and brought him in. He was placed in jail, where he was fed and his clothes dried. He gave his name as Green and stated he was from Boone county where he had wroked at farming. He stated he was sick and unable to work, and was sent to the Poor House, where he will be given a home.

FOR ALL WOMEN

NINE-TENTHS of all the pain and sickness from which women suffer is caused by weakness or derangement in the organs of menstruation. Nearly always when a woman is not well these organs are affected. But when they are strong and healthy a woman is very seldom sick.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

Is nature's provision for the regulation of the menstrual function. It cures all "female troubles." It is equally effective for the girl in her teens, the young wife with domestic and maternal cares, and the woman approaching the period known as the "Change of Life." They all need it. They are all benefitted by it.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

THOS. J. COOPER, Tupelo, Miss., says: "My sister suffered from very irregular and painful menstruation and doctors could not relieve her. Wine of Cardui entirely cured her and also helped my mother through the Change of Life."

RUPTURE
You may not know it but we are the largest manufacturers of Trusses, Supporters, etc., in the United States and in your home city, where you can call and see us at your own convenience. We have in our long experience in Fitting Trusses, reduced it to a science. Most people who are ruptured do not recognize the necessity of having a properly fitted Truss. For instance: one of your family is very ill. You go to your physician, and say, I am and so is ill, and what would you recommend? The physician says, I must see the case before I can tell what would be best for him. And so is the same way with a person who is ruptured. We do not know what a Truss to apply until we examine the hernia. If you will consult us in person or by mail, we will put you in a way to get a permanent cure. Consultation and advice free. Write us and we will be of benefit to you.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1898. NO. 40

ROOSEVELT won his gubernatorial nomination at the battle of San Juan.

THE Louisville Republicans will invoke the courts to adjust their party differences before the November election.

THE Italians believe that Vesuvious has a very large job ahead of her. They claim that her fire is to, ultimately, destroy the world.

HON. EVAN SETTLE, of Owenton, was forced to decline an invitation to deliver an address before the Texas State Fair at Dallas, October 14.

WHEN the Democrats of this district name their candidate next Saturday, the party will have all its Congressional candidates in the field in Kentucky.

THE Williamstown Courier came out last week in a reduced form, and is now the size of the RECORDER. Bro. Westover has stuck the proper size for his field.

THE richest quartz lead in Alaska was struck, recently, by an Ohio man. It is said to run $80 000 to the ton. Ohio men have a very convenient way of being benefitted by most all the large finds of the age.

A GERMAN biologist says that the two sides of a face are never alike. In two cases out of five the eyes are out of line; one is stronger than the other in seven persons out of ten, and the right eye is generally higher than the left.

SEVERAL of the members of the Cabinet are going to take the stump this fall. Such an unusal proceedings in politics indicates that the g. o. p. is not altogether satisfied with the present political outlook, and anticipates a hard fight.

THOMAS F. BAYARD died at the summer residence of his daughter in Massachusetts, on the 28th inst. In his death the name of Bayard disappears from national politics, he being the last of four great statesmen by that name in a direct line of descent.

OF the $10,000 necessary to purchase a creditable silver service for the battle-ship Kentucky, only $196,35 had been raised last Thursday, when the Louisville people took the matter in hand, and will make a strong effort to raise the amount required.

CORBETT and McCoy met in a New York hotel, last week, and engaged in a rough and tumble fist fight, in which McCoy bested his adversary. McCoy got in a knee punch below the belt, and doubled Corbett up in fine shape. He had to be taken to his room in a cab.

AN hour's visit of Gen. Miles to Col. Bryan's room in Washington, last week, put all the politicians to guessing. They are very much inclined to attach some political significance to the call. They think an hour was entirely too long for these gentlemen to be closeted, and no reference be made to politics.

MURAT HALSTEAD, who returned last week from a visit to Manilla, says there is no danger of a war with the Philippine insurgents if the United States proceeds firmly and peacefully with them. Mr. Halstead made a close study of the Philippine question, and advocates American control of the islands.

TEDDY ROOSEVELT had no trouble in landing the Republican nomination for Governor of New York. Upon the assemblying of the delegates it was apparent that Teddy was the only one in it. Black's administration was endorsed by the convention which told him by its action, that it had no further use for him as the chief executive of the State.

P. WAT HARDIN says he will announce his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor now in a few days, and ex-Governor John Young Brown declares he will make the contest warm for somebody. Just now the indications are that the next contest for the gubernatorial nomination will be one of unusual interest in the Democratic party in this State.

THE American and Spanish peace commissioners have begun business. Their first session was held Saturday, at which only preliminaries were discussed. The Spanish commissioners are in the house of their friends when in Paris, which may add considerably to their ignorance of the magnitude of the threshing Uncle Sam has so recently given them.

NEARLY three thousand carpet weavers were thrown out of employment, the other day, at Philadelphia, by the shutting down of an Ingrain Carpet weaving establishment.

CONGRESSMAN BERRY is endeavoring to have the Fourth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, located at Camp Wetherill, formerly occupied by the Sixth Infantry, but has received no assurance that the transfer will be made.

POSTMASTER BAKER, of Louisville, was in Washington, last week, explaining to the high muck-a-mucks there why several of the boys in the trenches in his section of the country ought to be admitted to the pie counter. Mr. Baker is one of those Republicans who considers that to the victors belong the spoils. The jolly p. m. is right, too.

THE Republic of Manilla has been inaugurated by Aguinaldo, the insurgent commander, and he expects it to be recognized by some of the European powers. The Philippines are a very desirable possession it appears, and there are prospects of considerable trouble before their ownership is finally settled. American diplomats will be given ample opportunity to try their skill and ability.

THE recently completed school census of Chicago shows that in one block in the Sixteenth ward there are but seven American born residents out of a total of 2,727, the majority being Poles. In another block there are 2,583 Poles out of a total population of 2,584, the other man being a Chinaman. The total population of the city is estimated at 1,851,588, which figures would indicate a growth of over 70 per cent. since 1890.

THE number of deaths in Mantanzas, Cuba, from January 1, 1897, to September 1, 1898, is said to have been 10,076. Mantanzas is one of the points at which Weyler had assembled twenty-five thousand reconcentrados without any arrangements for feeding them, and starvation and disease held high carnival among the unfortunates. Of the few who survived the reign of terror, the American supply ship which arrived there last week found the greater part about ready to go the way of their thousands of companions in suffering. The condition at Mantanzas was appauling.

THERE has been another eruption among State officials at Frankfort. Commissioner of Agriculture Moore and his assistant, Faulkner, are the official dignitaries who are now involved in a quarrel, which has resulted in the resignation of Faulkner, and his demand of Moore to return to him the sum of $300, which he alleges he advanced to assist Moore in securing the Commissionership. Faulkner charges Moore with trying to control him politically, and says when he discovered he could not do this he had no further use for him. There has been "a wow and wumpus" on among the Republicans who occupy Capital square at Frankfort ever since they gained possession.

ONE of the Montana postmasters failed to send in his monthly money order report, and was taken to task by the Postoffice Department at Washington, when he wrote the following letter to the Washington authorities as explanatory of his official dereliction:

"My Very Dear Sir: I beg to say that I have been getting married. I have one of the most beautiful and charming women on earth, and if you don't believe it I will send you her photograph. If you were never married try it at once, and I believe you will be ready to excuse any one in a like condition for anything possible."

He was excused.

COL. BERRY has succeeded in getting County Attorney Robert Wood, of Gallatin county, a thirty days' furlough with the promise of its extention. Mr. Wood is a private and his company is at Ponce, Porto Rico. He enlisted to fight and does not desire to neglect his public business in order to do only camp duty. He left a wife and babe, the latter four months old, to go into the service. State Senator, R. B. Brown, has been doing the legal business of the county during his absence and turning the fees and salary over to the family of Mr. Wood. When the case was laid before Secretary Meiklejohn that official said he saw no reason why Mr. Wood should not return and he therefore granted him a furlough of 30 days, with the understanding that at that time his discharge would be granted.

THE silver Democrats, or at least a portion of them bolted the New York Democratic convention held last week, because the convention refused to endorse the Chicago platform. Both sides of the money question were ignored, and the bolters ought to have accepted the compromise.

GARCIA, the Cuban General who took umbrage at the treatment he received from Gen. Shafter, the surrender of Santiago, has dropped into an annexationist. He has great influence among his people and will contribute much to the growth of the annexation spirit if he turn his efforts in that direction.

THE first meeting of the American and Spanish peace commissioners was at a breakfast prepared especially for them. If they dispose of the Philippines in the same pleasant manner in which the breakfast was dispatched, the commission will deserve to go into history as the eighth wonder of the world.

THE local option election was held in Canada, one day last week, and when the votes were counted the whisky men discovered that they were not in it a little bit. They were overwhelmed in every province save one, the majorities against the sale of whisky running from 6,000 to 14,000 in the provinces.

The Lexington Gazette says, the other day Ike Gess brought into our office a sweet potato that measured three feet eight and one-half inches, and after our visitors are done wondering over it we intend to build a fire in the park and put one end in the fire and take a seat on the other, to verify the tale the old pioneers used to tell.

JUDGE TARVIN'S decision in the habeas-corpus case of Thomas Cambron, the pool-room employe whom Judge Pence had fined, leaves the latter in the position of not knowing when he has tried and fined a fellow. Pence did know that he had tried and fined Cambron and so testified. There are a great many strange occurrences in courts these days.

THE platform adopted by the New York Democrats says: "If the affidavits and official statements of the Republican candidate for Governor are true he is inelligible to the office of Governor; if false, he has committed perjury and is morally disqualified. He can not escape from his dilemma—there is either legal disqualification or moral unfitness."

FOREST FIRES were very destructive in Idaho during the month of September. Large areas of timber at the headwaters of streams were destroyed, which is very damaging to the systems of irrigation upon which the existence of vegetation depended in a very extensive and productive territory. These forests retained, for many months, the snow along the mountain streams, supplying the water necessary for irrigating purposes. The destruction of these forests so reduces the water supply as to imperil the crops depending on an artificial supply moisture. It is believed that the fires were started by the Indians for malicious purposes.

AFTER so long Blanco has begun to prepare to leave Havana, and has ordered the mobilization of the Spanish troops at several Cuban ports for embarkation. His army equipments are to be sold, and all the political prisoners on that part of the island under his control are to be released. He has taken his time for this, but in a few more weeks Spanish rule in Cuba will be a thing of the past, and the people there will be given a chance to see how well they can govern themselves, unless the annexation policy, which seems to be growing rapidly, becomes so overwhelming that the annexation of Cuba will be the proper thing for the United States to do.

THAT there will be an extra session of the next Congress next spring is the opinion of many, because it is doubtful whether it will be possible to get all necessary legislation put through during the short session of the present Congress, but it is not true that the Democratic leaders intend to try to force an extra session, if they elect a majority of the next House. On the contrary, it is the desire of the Democratic leaders to avoid an extra session of Congress.

Mr. Wanamaker is taking the trouble to read letters to Mathew S. Quay, showing the Boss attempted to bribe conferees and delegates with promises of office. POLITICAL.

The anti-Evans Republicans in Louisville have nominated J. H. Hambrick for Congress.

A. G. Simpson, of Albany, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Treasurer.

Judges Tye and Boreing are meeting in joint debate in the county seats in the Eleventh district, the speakings being well attended at all the towns.

W. T. Fowler, Republican candidate for Congress, in the Owensboro district, refuses the proposition of Geo. W. Jolly to resubmit their claims for the nomination to county and district conventions.

Rev. Dr. J. H. Young, who went from Louisville to Baltimore, has been transferred to St. Louis, and will probably become pastor of Lafayette Park Church. He was formerly a member of the Kentucky Conference of the M. E. Church South.

Now that it has developed that Teddy Roosevelt swore he wasn't a resident of New York for the purpose of escaping the payment of taxes, he may expect to receive the support of the taxdodgers of the metropolis, which, if statistics are not deceiving, should land him in the gubernatorial chair.—Milwaukee News.

THE New York Democrats in convention at Syracuse nominated Augustus Van Wyck for Governor and named a full State ticket. The resolutions adopted deal with only State issues and ignore the money question.

There were sucking mules galore in town Monday. There were 300 of the long eared horse kingdom and every farmer was anxious to sell. The buyers were also numerous, but the prices offered and paid were very small, ranging from $12½ to $55, and the highest was an extraordinary individual. Most of the sales run about $20. A great many of the farmers wouldn't listen to prices and took their colts back home.

F. M. Boyle, who has been with the Second Kentucky at Chickamauga was in town last Friday. Frank had a pretty tough time down there being sick 25 days and was one of the fellows who laid on a cot in the rain, waiting for a railroad train. He says there was too much politics in the army, too many incompetents put in position by reason of official pull. He describes the fever hospital down there as something terrible. He also intimates that there were a great number in the ranks who were there simply for the money that was in it.

The Richmond Register reports the sale by John D. Harris of 200 export cattle weight 1,550 pounds, to Schwartzchild & Co., of New York, at $4 75. Milton Covington sold thirty to same buyer at $4 60.

Pursuant to the call of the Boone county Democratic Executive Committee, a mass meeting of the Democrats was held in Burlington, last Saturday to select 12 delegates to attend the District Congressional Convention to be held in Newport, October 8, 1898.

The meeting was called to order by D. E. Castleman, chairman of the executive committee, who stated the object of the meeting and J. M. Lassing was chosen chairman and W. L. Riddell, secretary.

On motion of David Haley the chairman was instructed to appoint a committee of three to select 12 delegates and alternates to the district convention, and the chair appointed the following committee: David Haley, M. E. Hance and C. C. Roberts.

The committee reported the following list of delegates and alternates:

Delegates.	Alternates.
W. W. Grimsley,	M. E. Hance,
B. B. Allphin, jr.,	G. W. Sleet,
Geo. W. Roberts,	J. G. Kennedy,
T. F. Curley.	David Haley,
W. H. Baker,	B. A. Dulaney,
O. S. Watts,	J. W. Berkshire,
J. W. Kennedy,	J. W. Conner,
J. G. Furnish,	O. J. Ryle,
Chas. Schramm,	M. F. Wingate,
D. E. Castleman,	J. P. Ryle,
R. A. Brady,	J. N. Pearson,
B. W. Adams.	J. S. Clutterbuck.

On motion of Dr. Furnish the delegates were instructed to use all honorable means to secure for David Haley the position of sargent-at-arms of the district convention.

O. S. Watts offered the following resolutions which were adopted.

Resolved—

1st. That we, the Democrats of Boone county, in Mass Meeting assembled, reaffirm our faith in the principles of our party as set forth in the late national platform.

2d. That we believe it unwise, and, therefore, we are unalterably opposed to our government acquiring, either by conquest or otherwise, any territory on the Eastern hemisphere.

3d. That we recognize and commend the courage of our soldiers and marines, both in camp and in battle during the war with Spain.

4th. That we believe much of the suffering endured by our soldiers in the late campaign to be due to incompetent or dishonest officials

5th. That we regret that partisan politics rather than efficiency, should have controlled the appointment or assignment of our army officers.

Before the adoption of the above resolutions Chas. Schramm moved that the second resolution be stricken out. The motion was lost on a close vote.

On motion of B. L. Rice the delegates were instructed to vote for W. H. Baker and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination for Congress and to vote as a unit on all question before the convention.

NOTES.

Every precinct in the county was represented.

It was an old time Democratic love feast, on not an extensive scale.

While the meeting was waiting for the report of the committee on delegates, it was addressed by Messrs. Furnish, Dulaney, Tolin, Berkshire, Rice and Castleman. Mr. Rice excoriated the Covington and Newport politicians in a lively manner.

When the question of instructing the delegates came up, quite a little discussion ensued, Rice, Tolin, Grimsley, Green, Dulaney and Castleman urging instructions for W. H. Baker. J. W. Kennedy was not in favor of the instructions on the grounds that they would be a disadvantage rather than an advantage to Capt. Baker.

The fiscal court was in session yesterday with Judge Roberts presiding and Justices Green, Gaines, B. H. Ryle and J. H. Walton, present.

Pendleton county instructed for Berry, Boone for Baker, Trimble uninstructed. Grant and Carroll not heard from but no doubt will send a delegation instructed for Berry, who will be nominated on second ballot if not on first, so says the Commonwealth.

The Glasgow and Elizabethtown fairs made money this year, despite the croakings of the mossbacks, who insisted that the day of the county fair was over. Glasgow's fair treasurer has nearly $500 to the good after paying for numerous improvements on the grounds, and E'town's association carries forward the substaneial balance of $700.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Harsh Critics Are Not Wanted Within the Pearly Gates of Heaven.

Some Dogs Might Be Welcomed By the Saved—Men Who Have Had Troubles in This World Can Slake Their Thirst at the River of Divine Comfort.

Dr. Talmage, drawing his illustrations from a deer hunt, in this discourse calls all the pursued and troubled of the earth to come and slake their thirst at the deep river of Divine comfort. Text, Psalms xlii., 1: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God."

David, who must some time have seen a deer hunt, points us here to a hunted stag making for the water. The fascinating animal called in my text the hart is the same animal that is sacred and profane literature is called the stag, the roebuck, the hind, the gazelle, the reindeer. In Central Syria, in Bible times, there were whole pasture fields of them, as Solomon suggests when he says, "I charge you by the hinds of the field." Their antlers jutted from the long grass as they lay down. No hunter who has been long in "John Brown's tract" will wonder that in the Bible they are classed among clean animals, for the dews, like showers, the lakes washed them as clean as the sky. When the patriarch Isaac longed for venison, Esau shot and brought home a roebuck. Isaiah compares the sprightliness of the restored cripple of millennial times to the long and quick jump of the stag, saying, "The lame shall leap as the hart." Solomon expressed his disgust at a hunter who, having shot a deer, is too lazy to cook it, saying, "The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting."

But one day David, while far from the home from which he had been driven, and sitting near the mouth of a lonely cave where he had lodged, and on the banks of a pond or river, hears a pack of hounds in swift pursuit. Because of the previous silence of the forest the clangor startles him, and he says to himself: "I wonder what those dogs are after." Then there is a crackling in the brushwood, and the loud breathing of some rushing wonder of the woods, and the antlers of a deer rent the leaves of the thicket, and by an instinct which all hunters recognize the creature plunges into a pool or lake or river to cool its thirst, and at the same time by its capacity for swifter and longer swimming to get away from the foaming harriers. David says to himself: "Aha, that is myself! Saul after me, Absalom after me, enemies without number after me. I am chased; their bloody muzzles at my heels, barking after my good name, barking after my body, barking after my soul. Oh, the hounds, the hounds! "But, look there," says David to himself, "that reindeer has splashed into the water. It puts it hot lips and nostrils into the cool wave that washes its lathered flanks, and it swims away from the fiery canines, and it is free at last. Oh, that I might find in the deep, wide lake of God's mercy and consolation escape from pursuers! Oh, for the waters of life and rescue! 'As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God!'"

The Adirondacks are now populous with hunters, and the deer are being slain by the score. Talking one summer with a hunter, I thought I would like to see whether my text was accurate in its allusion, and, as I heard the dogs baying a little way off and supposed they were on the track of a deer, I said to one of the hunters in rough corduroy: "Do the deer always make for the water when they are pursued?" He said: "Oh, yes, mister; you see they are a hot and thirsty animal, and they know where the water is, and when they hear danger in the distance they lift their antlers and sniff the breeze and start for the Raquet or Loon or Saranac; and we get into our cedar shell boat or stand by the 'runway' with rifle loaded and ready to blaze away."

My friends, that is one reason why I like the Bible so much—its illusions are so true to nature. Its partridges are real partridges, its ostriches real ostriches, and its reindeer real reindeer. I do not wonder that this antlered glory of the text makes the hunter's eye sparkle and his cheeks glow and his respiration quicken. To say nothing of its usefulness, although it is the most useful of all games, its flesh delicious, its skin turned into human apparel, its sinews fashioned into bowstrings, its antlers cutting handles on cutlery, and the shavings of its horn used as a pungent restorative, the name taken from the hart and called hartshorn. But putting aside its usefulness, this enchanting creature seems made out of gracefulness and elasticity. With an eye with a liquid brightness as if gathered up from a hundred lakes at sunset! The horns, a coronal branching into every possible curve, and after it seems complete ascending into other projections of exquisiteness, a tree of polished bone, uplifted in pride, or swung down for awful combat. The hart is velocity embodied. Timidity impersonated. The enchantment of the woods. Its eye lustrous in life and pathetic in death. The splendid animal a complete rhythm of muscle, and bone, and color, and attitude, and locomotion, whether couched in the grass among the shadows, or a living bolt shot through the forest, or turning at bay to attack the hounds, or rearing for its last fall under the buckshot of the trapper. It is a splendid appearance that the painter's pencil fails to sketch, and only a hunter's dream on a pillow of hemlock at the foot of St. Regis is able to picture. When, 90 miles from any settlement, it comes down at eventide to the lake's edge to drink among the lily pods and, with its sharp edged hoof, shatters the crystal of Long Lake, it is very picturesque. But only when, after miles of pursuit, with hearing sides and lolling tongue and eyes swimming in death the stag leaps from the cliff into Upper Saranac, can you realize how much David had suffered from his troubles, and how much he wanted God when he expressed himself in the words of the text: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God."

Well, now, let all those who have coming after them the lean hounds of poverty, or the black hounds of persecution, or the spotted hounds of vicissitudes, or the pale hounds of death, or who are in any wise pursued, run to the wide, deep, glorious lake of divine solace and rescue. The most of the men and women whom I happened to know at different times, if not now, have had trouble after them, sharp-muzzled troubles, swift troubles, all-devouring troubles. Many of you have made the mistake of trying to fight them. Somebody meanly attacked you, and you attacked them; they depreciated you, and you depreciated them; or they overreached you in a bargain, and you tried, in Wall street parlance, to get a corner on them; or you have had a bereavement and instead of being submissive, you are fighting that bereavement; you charge on the doctors who failed to effect a cure; or you charge on the careless-ness of the railroad men through which the accident occurred; or you are a chronic individual; and you fret, and worry, and scold, and wonder why you can not be well like other people, and you angrily blame the nerves, or the laryngitis, or the ague, or the sick headache. The fact is, you are a deer at bay. Instead of running to the waters of divine consolation, and slaking your thirst and cooling your body and soul in the good cheer of the Gospel, and swimming away into the mighty deeps of God's love, you are fighting a whole kennel of harriers.

I saw in the Adirondacks a dog lying across the road, and he seemed unable to get up, and I said to some hunters near by: "What is the matter with that dog?" They answered: "A deer hurt him." And I saw he had a great swollen paw and a battered head, showing where the antlers struck him. And the probability is that some of you might give a mighty clip to your pursuers, you might damage their business, you might worry them into ill-health, put them as much as they have hurt you, but, after all, it is not worth while. You only have hurt a hound. Better be off for the Upper Saranac, into which the mountains of God's eternal strength look down and moor their shadows. As for your physical disorders, the worst strychnine you can take is fretfulness, and the best medicine is religion. I know people who were only a little disordered, yet have fretted themselves into complete valetudinarianism, while others put their trust in God and come up from the very shadow of death, and have lived comfortably 25 years with only one lung. A man with one lung, but God with him, is better off than a godless man with two lungs. Some of you have been for a long time sailing around Cape Fear when you ought to have been sailing around Cape Good Hope. Do not turn back, but go ahead. The deer will accomplish more with its swift feet than with its horns.

I saw whole chains of lakes in the Adirondacks, and from one height you can see 30, and there are said to be over 300 in the great wilderness of New York. So near are they to each other that your mountain guide picks up and carries the boat from lake to lake, the small distance between them for that reason called a "carry." And the realm of God's word is one long chain of bright, refreshing lakes; each promise lake, a very short carry between them, and though for ages the pursued have been drinking out of them, they are full up and green banks, and the same Divine hand discharges them, and they seem so near together, that in three different places he speaks of them as a continuous river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God;" "Thou shalt make them drink of the rivers of thy pleasures;" "Thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water."

But many of you have turned your back on that supply, and confront your trouble, and you are soured with your circumstances, and you are fighting society, and you are fighting a pursuing world, and troubles, instead of driving you into the cool lake of heavenly comfort, have made you stop and turn around and lower your head, and it is simply antler against tooth. I do not blame you. Probably under the same circumstances I would have done worse. But you are all wrong. You need to do as the reindeer does in February and March—it sheds its horns. The Rabbinical writers allude to this resignation of antlers by the stag when they say of a man who ventures his money in risky enterprises, he has hung it on the stag's horns; and a proverb in the far east tells a man who has foolishly lost his fortune to go and find where the deer sheds her horns. My brother, quit the antagonism of your circumstances, quit misanthropy, quit complaint, quit pitching into your pursuers, be as wise, as next spring, will be all the deer of the Adirondacks. Shed your horns.

But very many of you who are wronged of the world—and if any assembly be between here and Golden Gate, San Francisco, it were asked that all those that had been sometimes badly treated should raise both their hands, and full response should be made, there would be twice as many hands lifted as persons present—I say many of you would declare: "We have always done the best we could and tried to be useful, and why we should become the victims of malignment, or invalidism, or mishap, is inscrutable." Why, do you know the finer a deer and the more elegant its proportions, and the more beautiful its bearing, the more anxious the hunters and the hounds are to capture it. Had the roebuck a ragged fur and broken hoof and an obliterated eye and a limping gait, the hunters would have said: "Pshaw! don't let us waste our ammunition on a sick deer." And the hounds would have given a few sniffs of the scent and then darted off in another direction for better game. But when they see a deer with antlers lifted in mighty challenge to earth and sky, and the sleek hide looks as if it had been smoothed with invisible hands, and the fat sides enclose the richest pasture that could be nibbled from the banks of rills so clear they seem to have dropped out of Heaven, and the stamp of its foot defies the jack-shooting lantern and the rifle, the horn and the hound, that deer they will have if they must needs break their neck in the rapids.

So if there were no noble stuff in your make-up, if you were a bifurcated nothing, if you were a foiorn failure, you would be allowed to go undisturbed; but the fact that the whole pack is in full cry after you is proof positive that you are splended game and worth capturing. Therefore sarcasm draws on you its "finest bead." Therefore the world goes gunning for you with its best Maynard breech-loader. Highest compliment is if your talent or your virtue, or your usefulness. You will be assailed in proportion to your great achievements. The best and the mightiest Being the world ever saw had set after him all the hounds, terrestrial and diabolic, and they lapped his blood after the Calvarean massacre. The world paid nothing to its Redeemer but a bramble, four spikes and a cross. Many who have done their best to make the world better have had such a rough time of it that all their pleasure is in anticipation of the next world, and they could express their own feelings in the words of the Baroness of Nairn at the close of her long life, when asked if she would like to live her life over again:

Would you be young again?
So would not I:
One summer of sorry given,
Onward I'll hie:
Life's dark wave foiled o'er,
All but at rest on shore,
Say, would you plunge once more,
With home so nigh?

If you might, would you now
Retrace your way?
Wandering through stormy wilds,
Faint and astray?
Night's gloomy hours sped,
Morning all beaming red,
Hopes smile around us shed,
Heavenward, away!

But what is a relief for all this pursuit of trouble, and annoyance, and pain and bereavement? My text gives it to you in a word of three letters, but each letter is a chariot if you would triumph, or a throne if you want to be crowned, or a lake if you would slake your thirst—yes, a chain of three lakes—G-O-D, the One for whom David longed and the One whom David found. You might as well meet a stag, which, after its sixth mile of running at the topmost speed through thicket and gorge and with the breath of the dogs on its heels, has come in full sight of Scroon lake and try to cool its projecting and blistered tongue with a drop of dew from a blade of grass, as to attempt to satisfy an immortal soul, when flying from trouble and sin, with anything less deep and high, and broad, and immense, and infinite, and eternal than God. His comfort, why it embosoms all distress. His arm, it wrenches off all bondage. His hand, it wipes away all tears. His Christly atonement, it makes us all right with the past and with the future; and right with God, all right with man and all right forever. Lamartine tells us that King Nimrod said to his three sons, "Here are three vases, and one is of clay, another of amber and another of gold. Choose now which you will have." The eldest son, having first choice, chose the vase of gold, on which was written the word "empire," and when opened it was found to contain human blood. The second son, making the next choice, chose the vase of amber, inscribed with the word "glory," and when opened it contained the ashes of those who were once called great. The third son took the vase of clay, and, opening it, found it empty, but on the bottom of it was inscribed the name of God. King Nimrod asked his courtiers which vase they thought weighed the most. The avaricious men of his court said the vase of gold. The poets said the one of amber. But the wisest men said the empty vase, because one letter of the name of God outweighed a universe.

For Him I thirst; for His grace I beg; on His promise I build my all. Without Him I can not be happy. I have tried the world, and it does well enough as far as it goes, but it is too uncertain a world, too evanescent a world. I am not a prejudiced witness. I have nothing against this world. I have been one of the most fortunate, or, to use a more Christian word, one of the most blessed of men—blessed in my parents, blessed in the place of my nativity, blessed in my health, blessed in my field of work, blessed in my natural temperament, blessed in my family, blessed in my opportunities, blessed in a comfortable livelihood, blessed in the circumstances, quit misanthropy, quit complaint, quit pitching into your pursuers, be as wise, as next spring, will be all the deer of the Adirondacks. Shed your horns.

But very many of you who are wronged of the world—and if any assembly be between here and Golden Gate, San Francisco, it were asked that all those that had been sometimes badly treated should raise both their hands, and full response should be made, there would be twice as many hands lifted as persons present—I say many of you would declare: "We have always done the best we could and tried to be useful, and why we should become the victims of malignment, or invalidism, or mishap, is inscrutable." Life to many has been a disappointment, but to me it has been a pleasant surprise, and yet I declare that if I did not feel that God was now my friend and ever-present help, I should be wretched and terror-stricken. But I want more of him. I have thought over this text and preached this sermon to myself until with all the aroused energies of my body, mind and soul, I can cry out, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God."

REPUBLICAN CRIMES.

Two Years of McKinley and Hanna at Washington.

Workings of the Dingley Law and the Gold Standard—Strikes Instead of Prosperity—The Mission of Democracy.

At the Chicago Auditorium Saturday evening, September 24, ex-Gov. John P. Altgeld, of Illinois, delivered a lengthy address upon the political questions of the situation, in which he dwelt at length upon the corruption of the and the results of two years of Republican rule at Washington. In the course of his remarks Mr. Altgeld said:

The Dingley Bill.

"To the campaign of '96 the trusts and the great corporations contributed in this country the enormous fund for the purpose of debauching American citizens and stealing the election by improper methods. Soon after as President McKinley was inaugurated the different interests which had contributed this fund demanded that they be given an opportunity to collect it back. Together with an enormous profit. Congress was at once convened, and although in session many months, it did no business except to enact the Dingley law. Ostensibly it was for the protection of the laborer and to furnish money for the treasury, but it did neither of these things, and in reality it was for the benefit of the monopolies only. The famous McKinley law, then barely dead, had during its life not raised the wages of any laborer in this country, and had, for the first time since 1894, produced a deficit in the treasury of $70,000,000. This was caused by placing duties so high as to stop importations of certain articles. The treasury naturally got nothing, while the advanced price of goods, which the people had to pay, went into the chests of the monopolists. The Dingley law was constructed on the same principles, and the deficit in the national treasury, under this law, promises to be fully equal to that under the McKinley law. But it raised the wages of any laborer; but it has created conditions by which the American people are being compelled to pay hundreds of millions of dollars into the federal treasury, but into the coffers of private corporations.

The Sugar Trust.

"One illustration answers for all. The great sugar trust had, and has, control of the sugar business and market of this country. It reputed to have given over $1,000,000 campaign funds in 1896, so in framing the Dingley law the sugar trust was given such a tariff as it wanted. The result of this was that the price of sugar went up 25 per cent; sugar that the laboring man formerly got for four cents a pound was at once marked up to five cents; instead of getting 25 pounds for one dollar, he got 20; and during the first year after this Dingley law went into effect the sugar trust cleared over $20,000,000, over and above what it could have made under the former tax. Not a cent of this went into the federal treasury, but it all came out of the pockets of the people. The trust not only got back the millions it had given, but it got nearly $20,000,000 besides. Almost the same state of facts existed as to the whisky leather trust and a great number of other trusts and combinations. Nothing done for the laborer, but everything for the manipulator. Home labor is driven out by pauper labor brought over in shiploads, but the trust is protected. Gentlemen, do you believe in using the powers of government to enable a few to rob the great manner to make fortunes off of the masses of the people?

The Worst Curse of All.

"Again, two years ago the republicans declared, in their convention, that they would sustain the gold standard only until they could get an international agreement restoring bimetallism, and they pledged themselves to do everything in their power to secure such an agreement. During the campaign we charged that this pledge was not made in good faith, that they were really under control of foreign and eastern manipulators and that that pledge was simply intended to deceive, and in that way secure the votes of honest bimetallic republicans who felt that the gold standard was a curse to this country. We pointed out that the demonetization of silver had resulted in lowering the general level of the price of property nearly 50 per cent.; that the total amount of money in circulation in the world determined the demand for property, and thus fixed the general level of all prices, while the law of supply and demand would again raise or lower the prices of any particular articles above or below this general level; that the lowering of this general level had destroyed the purchasing power of our farmers and of the great producing classes, and had thus paralyzed our industries, destroyed our trade and caused widespread bankruptcy, suffering and distress throughout the civilized world, and that, until the general level of prices was again raised to what it was during the existence of the bimetallic standard, we could not again have prosperity; that a low standard of values always fails hard on the poor and always gives the manipulator an advantage; it breaks manhood and cheapens character; and inasmuch as it destroys the interest and taxes and the great burdens that were weighing our people down were not reduced in size, but required just as many dollars to liquidate them as was formerly necessary, that it was a crime to maintain a system which made each dollar twice as hard to get as it formerly was, and we claimed that if silver were restored to the place that it had occupied for hundreds of years, it would again raise the general level of prices and thus furnish cheap able our people to discharge their burdens and to buy freely, and again inaugurate an era of prosperity, industry and happiness.

Lucky Accidents.

"A whole chapter of accidents followed the election of '96, all favorable to the republicans. First, the great drought and consequent failure of crops in Europe, culminating, resulting in a terrible famine, temporarily raised the price of wheat far above the general level, and thus helped those farmers that had not yet sold their crops; and second, the same drought caused the loss of about 60,000,000 head of sheep in Australia and the surrounding islands, which fact raised the price of sheep and the price of wool throughout the world; and third, came war, which usually creates more or less activity in commercial circles. Astonishing as it may seem, the republicans attributed all these things to their tariff law. But these accidents have spent their force, and we are again approaching the 50-cent line, the general level of prices is about where it was two years ago, and is showing a constant tendency to sink still lower, while the population of the earth is increasing and demands more and more money, the annual addition to the people's stock of money is not increasing in proportion. In consequence of the general downward tendency of prices no man feels safe to embark in new enterprises, the money that we have in the country is collecting at the centers, like blood congesting the heart, and is not circulating in the extremities.

No Prosperity—Plenty of Strikes.

"Instead of the restoration of prosperity, as we were promised, we find that only those classes who in one manner or another devour the substance of other men's toil are prospering, while the great masses of our people find themselves in as much distress as ever. While the brokers and speculators, the manipulators who have absolute control of certain markets and can force the people to pay any price they may ask, are talking about prosperity, we find that there have recently been, and so far as I am advised are yet in progress, 37 great strikes in industrial centers of this country all on account of wages, in nearly all cases reductions having been made, a reduction, too, from what were already starvation wages. In the great wood-working town of Oshkosh, in Wisconsin, where a strike lasted so long and was of so fierce a character that the military had to be sent there to maintain order, an inquiry developed the fact that skilled workmen that used to get $3.50 a day were getting only $1.25 a day, working ten hours, and day laborers were getting only 80 cents a day; man 30 and 40 years of age, in the prime life, with families to support were working ten hours and getting 80 cents. At Pana, in Illinois, we have for months had a strike among the coal miners, because the mine operators insisted on reducing wages below a starvation point, declaring that they could not otherwise run their mines. And they are now driving the white men off and filling their places with negroes brought from Alabama.

"THIS IS REPUBLICAN PROSPERITY.

"In almost every industrial center in this country we find A SIMILAR CONDITION, AND ONLY RECENTLY MARK HANNA, MANAGER, SPEAKING OF THE CONDITION OF THE COAL MINERS IN OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA, STATED THAT THEIR COMPANIES WERE GOING TO REDUCE WAGES AND THAT HE ANTICIPATED A LONG AND SERIOUS STRIKE IN CONSEQUENCE.

A Regenerated Democracy.

"Two years ago our great party adopted a new declaration of independence. It cut loose from the forces that were degrading labor and robbing it of its mission. It devoted itself anew to the service of mankind, to the elevation of humanity. Since then it has demonstrated that a resolute, consistent minority party, with high aim and lofty purpose can frequently accomplish more for the welfare of the human race than a majority party; that while a majority party has to busy itself with patriotism and compromises to keep its supporters together, the minority party can keep its face to the sun, constantly holding its hand on the sword of justice.

Glories Achieved.

"I want here to congratulate the democracy of America upon the fact that since its release two years ago from the baneful influence that had controlled it, it has already made an achievement that will forever gild the close of this century with glory. It has driven that tyranny, that robber of nations, which for centuries has darkened our skies near our borders, forever off the western hemisphere. It has rescued suffering millions; it has lifted the standards of justice. It has opened a career for countries which have tasted nothing but the curse of oppression for centuries. It has done more; it has established in practice, and thus forced recognition of, a new principle of international law, and that is, that no government has the right to rob and murder its citizens, and that wherever it does so, it is the duty of other governments to interfere and protect the people. This principle marks a new advent in the history of the world, and has in store for the coming generations of the earth that only the eye of the omniscient can measure. Should the regenerated democracy never accomplish anything more, this one achievement will cover its memory with glory.

The Chicago Platform.

"I further congratulate the democracy upon the fact that every day since 1896 has demonstrated the wisdom and the high position then taken, not simply on the money question, but upon all the other great questions. The money question lies at the bottom of our distress, and must be righted before we can again prosper. We must and will restore the dollar of the fathers. The gold standard is a disastrous failure in every country that has recently tried to establish it. It has utterly ruined India, and recently the bankers and brokers and gold standard writers of London have united in a protest against any further attempt to establish the gold standard in India, declaring that it has not only ruined India, but that it would produce a panic in London, because there is not enough gold for the purpose. In England and in the German empire the agricultural interests are paralyzed, and a parliamentary inquiry as to England has shown that this condition is due to the gold standard, and in both of these great countries there is now a powerful movement for the re-establishment of bimetallism. This question is arousing the world, and will continue to do so until it is settled right.

Mission of Democracy.

"So, will be the questions of corruption, of corporation rule, of usurpation by federal courts, etc. The intelligence, the patriotism and the manhood of the country are with us. The scribbling by handy hired men is still against us, but is losing its influence. The regenerated democracy will take no backward step. It has a great mission, and it will not dare to attempt to perform it. It stands for higher ideals, stands for a higher justice, stands for a new era, stands for a new republic."

NOT TO BE EXTINGUISHED.

The Money Question Is an Issue That the Monopolists Cannot Put Down.

The anxiety of the money trust to attract attention away from financial subjects, and, if possible, prevent their further discussion during the present and future campaigns, is entirely natural. It cost these people not less than $20,000,000 to secure the election of William McKinley in 1896. Notwithstanding their enormous financial resources, they came perilously near failure. Worst of all, however, that campaign set the middle classes to thinking upon matters of finance which they had never thought before. This is what members of the money trust dread more than any other one thing. They understand if the time should ever come when our people shall carefully consider questions of finance the day of fat stealing is over for them. To carry the election of 1900 on the financial issue would cost them not less than $40,000,000, and then the result would not be a foregone conclusion. Perhaps they believe by the judicious expenditure of $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 they can control the current of political discussion this year, and thus side-track a dangerous issue. They have already practically shut off the great city dailies. Through the Associated Press, the American News company, and other news agencies, they hold the metropolitan press in the hollow of their hands. Every agricultural and religious journal willing to prostitute itself for money has been secured. Party leaders with life in them are now in strong demand. They do not invest in dead politicians any more than in dead horses, so, when you see a politician trying to crowd the money question to the rear and minor issues to the front, it is safe to bet there is a reh on. The people crowded the slavery question to the front and kept it there until it was settled in spite of politicians and financial interests. They can be trusted to treat the money question in the same way.

THE ROYAL MATCH MAKER.

Queen Louise, Whose Offspring is Connected With Nearly Every European Throne, Dead.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 29.—Queen Louise, of Denmark, died at 5:30 Thursday morning. The entire royal family was at her bedside.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 30.—Queen Louise, of Denmark, who died at 5:30 a. m. Thursday, was born September 7, 1817. She was the daughter of Landgrave Wilhelm, of Hesse-Cassel, and was married May 26, 1842, to Christian, fourth son of the late Duke Wilhelm, of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glucksburg. Christian was appointed to the succession of the crown of Denmark by the treaty of London of May 8, 1852, and by the Danish law of succession of July 31, 1853. He succeeded to the throne as Christian IX. on the death of King Frederick VII. on November 15, 1863.

For the last 30 years of her life the queen exercised such influence on the politics of Europe that she was sometimes called the mother-in-law of the continent. Another title which was sometimes given her was the "royal matchmaker."

The children of King Christian and Queen Louise are Prince Frederick, the heir apparent, born June 3, 1843, who married Princess Louisa, daughter of King Carl XV of Sweden and Norway; Princess Alexandria, born December 1, 1844, who was married March 10, 1863, to the Prince of Wales; Prince Wilhelm, born December 24, 1845, elected king of the Hellenes, under the title of George I. by the Greek national assembly in 1863, and who married Olga Constantinowo, a grand duchess of Russia in 1867; Princess Marie Dagmar (Empress Maria Feodorevna), born November 30, 1847, who was married November 9, 1866, to Alexander III., the late emperor of Russia; Princess Thyra, born September 29, 1853, who was married December 21, 1878, to Prince Ernest August, duke of Cumberland, and Prince Waldemar, born October, 27, 1858, who married in 1885 the Princess Marie d'Orleans, eldest daughter of the Duc De Chartres.

The queen has been dangerously ill for several months, but an effort had been made to keep the condition of the royal sufferer from the public. Her daughter, the princess of Wales, was summoned to Denmark in haste a few weeks ago.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The president has sent the following telegram of condolence to the king of Denmark.

To His Majesty, King of Denmark, Copenhagen:—I offer your majesty my sincere condolence in the bereavement you suffer by the death of your esteemed consort.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY,
President of the United States.

WRECKED CRISTOBAL COLON.

Constructor Hobson to Be Given Government Aid in His Effort to Raise the Wrecked Spanish Vessel.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Assistant Secretary Allen, who has been directly in charge of the arrangements made with the wrecking companies for raising such of the Spanish warships sunk or stranded in the battle of July 3 as can be recovered, said Thursday, referring to Constructor Hobson's work on the Teresa, that the navy department had given the young constructor all the assistance which it was possible to extend in the prosecution of his work. Moreover, it is now proposed to give him further aid in his effort to raise the Colon, by far the finest ship of the Spanish squadron. Whatever credit has been earned by Constructor Hobson by reason of the Teresa would, in the opinion of Mr. Allen, be largely exceeded if the attempt to raise the Colon results successfully. In the case of this ship the young constructor has pledged his professional reputation against the unanimous opinion of all the expert wreckers who have examined the ship. Yet the navy department is unhesitatingly supporting Hobson's judgment as indicated by the fact that Wednesday it shipped from New York $20,000 worth of specially manufactured rubber airbags to be used in lifting the Colon. Aside from the sentimental reason for sparing no effort to save this ship, the navy department is satisfied, from the reports of divers who have investigated her condition, that she is well worth, from a monetary point of view, the expenditure of a considerable percentage of her original value, about $4,000,000, if there is a reasonable prospect of raising her.

Can Spar in Allegheny.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 30.—Police Superintendent Muth, of Allegheny, says that Corbett and McCoy can spar here during the week of the Knights Templar conclave, but that a fight to a finish will not be permitted. The city will be open for all kinds of legitimate sport for the entertainment of the visitors. It is understood that strong efforts are being made to get the big fighters to meet in Allegheny at that time.

There is Hope for Dr. Todd.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Dr. E. A. Todd, assistant superintendent of the state insane hospital at Toledo, O., who is at the Presbyterian hospital, in this city, suffering from hydrophobia, was reported Thursday to be slightly improved. The patient is a little more cheerful, which is looked upon as a favorable sign. The crisis in the case is not looked for until Friday.

Chased Three Miles by Officers.

GREENVILLE, O., Sept. 30.—Prof. Harold Leo, claiming to hail from Hamilton county, Ohio, stylishly dressed, went to Mrs. Sarah Aukerman's boarding house and swindled her out of $200 on a deed for 80 acres of land. After she discovered that she had been swindled she immediately sent officers on his trail. When he saw the officers coming he began to run. The officers chased him three miles and he was found in a swamp, exhausted, by Marshal Stolz and Halepafel. He is well known as the "Diamond King."

IT IS STILL ALIVE.

The Goldbug Party Cannot Kill the Free Silver Movement with Their Bombast.

"The silver craze is dead" is the oft repeated cry of the magpies and chatterboxes of the goldbug party, says E. E. Ewing, in the Silver Knight-Watchman. Wait and see. The silver men are intelligent thinkers. They have read and studied the silver question and understand the magnitude and influence the free coinage of silver would have for the good of the business of the country. They are not standing around in groups talking, neither are the gold or the tariff advocates found in that position. The money question is to be more the issue in the future than ever in the past. In fact, there is no other prominent question before the American people today on which party lines are so clearly drawn, and silver must occupy the fore front of the question in opposition to the gold craze. The gold craze is as much of a craze to-day as the worship of Baal had become among the Jews when Elijah mocked the idol's priests, telling them to call louder, that maybe he was asleep or on a journey. But their frantic screams and rending of garments did not bring rain or fire down from Heaven to kindle wood under the burnt offering; and neither do the promises of prosperity by the priest of mammon, "sound money" and gold standard bring prosperity. Their gold idol like Baal must be asleep or on a journey and hears not, however much the worshipers of the calf rend their garments and cry "we are on the edge of prosperity. The greatest boom is about to start ever known; silver is dead!"

The new relations which the war with Spain has created in the east and the extension of our power and government over the most important islands of the West Indies call for more money, and they call loudly for more silver money than for any other kind. As our territory and business expands our money must be increased to supply that business with the sinews of trade, and silver of all other moneys is the money of the Asiatic people. With the silver which our mines produce coined into American money we can control almost the entire trade of the east in a short time and force the whole of Europe to adopt our money policy in self-preservation of their foreign trade.

Cuba and Puerto Rico will have to be supplied with American money. As for Cuba becoming an independent nation with an army and navy to support is the verlest moonshine. The island will be filled with American capital and dominated by American enterprises which will demand the protection of a strong nation that will assume the expense of national government, and guarantee domestic tranquillity, free and stable government and defense against imposition by strong nations of Europe. It is possible that Cuba may monkey awhile at independent government, but it is hardly probable.

With Manila and the island on which it is located, and the principal city, island and seaport of the Ladrone group in our possession the whole of these islands is bound to be dominated by American influence, and American money to control the trade will be as necessary as the American navy and garrisons to protect the inhabitants, insure domestic tranquillity and spread American institutions. And for the fulfillment of these beneficient objects American silver dollars are fully as necessary as the protecting angels of American law and the United States navy.

American silver is destined to become the greatest power in the old east that has ever been exercised in the west. It will work a fructifying and rejuvenating influence greater than British cannon and western trade has ever exerted. Even the star of empire is fighting against the gold standard. No nation of people are benefited by it except the Jew bankers of Great Britain and their relatives who manage the gold banks in the capitals of this continent. The rank and file of the people of every nation and clime under the sun are afflicted by the gold standard, and only the few who own bonds and debts have an interest in keeping up the gold standard, and they heenuse that monetary policy makes all property, labor and men cheap and money dear.

American influence, American silver and American institutions must go hand in hand into the old east to call the dust covered dead from the tomb into which gold and tyranny laid them thousands of years ago, and join bone to bone, as it were, breathe life into the dead, and change the groans of despair into a hymn of hope and rejoicing.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——The republican party exhibits its anxiety for a big standing army by favoring all projects that would make a large army a necessity.—Ottumwa (Ia.) Democrat.

——Mark Hanna is not making campaign speeches, but the committees do not complain so long as he has it fixed so they can draw on him.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——The marked reduction in the republican majority in Maine is indicative of party apathy, and, taken in connection with the slump in the republican vote in Vermont, shows a prevalence of conditions that may well give republican leaders throughout the country concern.—Philadelphia Ledger (Rep.).

——The republican press professes to be perfectly satisfied with the result of the Maine election, and we are sure that the democrats are. Queer things happen in political "off years." but nothing that could be more productive of comfort to the democratic party has occurred in Maine for a good many years.—Rochester Herald.

DEMOCRATS ARE BLAMED.

Republican Ingenuity in Misrepresentation Produces a Strange Charge.

A republican political genius has discovered that the democrats only are to blame for McKinley's and Alger's mismanagement of the war and the sufferings of our soldiers in the field. The ingenious gentleman who made this discovery is Hon. John A. T. Hull, a member of congress from Iowa and said to be chairman of the house committee on military affairs.

Mr. Hull says that if a resolution which he offered in the house near the closing hours of the last session had been adopted there would have been a congressional committee on active duty all the time to prevent blunders by army and navy officers and to save the soldiers and sailors from distress through the errors of their commanding officers. A committee of congressmen would have forestalled every order issued through mistake and would have saved the army and navy from the consequences of every military or naval error occurring through incompetence, oversight, insufficiency of help and supplies and from all other causes.

Congressman Hull alleges that near the last hours of the congressional session he offered the following: "That the house committee on military affairs has power to sit during the adjournment of congress and make such investigation as to organization and equipment of all branches of the army as it may deem advisable and report to the next session of congress."

This committee is that of which Mr. Hull is chairman. If he and his committee had been kept on duty no mismanagement of war affairs would have occurred! But the democrats in the house objected to the consideration of the resolution and it was too late in the session to pass a measure against objections from any source. Hence the democrats are responsible for the maladministration of the war department.

The country knows from familiar history the egregious absurdity of clothing a congressional committee with power to exercise supervision over war movements. It was illustrated in the evil results of the action of congressional war committees during the civil war. They embarrassed the administration of Abraham Lincoln and the measures of Grant in the field. If the democratic members of the house defeated a plan to send a republican congressional committee to the camps and the field for the oversight of army movements they rendered to the country a service of the highest value.—Chicago Chronicle.

ALGER IS BLUFFING.

From two newspaper sources in Washington the statement has been disseminated that Secretary Alger has placed his resignation in the hands of the president. The time when he did this is stated to have been on the occasion of his calling at the white house just before setting out on his camp inspection tour.

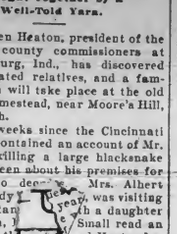
It will be recalled that Gen. Miles, who has made incriminating statements against Alger and repeated them, returning from Puerto Rico entered Washington about that time. He came in one morning and Alger left hastily that same day. Before leaving, it is now explained, he visited the president and gave him the famous letter asking for an investigation. Then it was that he is said to have placed his resignation in the presidential ear, for he delivered it orally.

It has taken the matter a long time to leak out. That it has finally seeped through the thick wall of secrecy creates the inference that Mr. McKinley is contemplating the acceptance of the resignation of his remarkable secretary of war and has taken this means to prepare the public for the startling denouement. It would not be in keeping with Mr. Alger's braggadocio vaunts, made when the storm raised by the "round robin" first rose against him, "that he would not retire under fire," if he were to quit the cabinet before a court of inquiry could pass upon his responsibility.

He probably deems it wisest to hold on to his job until that tribunal which is yet in the air has had a chance to do something. It may not get into working order for a month yet; and it may not get down to the meat of the investigation before congress reassembles. There is, too that hope of all republican officials, justified by the experience of their investigated predecessors in the past, still remaining to him. He may be whitewashed.

Alger's resignation evidently has a string to it. He will not let go until the fall elections are over. The party's necessity and his own political fortunes alike demand that he shall keep up his bluff for at least seven weeks longer.—St. Louis Republic.

——Imperialism and militarism necessarily go hand in hand. The latter is the natural outgrowth of the former. The recent movement in favor of an imperial policy for the United States, chiefly noticeable in quarters where Mark Hanna is supreme, was supplemented shortly after its inception by a demand for an immense standing army, not unlike the armies of Europe, "to guarantee peace at home and protect our new interests abroad."—Columbus (O.) Press-Post.



While democrats have leaders like Bland, Bryan and Bailey, standing squarely and uncompromisingly for the principles of the decalogue and the declaration of independence, there is not money enough on earth to control America against the Chicago platform. —Mississippi Valley Democrat.

SNAKE REUNITED THEM.

Hon. Eben Heaton, president of the board of county commissioners at Lawrenceburg, Ind., has discovered long-separated relatives, and a family reunion will take place at the old Heaton homestead, near Moore's Hill, next month.

Several weeks since the Cincinnati Enquirer contained an account of Mr. Heaton's killing a large blacksnake that had been about his premises for almost two decades. Mrs. Albert Small, a lady [illegible], was visiting from a distant [illegible] with a daughter at Bluffton, [illegible]. Small read an account of the snake, and Heaton being her maiden name concluded to write to the [illegible] county official concerning his ancestry, and inclosed the clipping in explanatory writing. Correspondence followed and Mrs. Small proved to be the aunt of Mr. Heaton, whom he had not seen since 1831, when the family became separated and scattered. All traces of each other lost. The discovery of these kindred enable them to complete a broken chain in the family history and will assist in the closing up of a long unsettled estate that has grown into value.

The Soldier's Return.

LAW IS INCOMPLETE.

New Regulations for the Indian Territory Will Be Formulated.

The interior department is experiencing some difficulty in carrying out the provisions of the Curtis act, revising the laws of Indian territory. It provides among other things that all annuities, royalties, etc., shall be paid the residents of the territory by the secretary of the interior, but does not make appropriation to defray expenses incurred in this work. This and other provisions of the bill, it is said, undoubtedly will be amended by congress. The secretary of the interior, who now holds practically the position of governor of the territory, will soon make public regulations carrying into effect the Curtis act. Superintendent Wright, who has been sent to the territory to investigate conditions there, will make a report to the secretary and the informstion secured in this way may be used in formulating the regulations.

PREDICTS COAL STRIKE.

Manager Young, of Mark Hanna's Coal Company, Says Biggest Strike Ever Seen Will Be On Next Year.

In an Interview Manager Young, of the M. A. Hanna Coal company, is quoted as saying:

"In the early part of next year we will have one of the greatest coal strikes this country has ever seen. All indications are that the strike will last many months.

"The miners stand at all times ready to fight against a reduction of wages. When the Chicago contract expires, or possibly before that time, they will be obliged to accept a reduction of 15 to 16 cents per ton or fight. I think they will fight, and will fight harder than they ever have before.

"The West Virginia miners are working cheaper than they ever have before. All efforts on the part of the other miners to organize them have been in vain. There is no hope that they will be brought into line."

STUNG TO DEATH BY BEES.

The sting of bees resulted in the death of a horse belonging to Charles Winters, near Monticello, N. Y. Coming in too close proximity to a hive in his pasture the animal was stung by one of the bees, and in his efforts to free himself from the bee he kicked and overturned the hive. In a minute the horse was rolling on the ground suffering from a thousand stings, and in less than two hours was dead.

A SOLDIER'S ESCAPE.

From the Democrat-Message, Mt. Sterling, Ill.

When Richmond had fallen and the great commanders had met beneath the historic apple tree at Appomattox, the 83d Pennsylvania Volunteers, prematurely aged, clad in tatters and rags, broken in body but of dauntless spirit, swung into line for the last "grand review" and then quietly marched away to begin life's fray anew amid the hills and valleys of the Keystone State. Among the number Asa Robinson came back to the old home in Mt. Sterling, Ill., back to the fireside that he had left at the call to arms four years previous. He went away a happy, healthy farmer boy in the first flush of vigorous manhood; he came back a ghost of the self that answered to President Lincoln's call for "300,000 more."

To-day he is an alert, active man and tells the story of his recovery as follows:

"I was a great sufferer from sciatica rheumatism almost from the time of my discharge from the army. Most of the time I was unfitted for manual labor of any kind, and my sufferings were at all times intense. At times I was bent almost double, and got around only with the greatest difficulty. Nothing seemed to give me permanent relief until three years ago, when my attention was called to some of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I had not taken more than half a box when I noticed an improvement in my condition, and I kept on improving steadily. I took three boxes of the pills, and at the end of that time was in better condition than at any time since the close of my army service. Since then I have never been bothered with rheumatism. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is the only remedy that ever did me any good, and to them I owe my restoration to comparative health. They are a grand remedy."

THE PROPER USE.

Hardtack Converted Into a Durable Souvenir of the War with Spain.

She was a collector of souvenirs.

The young man who had just returned from the war could not refuse so slight a request. All she wanted was something by which to remember the campaign in Cuba. He was about to respond in the usual romantic fashion and offer himself, when she interposed.

"All I desire is some worthless trifle that will remind me of the hardships you went through in defense of liberty."

"How would one of the buttons off my uniform do?" he inquired.

"No; I want something that was associated with you in your daily routine of life; not a mark that would designate any and all of Uncle Sam's soldiers. I want to hang it in the parlor and preserve it forever."

"It must be indestructible, then?"

"Well, the more nearly so, of course, the better."

He was lost in meditation for some minutes. Then, with brightening countenance, he exclaimed:

"How thoughtless it was of me not to realize it before! I have the very thing. I've carried it for weeks in my pocket over my heart as a piece of armor plate. You can take this hartack and paint a little landscape on it and let it hang on the wall for the next century. Now that the war is over I'm glad to see it put to some legitimate use. It will make a lovely plaque."—Washington Star.

KNOWLEDGE ENOUGH.

Although She Was from Boston She Cared Not for a Higher Subject Than Beans.

Notwithstanding her nose turned up, there were specs on it, and she was from Boston, which may be considered to be competent testimony that heredity isn't everything. She was visiting in Brooklyn before the hot spell and the first young man she met was one who prides himself on his intellectuals. Whether anyone else does or not is another story. As it happened, the young man had an opportunity shortly after the meeting to talk with the young woman alone, and he did not fail to throw a few brains at her.

"Ah, Miss Sophia," he said, with a soulful yearn in his gentle voice, "I presume you attend several of the numerous schools of philosophy in which Boston is so rich and Brooklyn is so poor?"

"I am sorry," she hesitated, "but really, Mr. Blank, I do not attend any."

"Indeed, and do you feel no interest in any of the concepts of modern philosophic thought?"

"None whatever, I fear," and she really seemed to be sorry to have been so careless of her golden, glorious opportunities.

"And does not the subjective idealism of existence in delightful Boston profoundly affect the reality of your Ego?"

"So far I have not observed that it did," she said, apologetically.

"How can it be possible?" he exclaimed. "The sphere of your knowledge must be far wider than it appears to us."

"No," she answered, measuring her words carefully. "I should say it was not. Don't you know as long as we Bostonians know beans when the bag is open we don't worry overmuch about the rest of it. Why should we? Isn't that enough for us to know?"

TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS FINE

It is a singular fact, but none the less true, that in England in the year 1700 women were not allowed to wear calico dresses at all, and in 1721 a penalty or fine of £5 was laid upon the wearer, and the unfortunate dealer who sold calico in those days had to pay a penalty of $100 for the offense. It is hardly necessary to say that no one of them ever undertook to sell more than one dress pattern. The women of this country may bless their lucky stars that nothing has ever interfered with their privilege to buy and wear calico to their heart's content. Moreover, they can be thankful that they are able to purchase the best quality the world produces right here at home. The goods of one firm are especially sought after by both consumers and dealers and their recognized superiority is assured when the name William Simpson & Sons is found on the ticket. At least that is what the ladies and the storekeepers say, and they ought to know.

When They Knew Him.

"There are plenty of women who would be glad to get me," he said.

"Very likely," he replied, pointedly, "but none of them would care to keep you after she once had you."

He went outdoors to say what he wanted to say after that thrust. He felt that he couldn't do justice to it in the house.—Chicago Post.

Unshaken Confidence.

"It's always pretty safe to judge a man by the company he keeps."

"Oh, I don't know. There are exceptions. My Uncle John's business makes it necessary for him to associate with aldermen a good deal, and still I'd trust him with every dollar I've got in the world.—Chicago Evening News.

Pip—"Did you suppose the good really do die young?" Nip—"Don't know. I'm sure; but I'm perfectly convinced none but the young ever die good."—Town Topics.

Stop! Women,

And Consider the All-Important Fact,

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's diseases is greater than that of any living physician—male or female.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local physician in the world. The following invitation is freely offered; accept it in the same spirit:

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

"The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled, for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women a year."

Life becomes a tame affair without romance in it and the family circle is not much of a circle without children. But when you see a man sit down after supper for a quiet hour with his pipe and paper, as a rule he wants no romance and very few children to bother him. If he does have to lay down his paper, take up a squalling baby and drag it over the house for an hour and a quarter, looking in vain for a bottle of milk to feed it with, and don't say words with a d at the beginning, he is ready to take a position as chief clerk in the emporium of patience. Ask J. S. Houston about the matter.

The school election for trustees of the Hebron district passed off quietly last Saturday, considering the interest that has been manifested in the result for some time past. Unfortunately for the district there has been quite an eruption among the patrons, caused by the employing of the present teacher, thereby forming two factions, which is called the Hann and anti-Hann. The anti-Hann faction elected John Conner, Walter Garnett and Harvey Aylor by a majority of 32 votes. The Hann side had but one candidate in the field. It is hoped the incoming trustees will act as a peace commission, all wrongs be righted, the white wings of peace settle over the community, and harmony prevail among us.

Deputy Sheriff Allphin rode into town, last Wednesday evening, smacking his lips so loud that the noise resulting therefrom could be heard 100 yards. When asked the cause of this unusual demonstration he accounted for it by saying he partook, that day, of the best dinner he ever ate, at the Richwood Church, where the Presbytery was in session.

Thursday morning, Matt Green, an inmate of the Poor House, died at that institution and was buried the same day on the grounds of the poor farm. He was the man who was found lying on the bridge last Thursday in an almost drowned condition during the rain storm, and who gave his late residence as Boone county. He was about 45 years of age.—Warsaw Independent.

Chicken thieves have been very annoying in the Richwood neighborhood for the past few weeks. From Michael Rouse, who resides on the Richwood and Beaver pike, they have stolen 200 chickens. Chas. It a was terrible shock to Mrs. English. The deceased was a member of the Baptist Church. The remains were interred at New Bethel cemetery.

In July last there appeared, over the name Philip H. Fall, an account of the great battle fought by the rebel gunboat, Arkansas. Many readers mistook the name of Philip H. Fall for that of the RECORDER'S interesting scribe at Union, to whom the mistake has served as a two edged sword. Some have complimented him on the article while others have pronounced him a species of the yellow journalist. Now this mistake has been very annoying to P. T. Fall, in as much as he deserved neither the compliments nor the denunciations bestowed. Philip H. Fall and P. T. Fall are two distinct persons, and are separated by a vast expanse of Uncle Sam's territory.

Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders of the World, will give an exhibition on Wednesday, October 12th, at Covington. This is the greatest and most thrilling performance given by men and animals. It excites the military spirit in the breast of the youth of the land, and entertains the old by the daring feats of horsemanship. It is distinctively an international military tournament of real soldiers from many nations. Over 100 Indian chiefs and warriors represent the savage soldier. A superb military spectacle, Custer's last battle, is reproduced with splendid scenery. Remember the time and place—Covington, October 12.

Big Litigation Settled.

The Edwards-Dean litigation in the Boone Circuit Court has been settled and will vanish from the docket at the next term. The first chapter was as sensational as any proceedings had in the Circuit Court here for quite a while, and it is remembered Edwards secured a judgment of $5,000 against Dean for the alienation of his wife's affection. This judgment was appealed from, and a second chapter added in the local court by the filing of a suit by Edwards against numerous defendants, whom he charged with assisting Dean to conceal his property to the end that the collection of his judgment might be defeated. This last suit will not come to a trial as the entire litigation from start to finish is to be dismissed, Dean having paid Edwards $800 and his costs accrued.

PARROTS are being put to a practical use in Germany. They have been introduced into the railway stations and trained to call out the name while the train stands there, thus saving the people the trouble of making inquiries.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT was born in Europe, died in Asia and was buried in Africa. The preparations for his funeral consumed two years time. The immense car containing the golden sarcophagus was drawn by 64 white mules, richly caparisoned, a distance of 1,000 miles, from the Euphrates to the Nile.

APROPOS of the czar's declaration for the disarmament of Europe, he is reported to have said, when a general assured him that the terrible catastrophe at his coronation was not so bad as a battle: "If I had my will there would be no more battles, and some day I may find the means to prevent them."

NEAR Wedowee, Ala., a child was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gladney a few days ago. The little one is absolutely limbless, having neither arms nor legs. He has a collar bone and little shoulders, but no semblance of arms, there being only slight flesh formations, not larger than the last joint of one's little finger. At the hips, where the legs should join, there is nothing whatever, except on one side a slight formation similar to those at the shoulder, and on the other a tiny attachment slightly resembling a little foot.

JAMES J. HILL, the already risen and now waxing star in the railroad world of the northwest, who is in the reported purchase of the Baltimore & Ohio, began life as a "mud clerk" on the Mississippi. He managed to keep his road, the Great Northern, out of the hands of the receiver in the crash which put all other northwestern roads over their heads in trouble, and has performed other feats that railroad men recognize as notable. He is always anxious to keep his doings out of the newspapers and has a record for success in that direction.

IN the royal picture gallery in Madrid there are 2,000 canvases, among which are some of the most beautiful pictures in the world. There are 10 paintings by Raphael, 46 by Murillo, 64 by Velasquez, 22 by Van Dyck, 63 by Rubens, 43 by Titian, 25 by Paul Veronese and 10 by Claude Lorraine. No one could hope to get together to-day such a collection, in which there is scarcely a picture that is not artistic work of the first class, and the writer who estimated that the 2,000 paintings are easily worth $200,000,000 spoke safely and is certainly well within reason.

A TIDAL STORM.

The Lowlands Surrounding Savannah Are Under Water for Miles.

About 15 Per Cent of the Rice Crop is Lost—Much Damage to Shipping—It is Feared the Loss of Life Was Very Heavy.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 3.—For 16 hours, from 8 o'clock Sunday morning until 6 o'clock Sunday night, Savannah has been in the grasp of a West Indian cyclone. During that time the wind blew steadily from fifty to seventy miles an hour. While the city escaped with comparatively little damage, the loss of property among the sea islands of the Georgia and South Carolina coasts is believed to be heavy. For miles in every direction around Savannah the lowlands along the rivers are submerged.

Only one fatality has so far been reported—the drowning of a Negro while attempting to reach the mainland from a small island near Thunderbolt—but heavy loss of life is feared on the South Carolina sea islands, where such fearful loss of life occurred during the great tidal storm of 1893. The conditions now are similar to those during that storm. Owing to the submerged country and the isolated location of the islands no news can be had from them until the water subsides. For eight miles north of Savannah the entire country is a lake with only the hammocks visible. At noon the water was eight feet above the highest tide. Driven on shore by the northeast storm it filled up on the islands, swept over banks and dams, carrying away the remnant of the rice crop that was left by the August storm and had not been gathered and wiping out farm crops. The loss to rice growers alone will be from $50,000 to $75,000. Of the entire rice crop along the Savannah river, valued at $250,000, all but 15 per cent. was lost in this and the preceding storm. The damage to shipping is considerable. The schooner Governor Ames, which was on her way to sea with a cargo of 1,500,000 feet of lumber went adrift in the harbor but was secured safely. The wharves at the quarantine station at the entrance to the river here were partially carried away. The quarantine officer and his family and servants were rescued early in the day by a tug. Four vessels which were at anchor at the station were torn from the moorings and driven into the marshes. Three of these were the British schooners Syanaram, bound for St. Johns, N. B., the American schooner Millville, for Millville, N. J., the Fannie L. Child, for Boston, all lumber laden, and the Italian bark Franklin. How badly these vessels are damaged is unknown. No news has been received from Tybee since early in the morning and nothing is known of the damage there.

At Thunderbolt and Isle of Hope, suburbs of Savannah, all the boat houses on the banks and hundreds of small boats were carried away.

Transport Senator at Honolulu.

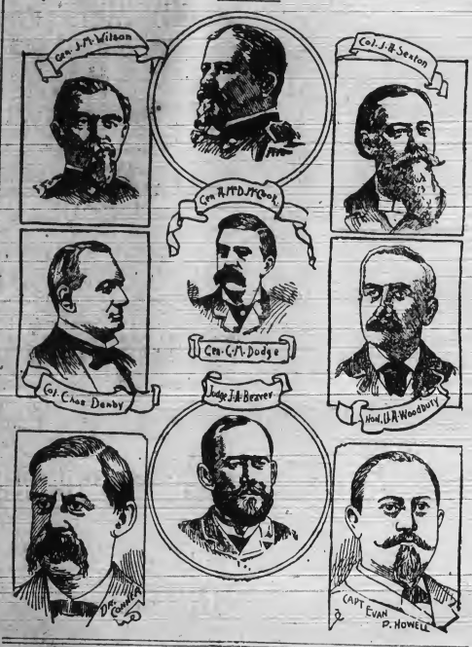
WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch to the war department announces that the transport Senator, long overdue at San Francisco from Manila, is undergoing repairs at Honolulu for damages which she suffered from a typhoon.

Dr. Nancy Guilford Arrested.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Dr. Nancy Guilford, the midwife of Bridgeport, Ct., who is wanted by the American police on the charge of having been connected with the death of Emma Gill, has been arrested.

THE EVACUATION OF CUBA.

It is Thought That it Will Have Been Accomplished by the Beginning of the New Year, if Not Sooner.



NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:

If the present plans are carried out it is expected that the evacuation of Cuba will have been completed by December 31 and the new year will see the American colors raised all over the island.

It is now believed the plans will be carried out, because advices from the military commission in Havana indicate that Spain will no longer contend for delay. It is said that the transports which took the prisoners from Santiago will promptly return to Cuba to facilitate a speedy evacuation. These transports have a capacity of 25,000. I am further informed that it is not likely that more than 60,000 or 75,000 soldiers will return to Spain.

The other 50,000 or 60,000 will remain, lay down their arms and become citizens of the island. This, it is considered, will be in no wise objectionable to this government. Secretary Alger has said that 50,000 or 60,000 United States troops will be stationed in Cuba, at points which will probably be decided upon within the [illegible] days. It is the plan of the administration not to concentrate any great number of troops in any one place. The army of occupation will probable consist of four infantry divisions and one cavalry division. The plan of keeping the 7th army corps together will doubtless be abandoned, and on this point Gen. Fitzhugh Lee has been in conference with Secretary Alger.

COMMISSION THAT WILL PROBE THE CONDUCT OF THE WAR.

DREYFUS DEMONSTRATION.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The holding of the Dreyfus demonstration organized by M. Pressence, one of the leaders in the agitation, for Sunday afternoon, was prevented by the closing of the Salle Wagram. Pressence and his friends tried to force an entrance and an uproar resulted. The police then intervened and arrested M. Pressence, M. Vaughan, editor of the Aurore, and Deputy Mory, amid shouts and countershouts of "Vive Revision," "Vive Armee," "Viva Zola," and "A bas les Juifs," and the crowd was dispersed. Several persons were injured. The persons taken into custody were subsequently released.

Slight disorders of a local nature, most of them in the vicinity of the Libre Parole, occurred during the evening. Several arrests were made.

A NEW WARSHIP.

Length on Load Water Line 368 Feet, Beam 72 Feet 2¼ Inches, Normal Displacement 11,535 Tons, Loaded, 12,325 Tons, Draft 25½ Feet.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Next Tuesday at 11 o'clock, there will glide off the ways at the yards of the Newport News Shipbuilding Co., the biggest, most powerful and probably the most generally effective battle ship in the United States navy. This will be the Illinois, which is expected by the naval designers to be a worthy god child of the state whose name she bears. Larger by a thousand tons than the Oregon; larger than the Iowa, now the biggest battle ship in service, the Illinois is still so designed that she will be able to enter any harbor open to the smaller battle ships, while in the matter of speed she will rank with any of them.

The dimensions of the Illinois are as follows: Length on load water line, 368 feet; beam, extreme, 72 feet 2½ inches; draft on normal displacement of 11,535 tons, 23 feet 6 inches. Maximum displacement, all ammunition and stores on board, 12,525 tons; maximum indicated horse power (estimated), 10,000; probable speed, 16½ knots. Normal coal supply, 800 tons, coal supply, loose storage, 1,200 tons.

The main battery will consist of four 13-inch breech-loading rifles in Hichborn balanced turrets, oval in shape and placed in the center line of the vessel, and 14 6-inch rapid-fire guns. The secondary battery will consist of 16 6-pounder rapid-fire guns, four 1-pounder rapid-fire guns, two Colt guns, and two field guns. She will carry four torpedo tubes. The 13-inch guns have an arc of fire of 133 degrees on each side of the center line, and the 6-inch an arc of 90 degrees on the broadside, with the advantage of those on the upper deck of a direct fire ahead and astern. Any injury to or near either of these six-inch guns, will be confined to its own compartment, as a 1½-inch steel splinter bulkhead separates each of these guns from its neighbor. The armor belt, which extends from the stem to abaft the after turret, is to be 10½ inches thick at the top and 9½ inches thick at the bottom, except at the forward end, where it will be tapered to four inches at the stem. This belt armor will extend from four feet below the normal load line to three and one-half feet above it, and will maintain the full thickness amidships between the turrets, and for the distance occupied by the engines and boilers. Diagonal armor, 12 inches thick, connecting this belt armor and barbettes, and extending from the slopes of protective deck to top of the side belt on each side is worked to give protection from a raking fire. Abaft the after turret the protection will be completed by thickening the protective deck to 4 inches on the slopes, with 2½ inches on the flat. On the slopes of this deck forward it is 3 inches thick and 2½ inches on the flat. The armor on the 13-inch gun turrets will be 17 inches in front and 13 inches on the rear and sides; while on the barbettes for these turrets, which are circular in shape, will be 15 inches on the front and 10 inches on the rear and sides. The sides of the vessel above the belt armor in wake of the six-inch battery, and forming the casemate, will be armored with 5½ inches of steel, extending between the turrets, with diagonal armor of same thickness at the ends, connecting with the barbettes, and worked above the 12-inch diagonal armor below. She will be protected against the entrance of water, in case of injury to the side at the water line, by cofferdams extending for the length of the vessel on each side, and having a general width of three feet, with total capacity of about 12,500 cubic feet, for stowage of fireproofed corn-pith cellulose. Independent of the numerous small water-tight pockets or cells forming the entire scheme of cofferdams, the inner bottom and hold, the platforms, splinter and berth decks, are divided into between 200 and 300 water tight compartments, both for the accommodation of the motive power and storage of coal, provisions, ammunition and other stores; and also for the preservation of the ship in the event of rupture of the outer skin, or injury in battle.

The first keel plate of this vessel was laid February 10, 1897, not quite 20 months past, and the percentage of work completed to this date, based on the vessel fitted out and ready for sea, is now reported between 53 and 54 per cent. The contract price was $2,395,000, and the date of completion is stated to be October 5, 1899.

Mad Dog Killed.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 3.—There appears to be a plague of mad dogs in the vicinity of the State hospital, where Dr. Todd was fatally bitten by a rabbid hound a month ago. It is supposed the dog that bit Dr. Todd turned himself loose in that locality and bit several canines. Two mad dogs were killed near there, making six in all since Dr. Todd was bitten. The residents are planning a wholesale slaughter of dogs, in order to rid the locality of the impending danger of hydrophobia.

Proposed Alliance with England.

If the United States and England should form an alliance, the combined strength would be so great that there would be little chance for enemies to overcome us. In a like manner, when men and women keep up their bodily strength with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, there is little chance for attack from disease. The old time remedy enriches the blood, builds up the muscles, steadies the nerves and increases the appetite. Try it.

TROOPS STATIONED IN PANA.

Three Hundred Striking Miners Hold Up a Train Conveying Negroes to Take Their Places—Sent Back.

TOWER HILL, Ill., Oct. 1.—Three hundred striking union miners from Pana Friday held up a special Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern train conveying 50 Washington, Ind., Negro miners to Pana to take the place of union miners. The Negroes were taken from the cars and compelled to walk back to Tower Hill, where they were locked in the depot until 10 o'clock Friday night. At that hour the Negroes were placed on board an eastbound train and taken back to Indiana at the expense of the Miners' union.

The hold-up of the train was perfectly executed and was a bold stroke on the part of the union miners. Engineer George Worsham, of Pana, was in charge of the train, and on being ordered brought the train to a stop. Union miners were all armed and masked. The engine was uncoupled from the coaches and run a short distance, the enginemen being kept under guard of guns. Masked men then entered the front doors of the train while their associates surrounded the coaches. The Negroes were then marched out back doors and walked down the track to Tower hill. News of the capture of the blacks being reached Sheriff Coburn at Pana, he sent an armed posse of deputies, including Negroes from Spring Side camp, towards this town to intercept the miners on their return. Sheriff Coburn's force had not arrived at a late hour. In case they fail to appear, the miners will remain here over night and take a roundabout way home. It is believed that a battle will be precipitated if the Coburn forces show up in this vicinity. The sheriff of this county refused to interfere with the union men.

PANA, Ill., Oct. 1.—Light Battery B, of Galesburg, arrived on a special train from Springfield Friday afternoon. The battery consists of two Gatling guns and 68 men with side arms and Springfield rifles in charge of Capt. Craig. Two camps of the Sons of Veterans from Aurora and Elgin, in command of Col. Hamilton, arrived Friday evening. They were equipped with guns at Springfield and mustered in as national guards.

Gov. Tanner's instructions to the troops before their departure from Springfield were to arrest all persons carrying arms, and hold such arms until further orders; protect citizens and their property, and maintain order, but lend no assistance to operators in operating their mines with imported labor.

The militia were in full charge of the city Friday night and are parading the business streets. The utmost quiet prevails.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 1.—Gov. Tanner conversed with Sheriff Coburn over the telephone Friday night and instructed the sheriff to withdraw his deputies at the mines there and turn the command over to Capt. Craig, who has now declared marshal law in Pana. Capt. Craig will at once carry out Gov. Tanner's orders to disarm all those carrying weapons.

Hay at once took his place at the cabinet table, and in a few minutes the regular Friday cabinet meeting was in progress.

FOREST FIRES.

Timber Domain of Colorado Devastated at a Rapid Rate.

The Fires Are Now Nearly Three Hundred Miles in Circumference With Glenwood for a Center—Mountain Ranges All Ablaze.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 1.—The weather man can afford no hope for those on the western slope whose homes and crops are threatened by the forest fires. There are no indications whatever of rain, and this seems to be the only element able to stay the flames' fury.

Throughout Eagle county high winds have prevailed, giving a fresh impetus to the forest fires that are devastating the timber domain.

In consequence new territory is being devoured. The blaze is rapidly extending along the grand reserves of Girard mountain, west of Homestake creek, and from present appearances will sweep the country to Bear mountain at Minturn.

Back of Minturn to the heads of Willow and Two Elk the country is destitute of timber, little remaining to feed the flames. From Hoosier mountain the fire has driven the fire to the edge of Gypsum creek. The settlers of Upper Gypsum, Gannon, Collins and others are fighting desperately to save their homes and stop its passage across into the magnificent forests of West Brush. If it gets into Brush the finest body of timber in the state is gone. No loss of life has been reported, but several people have lost their homes and their crops.

All the game is leaving the country, escaping the smoke and heat of the blazing woods.

Dispatches received here say that Wheyley's peak, between North and Middle park, is now a mass of flames, and it is greatly feared that they will extend to both of those beautiful camping grounds. The fire has already cut a swath 35 miles long, from the Grand river almost to Dillon, in Summit county. The width is as yet unknown. Kremmlin, in Grand county, has had a narrow escape, and the danger is not yet entirely over.

The fires around Aspen are working down the mountain side toward town, although they are not burning with the force they have been.

Battlement government reserve, bounded by the Grand river on the north, Roaring Fork on the east and the Gunnison on the west, is a mass of flame. This reserve runs through the counties of Garfield, Delta and Mesa.

The big White river government reserve, starting in Garfield county and extending through the Routt and Rio Blanco, is also on fire.

Reliable reports show that the fires are now nearly three hundred miles in circumference with Glenwood for a center, and practically every mountain range with timber is ablaze.

The only cessation of the fire that is reported comes from Cottonwood and Four Mile creeks, where the flames have consumed everything that will burn on the mountain sides.

Navy Estimates for the Coming Year.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Secretary of the Navy Long has received estimates from his subordinates regarding the amounts they deem necessary for the operation of their respective departments during the coming fiscal year. Their figures foot up to $47,000,000, the largest peace estimate which has ever been submitted.

An Old Trick.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 1.—Two railroad men, D. W. Rice and T. J. Harper, brakeman and conductor, respectively, are locked up at the county jail in default of $1,000 bail each, to have their cases investigated by the United States grand jury next December. Both are charged with having attempted to pass on a Sandusky druggist what purported to be a $10 bill, which in reality was but a $1, upon which the figures had been pasted to make it appear as a $10 bill.

PHILIPPINE CONSTITUTION.

Aguinaldo Provides for Four Secretaries to Control the Islands, With Himself as President.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—A dispatch to the Herald from Washington says: Senor Agoncillo, the Philippine representative, who has come to Washington to ask that the insurgents be heard by the peace commissioners at Paris, has made public a translation of the Philippine constitution, which Aguinaldo was to have proclaimed at Malolos Friday. By this constitution Aguinaldo formally renounces the title of dictator and assumes that of president of the revolutionary government of the Philippines. He provides for four secretaries—the secretary of state, marine and commerce; the secretary of war and public works; the secretary of police, interior, justice, public instruction and health and the secretary of finance, agriculture and industry. A congress is provided for, to be composed of representatives of all the provinces of the archipelago. An important feature of the constitution, in view of the probability that Aguinaldo will try to obtain recognition from European governments, is that part describing the duties of the secretary of state. It provides:

The office of secretary of state shall be divided into three departments, for diplomacy, for marine and for commerce. The department of diplomacy will study and transact all business concerning the direction of diplomatic matters and negotiations with foreign powers The department of marine shall study and transact all business in reference to the formation and organization of a navy and the organization and equipment of such expeditions as may be desired by the revolutionary governments in carrying out its purposes and designs. The department of commerce will transact all business pertaining to trade, both internal and external, and all preliminary work for the making of commercial treaties with foreign nations.

Spanish Commissioners Instructed Not to Yield Up Manila and Luzon.

Americans Instructed to Insist on Spain Ceding the Whole of the Island of Luzon to Us—Separation of Church and State.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The United States peace commission held another conference Thursday morning after which, accompanied by the United States ambassador, Gen. Horace Porter, they drove to the foreign office, where the commissioners met and breakfasted with the Spanish commissioners. In addition to the commissioners and the ambassadors, the ministers of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, had invited the three head officials of the French foreign office, the first secretaries of the embassies and Gen. Negron, secretary of the Elysee palace.

The French newspapers continue to comment upon the difficulties which the two commissions will have to face by reason of their divergent instructions, beyond which, it is said, they can not go.

Gil Blas says:

"The Spanish government has given its commissioners very precise instructions. They are to do their utmost to have it admitted that there can be no question of disputing the rights of Spanish sovereignty over Manila, the island of Luzon and the rest of the archipelago, outside of the naval stations which Spain will cede at the Marianne islands.

"On the other side, the American commission, before leaving President McKinley, received from him very precise instructions, from which the commissioners can not depart.

"The following is the text of their instructions:

"'First—Spain cedes absolute sovereignty over the whole of the island of Luzon.

"'Second—The other islands of the Archipelago will be replaced under the dominion of Spain on condition that a liberal government is accorded to the inhabitants.

"'Third — Complete separation of church and state in the Philippines.

"'Fourth—Spain can not cede any other islands in the group to any foreign power without America's consent.

"'Fifth—The United States shall enjoy for all time the same commercial privileges as the most favored nations, not excepting Spain herself.'"

The Gil Blas concludes by remarking:

"It is, therefore, to be feared that for unhappy Spain the negotiations which open on the first of October will give no satisfaction."

VERY MYSTERIOUS KILLING.

A Farmer Murdered in a Cold-Blooded Manner by an Unknown Cyclist Near Oswego, Ill.

OSWEGO, Ill., Oct. 1.—Christopher Henney, a poor farmer, whose home on a leasehold is near Bristol, was murdered by an unknown cyclist on a roadway which runs through a stretch of lonely wood, a mile and a half from this town. The killing was of a most cold-blooded character.

Henney had spent the afternoon in Aurora and passed through Oswego about 6 o'clock. He was alone and had scarcely entered the bush road when he was confronted by the cyclist, who declared: "Now, I've got you," and fired point blank at the form. Then the assassin rode speedily away. The bullet struck Henney in the abdomen inflicting a wound from which he died in a few hours.

THEY ARE BEING SENT NORTH

All Sick at Ponce to Be Sent to the United States as Soon as They are Able to Travel.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. — The war department has posted the following: "The president has given instructions that all sick at Porto Rico be sent north as soon as they are able to travel with safety, his purpose being to relieve Gen. Brooke of the further care of the sick and at the same time enable the men to receive the treatment obtainable in the better appointed home hospitals. These men will be furloughed as in the cases of those returning from Santiago. About 700 left Friday on the Relief and Missouri."

Johns, who was killed by a highwayman in this city last March, has succeeded in effecting a compromise with the insurance companies in which Mr. Johns held policies at the time of his death. The deceased carried policies amounting to $15,000, but the consideration of the compromise was $9,850. Miss Johns is the only heir.

THEY SEIZED THE TOWN.

Striking Miners From Pana, Ill., Take Possession of Washington, Ind., and Drive Out the Negroes—One Shot.

WASHINGTON, Ind., Oct. 2.—This city was in a great state of excitement Sunday night. One hundred and fifty coal miners from Pana, Ill., came here Sunday afternoon and met with the home union miners and organized. At 10 o'clock Sunday night they got together and, masked, visited all the shacks where the colored coal miners lived. About fifty of the Negroes were corralled and at the points of revolvers were driven out of town.

One Negro refused to go and the miners fired on him. He has not been found and may be killed.

The police could do nothing.

One brave policeman, Anderson Cannon, went up to the whole mob and demanded of them to disperse. They answered by leveling their pistols at him.

The masked miners took the town. Chief of Police Call turned in the fire alarm and called out the citizens to assist in keeping peace.

Several are deputized, and if there is a new outbreak of [illegible] bloodshed is likely to result. At 1:30 a. m. the streets were covered with people. The masked men have hidden themselves, possibly to make an attack on other Negro shacks. There are possibly fifty Negroes who declare they will die before they leave town.

Everything was quiet within the city at 1:30 Monday morning. Small groups of strangers are seen in different parts of the town, and the police believe this means more trouble. The masked miners are believed to have gone to the mines two miles southeast of the city, where more of the Negroes are living, with the intention of driving them out. It is said they are bent on killing C. C. Rowland, the white boss. Shots have been heard in that direction for the last half hour, and there may be a battle. The Negroes are armed at the mines and are well protected. It is impossible at this hour to get any news directed from the mines.

FIVE MEN ASSASSINATED.

Four Men Killed and Another Mortally Wounded as a Result of a Feud in Tennessee.

MURFREESBORO, Tenn., Oct. 2.—An awful tragedy occurred in the north portion of Cannon county, about 30 miles east of this city, in which five men are reported to have been savagely assassinated. John Hollingsworth killed a man by the name of Higgins in that county something over a year ago. A suit was brought against Hollingsworth and a judgment taken against him by the members of Higgins family for $5,000. Saturday there was to be an auction sale of his property to satisfy this judgment and Hollingsworth, it is stated, knowing that that was the day for the sale concealed himself and several of his friends in a large barn on the place where the sale was to be. When the party of men came to carry out the proceeding and had gathered in the barn, Hollingsworth and his friends fired into them with double-barrel shotguns, killing four men and wounding another so badly that he will hardly recover.

A telephone message has been received from Woodbury, Cannon county, stating that the Cannon county murderer and assassin, James Hollingsworth, has been shot and severely wounded. A crowd of 60 men have him located and expected to capture him Sunday night, together with his accomplices.

WELCOME SNOW AND RAIN.

The Forest Fires in Colorado Checked, and It is Thought Further Destruction of Timber is Prevented.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 2.—Snow and rain have checked the progress of the forest fires on the main range in Colorado, and it is now thought that further destruction of timber is prevented. At least all danger to the threatened towns is over. The temperature here has fallen perceptibly and dispatches from the mountain towns indicate a similar fortunate change. At present nothing like a correct estimate of the damage done can be given and it will be days before an accurate statement of the losses by the fire that have been raging for a week or more can be made.

The Governor has been informed by Circuit Judge Brown, of the Clay county district, that soldiers protection will not be needed at the trial of members of the Baker faction there next month. To satisfy himself further the Governor has written to several others, including the Sheriff of the county. The Bakers still maintain that they will be mobbed if not protected by troops.

In the Franklin circuit court Judge Cantrill publicly rebuked a jury for a verdict returned by it and closed by setting the verdict aside. In excoriating them the Judge said that ordinarily it took only twelve men to form a verdict, but in this case it took thirteen; that the case on trial was so plain that the jury should have had no difficulty whatever in finding for the defendant, and that the verdict rendered was ridiculous.

Top dressing in the fall is an excellent way to treat the wheat and preserve the manure from loss. Wheat land that has been plowed in the fall is loose and the rains carry the soluble portions of the manure down instead of allowing them to wash off the surface, the roots of the wheat for other fall crop, following the plant food and absorbing it.

At the recent meeting in Boston for the Promotion of Agricultural Science, it was stated that the English sparrow eats the caterpillar of the browntail moth with avidity. It would seem to have met this moth in England and to have acquired an appetite for it, has doubtless kept it in check there, and may do so here. At last the use of the much-maligned English sparrow has been discovered.

The demand among the farmers for all grades of cattle is more active now than for several years. There has been a constant demand for first class cattle, but not until recently have scrubs and mountain cattle been wanted at any price. The abundant yield of feed of all kinds has made the cattle market active. They are selling for nearly or quite as much as at this time last year, but farmers with whom we have talked say there is much more profit in cattle now than in any other branch of stock raising.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Some Plain Facts.

Grave errors, injustice, wrongs of greater or less degree, arise from lack of knowledge of the truth, and more frequently from deception.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1898. NO. 51.

Attention, Walton Democrats!

The Democrats of the Walton precinct are requested to meet in mass convention at Walton, Saturday, October 22d, 1898, at 3:30 p. m. for the purpose of choosing a member of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee. Said meeting will be called to order by Squire J. C. Byland, who will preside until a permanent chairman shall be chosen. D. E. CASTLEMAN,
Chmn Boone Co., Dem. Ex. Com.

THE battle ship, Illinois, launched one day, last week, is destined to be a terror of equal dignity with the Oregon.

SOME claim that the delegates composing the convention at Newport, last Saturday, stretched their authority some.

THE red-skins up in Minnesota are harder fighters than the Spanish. They have no navy for Uncle Sam to destroy as an intimidation.

GEN. SHAFTER says that he is willing to tell all he knows about the Santiago campaign, but there are those who say he knows very little about the affair in that locality.

THE Court of Appeals has decided that the separate coach law in this State is constitutional. The opinion was unanimous, and was handed down by Judge Guffy, Republican.

THE colored brother, of Lexington, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in that district was, practically ignored, and he now sighs, "it was ever thus."

THE race in this Congressional district is now on, the last entry having been made at Newport by the Democrats last Saturday. The Democrats know what their duty is and will perform it in November.

IT now looks very much like W. J. Bryan will be re-nominated for the Presidency before the next Democratic national convention assembles. All the convention will have to do in that case will be to ratify the action of the rank and fill of the party.

IT is said that Senator Lindsay and ex-Gov. Buckner held a convention in Frankfort, a few days since, and resolved that they would return to the Democratic party, and Senator Lindsay has registered as a plain Democrat. As long as the candle continues to burn the vilest sinner may return.

COL. BERRY has secured his fourth nomination as the Democratic standard bearer in this Congressional district, an honor that but few Congressmen are given. He has made a good Congressman, and even those who oppose his nomination the strongest admit that he has done more for his constituents than any man this district ever sent to represent it at Washington.

THE colored voters at Louisville took very little interest in the registration last week. Some of them registered as Democrats. The registration shows 17,917 Democrats; 10,479 Republicans, and 4,801 noncommittals. This gives the Democrats a plurality of 7,438 and a majority of 2,683. Last year's registration was 46,424, and the Democratic plurality, 6,042.

WE are in receipt of a copy of a new work entitled, "The Masonry of the Bible," by Rev. E. F. Hurd, of Warsaw. It is a neatly printed and bound volume, that every Mason should have in his library, and is the result of a deep and extensive research, on the part of the author, for biblical facts pertaining to masonry, which are placed before the reader in a most attractive style. It merits the persual by everyone be he or not a Mason.

THE RECORDER has received for publication a lengthy article from the caustic pen of Dr. B. A. Dulancy a sterling Democrat of Florence, who goes after the Kenton and Campbell county political schemers in a most energetic manner. The article reflects the sentiments of Boone county Democrats, but as the next Congressman from this district was named last Saturday by the Newport convention, the RECORDER is confident that Dr. Dulaney will agree with it in saying that the little family differences should now be passed and all Democrats put their shoulders to the wheel for the purpose of rolling up for the nominee a majority larger than ever before given him, and that the publication of his article just at this time would not assist in that work.

The following is taken from the Odd Fellows' Review, published at St. Paul Minnesota, and pays a just compliment to J. Frank Grant, who is now serving his second term as Secretary of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows:

In November last, Washington Lodge No. 1, instituted in 1819, by Wildey, her first Noble Grand, the Alma Mater of the entire Order, once the depository of all authority in Odd Fellowship in this country, and afterwards by free gift, the creator of the Grand Lodge of the United States, and through it of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, was sick nigh unto death. Her money was all gone and her membership had dwindled to twenty-seven very despondent, aged and feeble men (one of them, Bro. Lawton, initiated July 2d, 1832, and over ninety-three years old). The other lodges of Maryland had helped her from time to time, but no permanent betterment had resulted. If this grand old historic lodge had then been suffered to go down in death with all her glorious memories, it would have been to the eternal shame of Odd-Fellows everywhere. The supreme moment had arrived and with it the man. Bro. J. Frank Grant, a Bayard of Odd Fellows, saw his duty and did it. He withdrew from his own strong lodge in Kentucky, deposited his card in this old tottering lodge and went to work with might, main and money. Although an almost total stranger, in Baltimore, he added in a little over six months more than seventy per cent. to her membership, largely of young men, filled with his own elan, and the slogan is still "Excelsior." Every obligation has been met to date, and a respectable balance is in the treasury. Don't worry any more about Washington Lodge No. 1; Grant is there.

The following resolutions were adopted by the State convention of colored citizens at Louisville, last week:

Whereas, the rights of the negro, civil and legal, should be granted without hesitation, and there is not, nor has there been, any just or equitable reason for the passage of special laws directed at the negro, all such laws are unjust and show either prejudice upon the part of the whites or fear of the negro. The first is unworthy of a brave and generous Christian people; the second has no basis or foundation upon which to rest. Our past is appealed to as evidence of our obedience to law. This convention earnestly asks the repeal of any and all laws now in operation that are special in their character, directed solely at the negro. We ask no special laws in our favor, and we solemnly protest that none be passed against us. The doctrine of equality to all and exclusive privileges to none is a sound one, and should be followed.

Whereas, Men of our race have been lynched in this State when they had only been accused of crime ranging from simple petit larceny to murder and rape, and as some members of the bar even favor lynching, we are indeed amazed. Even this might be borne, though deplored, but when ministers of the Gospel of Jesus find it their duty to lynch a negro, we have no words fitted to express our indignation. The future of Kentucky depends upon the supremacy of the law. A reign of disorder and lawlessness is injurious to all national interests and blighting to the future of the State. We shudder with horror at these lawless acts, and their continuation necessarily makes us apprehensive of the future. It is a sad reflection upon the State of Kentucky that any man should be lynched within her borders. Therefore be it

Resolved, That the wrongs, oppression and evils under which we labor should be met with a stern, uncompromising but intelligent opposition, and that we indorse an organized and united effort on the part of the negro race looking toward an improved sociological and economical condition, and that agitation along high, humanitarian lines should be earnest and unswerving, and that we only ask an equal opportunity to aspire to those higher ideals of citizenship and manhood.

Resolved, That we appeal on the high grounds of morality, justice and right to the noble manhood and chivalry of Kentucky to preserve those lofty and fundamental principles of honor and right for which their illustrious sires and brothers bled and died.

It will not be long now before a candidate for representative will be presenting his claims to the voters of this county.

HON. A. S. BERRY.

He Is Again Chosen by the Democrats of the Sixth District to Congress.

The Congressional Convention met in Newport, last Saturday, and nominated Col. Berry for reelection by acclamation. The convention was called to order by J. M. Lassing, and Senator Goebel was elected chairman. Hon. W. H. Baker's name was not presented to the convention.

The following platform was adopted:

Time has not changed, but intensified over the opposition to the single gold standard, because of its tendency to make the rich man richer and the poor man poorer, day by day.

We are in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, without the consent or approval of any other nation.

We hereby reaffirm our allegiance to the fearless leader, William Jennings Bryan, our nominee in 1900.

We indorse the candidacy of Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn for United States Senator to succeed Hon. William Lindsay.

We unqualifiedly indorse the Goebel election bill, and its provisions therein as a means of giving each political party a fair expression at the ballot box.

The Sixth Congressional District, as one man, presents to the Democrats of Kentucky as its nominee for Governor Hon. William Goebel and pledge ourselves to secure his nomination.

We approve the course of the Hon. A. S. Berry, in the Fifty-fourth Congress of the United States, as an evidence of our appreciation of his distinguished services rendered by him while our representative in Congress.

The above resolutions were adopted without discussion.

The counties were then called for nominations. Boone was the first on the list, and D E. Castleman arose and spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen of the Convention:—The county of Boone, ever faithful to her worthy sons—ever the advocate of good government, and respectable politics, has with unanimity averred her fealty to a leader in the rattling skirmish preliminary to the "battle royal," which will mark the close of the nineteenth century. By the voice of her Democracy, unstifled and free, she endorsed a gentleman of acknowledged ability, of ripened wisdom, of stainless character, and whose democracy is as pure and canstant as the perennial fountains gushing from her never changing hills. Oh! Gallatin and Pendleton, Trimble, Carroll and Grant, how gladly would we have gathered you together as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings and ye would not. Now, therefore, "Behold your house is left desolate," and it becomes my duty to say that the banner county of the Sixth Congressional District, the only one whose forces can overcome the Republican majority on this side of the Licking, has no candidate to present; but, when this body shall have made a nomination, as Boone has done for so many monotonous years past "that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," even so will she do again, and her Democracy, unpurchable, will lead this convention's choice out of Campbell's Republican wilderness into the Democratic Canaan, which lieth far beyond the Jordan.

At the conclusion of Mr. Castleman's speech the call of the counties was resumed, no candidate being presented, until Grant was reached when Judge Westover took the floor and in a strong speech, put Col. A. S. Berry in nomination. The nomination was greeted with tremendous applause. Mr. Baily, of Campbell county, seconded the nomination of Col. Berry in a neat speech. D. E. Castleman moved that Col. Berry be nominated by acclamation, and Dr. Furnish seconded the motion, which was carried with a whoop, and Col. Berry was so nominated without further ceremony. The nominee was then conducted to the stage, where he thanked the convention for the nomination, and the convention adjourned, the delegates reassemblying at Col. Berry's residence as soon thereafter as possible, and were banquetted in royal style.

W. P. Thorn, of Henry county, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, was present, and while the convention was waiting for the committee on resolutions to report, he was called on for a speech, and responded in his characteristic, humorous way.

R. F. Peak, of LaGrange, candidate for Attorney-General, was present and delivered a fine speech.

Committee on Resolutions—J. G. Furnish, Boone; H. W. Foreman, Carroll; T. M. Hill and J. T. Hodge, Campbell; B. F. Menefee, Grant, R. B. Brown, Gallatin; P. H. Simpson, Pendleton; S. T. Ravenscraft, Pendleton; L. F. Derfoss, Trimble, J. L. Elliston, M. T. Shine, Wm. C. Heil, Kenton.

Permanent Organization—T. F, Curley, Boone; Eli Clotten, Carroll; John C. Draddy and James M. Shaw, Campbell J. F. Pointz, Grant; S. C. Farley, Gallatin; M. C. Morgan, Trimble; D. A. Glenn, W. C. Threlkeld and Francis Hanlon, of Kenton.

Aguinaldo's man, Agoncillo, who left Washington, last week, is as good at concealing his disappointment as a professional gambler. Although he has received from the administration neither promise nor recognition, he is out with a published statement declaring himself pleased with what he has accomplished in Washington, and announcing his intention to go to Paris to lay the claims of the insurgents before the Peace Commission, and his belief that the independence of the Philippines is assured. If he doesn't succeed in getting more attention paid to Aguinaldo's claims in Paris than they have received in Washington, he is wasting his own time and somebody's money by going over there, and there isn't the slightest probability that he will. The American Commission will have their orders from Washington long before he gets there.

Another very decided difference of opinion between the War Department, and Gen. Miles, commander of the army, has become known. Secretary Alger has repeatedly said that volunteers who have not been ordered mustered out would be kept in service to do garrison duty in Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines for an indefinite period. Senator Berry, of Ark., who has been trying to get some Arkansas volunteers mustered out, was also told that by Alger. Senator Berry then went to see Gen. Miles, and was told by him that it was not intended that volunteers should do garrison duty to any extent, and that he was absolutely certain that all of the volunteers would be mustered out shortly after the treaty of peace was signed.

Charles Chambers has filed suit in the Kenton circuit court against James Disque for $10,000 damages. Chambers alleges that by reason of a mistake made by Disque in compounding a prescription calling for glycerine and carbolic acid, to be used on a slight wound on one of his fingers, he had to have the finger amputated. The plaintiff further alleges that he is unable to follow his occupation as millwright.

The Democratic campaign will be opened in Campbell county on next Saturday evening. Colonel A. S. Berry will under the auspices of the Patriots of America, deliver a speech at the courthouse square. Squire M. F. Donelan will preside over the meeting.

Two more Kentucky officers have gotten themselves into trouble by going over to Indiana and killing a man and a woman whom they wanted to arrest.

Kentucky Crop Report.

For the October report replies were received from 147 correspondents, representing 103 counties.

CORN—The corn crop has been further benefitted during September. Late corn, which usually is cut off by the closing of the season, is, this year, as well matured as early corn. The warm rains have, however, kept corn in a sappy condition and a number of complaints have been received of damage in shock, caused by heating. Grasshoppers, in the western section particularly, have stripped the stalks of their blades, and in some instances this has occurred early enough to cause damage to the grain. Local wind storms have blown the corn down badly in the western and southwestern sections and the hot weather and rains have caused all ears touching the ground to rot.

The estimated average yield is 32 bushels per acre for the State. The average yield for 1897 was estimated at 23 bushels per acre. By sections the yield averages 31 bushels for the Western, 35 for the north central and 27 bushels for the southeastern section. Very few counties report the crop not as good as anticipated earlier.

TOBACCO—The great improvement in the tobacco crop noted in the report of September 1st has continued throughout the month of September, and the crop is reported mainly housed in good condition. A very small per cent. remains uncut, and with favorable weather in the next few days this will be saved. Widely varying views are expressed regarding the acreage housed this year, but the opinion is general that where the stand is an average one the yield per acre is one of the heaviest produced. The estimated average yield per acre is 740 pounds for the Burley district and 805 pounds for the Dark tobacco district. The weather during the month has not been favorable for proper curing and a great number of reports of "house-burning" are received. Some of the finest crops in Woodford county are said to be ruined by rust.

LIVE STOCK—The condition of live stock, with the exception of some disease in localities, is in keeping with the excellent condition of pasturage. Cattle and horses are in fine flesh. The abundant grazing and fine corn crop has increased the demand for cattle to such an extent that correspondents report the younger classes of this stock are not to be had at any price. An epidemic of "Bloody Murrain" is reported in Estill county, confined to "yearlings" and calves, and from which many of these have died. No losses had occurred during the past few days, the disease was apparently checked. Pinkeye is reported in the counties of Henderson and Jessamine, and distemper is prevalent among horses and mules in Fulton county. Scab prevails to some extent among sheep in Kenton county, and in Madison county numbers of sheep have died from the effects of a grub produced by the egg of a certain fly deposited in the nostril of the animal.

THE time is so short that the candidates for Congress in this district can not make much of an enthusiasting tour among the voters. Few speeches will be made to country audiences by the two standard bearers.

THE Indians will not last long when the blue coats get them out of the bushes.

THE soldiers stationed at camp Hamilton are giving Lexington people considerable excitement. A few nights since a provost guard shot and killed a soldier who refused to halt on the street. The regiment to which the soldier who was killed, belonged, decided to avenge the death of their comrade, and organized and started to Lexington to lynch his murderer, and it took hard work on the part of the officers to prevent them from carrying out their designs.

TO JUDGE by the numerous photographs and cuts of the late empress of Austria one would have thought her a brunette. On the contrary, she was a decided blonde, and her beautiful hair won for her in early days the name of "Goldelse," or "Elizabeth of the golden locks."

ENGLAND has now reinstated nearly all the culprits in the Jameson raid. Col. Frank Rhodes, who was wounded at Omdurman while acting as correspondent for the London Times, has been restored to his former position in the army, and Sir Graham Bowers, who, as colonial secretary at the Cape, came out badly from the investigation, has received an equally lucrative post at Mauritius.

IT IS interesting to recall the extraordinary longevity of the three founders of the German empire. William I. was 91, Moltke was also 91 and Bismarck was 83. But, indeed, all the most illustrious Germans of the latter half of the century have been long lived. Ranke was 91, Curtius was 72, Mommsen was 81. The poet Giebel was 70, Wagner was 70, Liszt 75, and the present chancellor is 77.

A DEPARTMENT store bill passed by Denver aldermen will abolish these places. A store selling dry goods, clothing, furniture, crockery, millinery, shoes, athletic goods, books and pictures, very few departments for one of the big Denver stores, would have to pay a license of $23,601 per annum, and each department added, no matter how insignificant, would be just $5,000 added to the license amount of the firm.

THE reports of the asylum at Cairo, Egypt, as to the native patients there exhibiting the nature of the mental disturbance associated with the excessive use of hasheesh are said to show some remarkable facts, it appearing that in 41 per cent. of all the male patients hasheesh alone, or in combination with alcohol, caused the mental symptoms, while this was the case with only seven per cent. of the females.

GOLD is now extracted by mixing the ore with common salt and sulphuric acid, then adding a solution of permanganate of potash. Hydrochloric acid is formed, and chlorine is liberated to combine with the gold-forming chloride of gold. This new method as employed at Mt. Morgan, Queensland, and is said to have advantages over the amalgamation and cyanide processes. It is more searching than mercury, and can be applied to ores containing copper.

SIGNOR ALESSIO CORADINA, an Italian pianist, is said to have invented a system of arranging piano chords so that they can not lose the tension imparted to them or get out of tune on account of the weather. The invention affects all the chords alike, and preserves their harmonic distances from each other in such a way that, though it may be possible for the whole pitch of a pianoforte to rise or to fall, it is impossible for any single note to get out of tune. The apparatus is simple, and is said to be applicable to all kinds of pianos.

A WELL-KNOWN American woman was doing the cathedral cities of England this summer. Throughout her tour she wore a tiny American flag pinned to the waist of her traveling dresses. A good many of the English people whom she met did not understand or pretended not to understand what the flag stood for. "You belong to some secret society, I perceive," said an English woman to whom she was introduced, pointing to the diminutive Starry Banner. "Yes," responded the American woman amiably, "there are 70,000,000 of us."

THE costliest metals are: Calcium, which is worth $1,800 a pound. Cirium is a shade higher; its cost is $160 an ounce, or $1,920 per pound. These begin to look like fabulous prices, but they do not reach the highest point, thromium being $300. Cobalt falls to about half the price of silver, while didymium, the metal isolated by Mosander, is the same price as calcium. Then comes gallium, which is worth $2,250 an ounce. With this metal the highest price is reached, and it may well be called the rarest and most precious of metals.

HENRI MOISSAN, who recently succeeded in preparing metal with metallic calcium, has just discovered a new compound of this metal with hydrogen. This compound is formed by heating metal calcium to a dark red in an atmosphere of hydrogen. Its most remarkable property lies in the fact that when thrown into water it decomposes with violence, pure hydrogen being given off. It is possible that this reaction may prove of some industrial importance, as has that in which acetylene is produced by the action of the water on calcium carbide.

American Military Commission Entertain the Spanish Commission.

Spanish Steamer Montserrat and Colon Are Expected at Havana on the 12th for the Purpose of Carrying Spanish Troops Back to Spain.

HAVANA, Oct. 5.—(Delayed in transmission)—The American military commission will entertain the Spanish military commission at lunch next Sunday at the Troacha hotel, Vedado.

The Spanish commissioners yesterday officially notified the American commissioners that owing to a hurricane the vessels which were sent to Manzanillo have been unable to reach there at the appointed time, which will delay the evacuation of that place by the Spanish troops.

The United States transport Resolute, which took a special commission to Puerto Principe, is expected to return here to-day from Nuevitas, but at sundown she has not arrived.

Gen. Mayi Rodriguez, commanding the Cuban troops in the western department of this island, gave a luncheon to-day to the delegates appointed to attend the convention October 10. After luncheon the delegates came to Havana. They will leave this province to-morrow morning via Batabano.

Various law points were discussed yesterday by the joint commission, which decided to leave them to the decision of the Paris peace commission. The Spanish commissioners were questioned regarding the armament and equipment of the irregular, provisional and volunteer troops on the island. Regarding the artillery, some of which is said to have been dismounted, the Spanish commissioners suggested that the ordnance be appraised and sold, claiming it was to the interest of both countries to save the exorbitant freight and other charges of remounting new guns.

The Spanish steamer Marie Christine, which sails from here on October 10, will take over 300 officers and their families, in addition to a number of sick soldiers.

The Spanish steamers Montserrat and Colon, which are expected here on October 12, will be the next transports to carry troops back to Spain.

Within the next few days steamers which left Spain some time ago should arrive at Gibara, province of Santiago de Cuba, and embark the Spanish troops from Holguin and Camaguey.

SUBIG BAY, PHILIPPINES.

May Also Be Retained by the United States—Dewey Has Made a Strong Recommendation to That Effect.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Dewey has not suggested that the whole Philippine group be retained by the United States, it is said, but has called attention to one very important consideration which has seemed to escape general observation up to this time, and which has been laid before the American commissioners. That is, that with all the advantages in a commercial way possessed by Manila the place is indefensible unless Subig bay be also held by the United States.

This particular bay is, on the whole, regarded as being a superior strategic point of view to Manila bay and the Spanish government has evidently been of the same mind, for before the outbreak of hostilities it was about to embark upon an extensive scheme of defensive works in Subig bay.

German View of France's Troubles.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—With regard to the imminence of a political crisis in France and the possible overthrow of the government, the German press dwells on the opportunity for a "man of action" to assert his leadership and force himself to the head of the French nation. The Berlin Neueste Nachrichten sees this man in Count Louis Napoleon, whose visit to France from Russia at this time, it regards as most significant.

Work of Mercy.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 7.—Dr. C. I. Cullen, of Cincinnati, was nearly drowned while saving the lives of patients in the Third division hospital at Fernandina, which was flooded by the hurricane. There is no definite report of lives lost as yet.

They Want Their Pay.

HAVANA, Oct. 7.—Six hundred employes of the Havana arsenal have struck unless they shall be paid wages due them for five months back. Troops are clamoring for back pay.

THE M'KINLEYS IN CANTON.

They Arrived Sunday Morning for the Purpose of Attending the Funeral of George D. Saxton, Mrs. McKinley's Brother.

CANTON, O., Oct. 10.—The home coming of President and Mrs. McKinley Sunday morning for the funeral of Mr. George D. Saxton was attended with a most touching and pathetic scene at the Pennsylvania station. Many people were at the depot when the train arrived and extended the party a silent but sympathetic and reverent welcome.

Mr. M. Barber, the president's brother-in-law, was at the station with several friends of the family and Dr. Braunfelter, who was called to take charge of Private John Barber, the sick soldier. President and Mrs. McKinley were first out of the car and were assisted by Mr. George B. Frease through the station to the carriage in waiting. As they approached, the crowd with heads uncovered and bowed silently, opened a passageway through which they passed. Mrs. McKinley was supported by the arm of the president with the care and close attention he always devotes to her personal comfort. He walked slowly to the carriage, his head bowed and his face a little paler than usual.

The president and party went direct to the Barber home, which is the old Saxton homestead, and was the Canton home of the McKinleys during his life in congress. Mrs. McKinley soon laid down for a little rest, and at 1:30 dinner was served to the family. Mrs. McKinley showed evidence of the sufferings from the shock and of fatigue from the journey, but bore up remarkably well and was able to be about the house.

The funeral arrangements of George Saxton were concluded soon after the arrival of the party. They are to be held from the Barber home at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and will be private. Rev. O. B. Milligan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate and the remains will be attended by Judge George E. Baldwin, Hon. William A. Lynch, Postmaster George B. Frease, J. H. Kenney and Attorneys David E. Smith and James J. Grant as pallbearers. Interment will be in Westlawn cemetery in the Saxton family lot.

The train bearing the cabinet and other officials from Washington to the Omaha exposition will arrive in Canton Monday evening, and about 9 o'clock the private car of the president will be attached and he will join the party. Mrs. McKinley, it is not thought, will undertake the trip to Omaha, but will be with the president in Chicago. She will remain in Canton for several days, and more than likely go to Chicago with Mrs. Lafayette McWilliams and Mrs. W. A. Goodman, her cousins, who are expected to be here for the funeral service.

Sunday brought no new developments in the tragedy. Mrs. George remains in jail and has seen no one but Mayor Rice during the day. He was with her for five minutes. She is to be arraigned at 10 o'clock Monday morning. The coroner will resume the taking of testimony Monday.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR MEET.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 10.—Not in the history of Knight Templar conclaves, from 1816 to this day, has a conclave ever been opened on a more beautiful day than it was in Pittsburgh Sunday. The sun, after having been hidden behind rain-filled clouds for several days, burst upon the awakening city Sunday morning and threw his rays of smiles and admiration upon the festival array of streets and buildings, which made every one feel that this was an omen from the weather god.

The influx of knights, which commenced Saturday, continued during the day and up to midnight when the formal opening of the conclave was inaugurated with the festival sermon at the Trinity Episcopal church. There was a congregation assembled larger than this historic building has ever held.

The first formal event on the programme of the 27th triennial conclave of Knights Templar took place in Trinity Protestant Episcopal church. It was the official divine service of the Knights Templar and was as usual very impressive and largely attended.

Fever Patient Burned in a Church.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 10.—An unknown white man, stricken with yellow fever, who had taken refuge in a Negro church, was burned alive by the terrified people of the neighborhood Saturday. This is the gruesome story which came here Sunday night from Phillips, a small country town in Leflore county, Miss., within 200 miles of the state capital. The man was supposed to be a tramp.

Railroad Commission Meeting.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Oct. 10.—The officers of the various railroad companies operating in the state have been notified that Chairman Wood has called a meeting of the commission to be held here October 18 for the purpose of making the annual assessment of railroad property and requesting them to send a representative here at that time if they have anything to say to the commission in regard to the valuation of their respective roads. The session of the commission will last about ten days.

FLEEING NORTH.

Yellow Fever Situation in Mississippi Assuming Grave Proportions.

Twenty Thousand People Have Hurriedly Left for Northern Cities, Eagerly Awaiting Cold Weather—Disease More Malignant.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 10.—The yellow fever situation throughout the state of Mississippi is assuming grave proportions. The area of the fever has so enlarged that it [illegible] may be said to be general [illegible] out the state, as there is n[illegible]n that has not been visited [illegible] interstate railroads have [illegible]ally suspended business, and [illegible] short lines are on the verge [illegible]porary shutdown, due to the [illegible] trade. Twenty thousand or more people have hurried [illegible] the state and are refugeeing in northern cities, eagerly awaiting the approach of cold weather.

The disease continues to increase fatally in Jackson, the state capital. Since September 27 there have been 44 cases there, of which 24 were Negroes. Only five deaths have been reported since the beginning. The majority of the Negroes are well and feel none the worse for their yellow fever experience, but the majority of the white cases are still under treatment. Several are convalescent.

Hattiesburg and Lumberton, in the southern part of the state, have become infected, while Natchez, one of the largest river cities, reports two cases of the yellow plague. Reports from Oxford indicate that the disease is slowly spreading and is becoming more malignant. Harriston, Fayette, Starkville and Edwards report new cases. The situation at Watervalley is unchanged.

THE SCHOOLS FOR INDIANS.

The Annual Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs Showed Steady Advancement in Condition of the Indians.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The annual report of Commissioner of Indian Affairs William A. Jones shows a general steady advancement in the condition of the "Nation's wards." Education, the greatest factor in solving the status of the Indians is being pushed forward in the service and now there are 147 well equipped boarding schools and an equal number of day schools engaged in the education of 23,952 pupils. The average attendance and enrollment has steadily increased for the past 21 days. Vigorous inquiries prosecuted by Commissioner Jones during the year show significantly that 89 per cent. of those pupils who have gone through the schools and returned to their homes are reported to be in good physical condition, contrary to the frequent suggestion that the change might break a naturally strong and vigorous constitution. Of the pupils attending school 3 per cent. are reported as excellent or first class, 73 per cent. as good or medium, while only 24 per cent are considered bad or worthless, showing, in the commissioner's judgment, the value of a system which can, in a generation, develop from savages 76 per cent. of good average men and women.

TROOPS ORDERED TO PARIS.

The Garrisons of the Numerous Towns in the Vicinity of the Capital to Send 500 Infantry Each.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—The government has issued special orders to the garrisons of numerous towns near the capital to send immediately to Paris 500 infantry each.

The Journal des Debats declares that these reinforcements will amount to 10,000 men. The paper expresses the hope that the country is not on the eve of a revolution.

All the troops will be supplied with two days' rations and 60 rounds of ball cartridge.

Sunday passed off quietly. President Faure, instead of visiting the races at Longchamps as he intended, prudently remained to shoot at Rambouillet, thus avoiding a demonstration.

The British Blue Book comments on the Fashoda affair shows that the situation between France and England is grave.

Burial of the Dead Soldiers.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 10.—The funerals of Maj. Melville C. Wilkinson, Sergt. Wm. Butler and Privates Alfred Zebell, Edward Lowe, John Olmstead and John Showolstocker, member of the 3d United States infantry, who fell in the battle with the Indians at Leech lake, October 5, were held at Fort Snelling Sunday afternoon. It was estimated that six to eight thousand people were in attendance.

One Killed and Six Injured.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 10.—A double-header freight train collided with the rear end of a passenger train in the Elkhorn yards this morning. One waiter on the dining car was killed and six injured.

The Cost of Freeing Cuba.

The United States are certainly entitled to retain possession of the Philippine islands if the peace commissioners so decide, for the cost of the war runs far into the millions, and the end is not yet. The money paid out reaches an astonishing total. To free the stomach, liver, bowels and blood of disease, however, is not an expensive undertaking. A few dollars invested in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will accomplish the task easily. The poor as well as the rich can afford it.

THE WAR IN MINNESOTA.

The Pillager Tribe of Indians Have Become Unruly and Caused Much Trouble.

United States Troops, Under Gen. Bacon, of the Regular Army, Sent to Quell Them.

A Battle Takes Place at Leech Lake in Which Six Soldiers and Two Officers Were Killed, and Ten Soldiers Wounded.

Maj. Wilkinson and Sergeant Butler Among the Killed—Sergeant Ayres Among the Wounded—Number of Indians Killed About Thirty—The Redskins Were Scattered to the Various Islands in That Vicinity in Their Canoes.

WALKER, Minn., Oct. 6.—A hard fight with the Indians occurred Wednesday and the re[illegible] from the scene of the battle on the other side of Leech lake are somewhat conflicting, although all reports agree that the result has been considerable shedding of blood and some loss of life on both sides.

The Pillager and other neighboring Indians of the White Earth reservation claim to have many reasons for their present outbreak, although the direct tronble with the Pillagers comes over attempts to bring in some of the Indians to the United States court at Duluth in connection with liquor selling cases.

Their grievances go back through many years and there have been legislative and other attempts to settle them, one of the latest being the Nelson law regarding the sale of timber on the Indian lands. However the Indians claimed that the method of disposing of this was both cumbersome and expensive and that they were the sufferers. In regard to serving as witnesses in illegal liquor selling cases, they claimed that the deputy marshals left them to find their own way home from Duluth without having paid them the proper mileage. This is denied by the deputies. The leader in the trouble with the Pillagers is an old warrior Bog-Ah-Mah-Ge-Shig, not a chief, who recently returned from court and was soon afterwards sought again by the deputies. He alleged ill-treatment in being turned adrift penniless in Duluth and aroused the other Indians to protest against the way he claimed to have been treated. The United States marshal insists that the old man's story is unfounded but that the reds had been stirred up to such a pitch that trouble apparently became unavoidable, in view of the deeply seated feeling of general ill-treatment in regard to their timber lands and their lands and rights in general.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 8.—A Walker, Minn., special to the Dispatch says:

Gen. Bacon thinks one of the Indians killed by a sharpshooter was Chief Bu-Go-Nay-Ka-Shig. He says they are completely whipped Indians.

WALKER, Minn., Oct. 8.—J. G. Beaton, one of the three newspaper men marched with Gen. Bacon's troops on Sugar Point, wires the Minneapolis Tribune a long account of the battle. After describing the landing he says:

As there was no indication of trouble Brill, Knappen and myself made up our minds to go back to Walker on the boat to be sent by Gen. Bacon for the tents and rations for another day. We were down at the landing waiting for the row boats to take us to the steamer when a shot was heard. Immediately we ran back to the rest on the hill, when a volley came from the woods to the front of us.

The soldiers were just about to be dismissed and for a moment I was at a loss to understand the significance of the firing. A second later another volley came and the bullets whistled past my head. "Run to cover," some one cried, and as the soldiers grabbed their guns and ran to the left, I hurried down to the beach where I was soon safely housed behind big boulders and brush. As I ran down, however, more bullets chased me, and it was a wonder that myself and those with me were not killed.

"Steady, men, steady," was the first sound of a voice heard, and as I raised my head I could see Gen. Bacon running along with his troops.

"Get up in the firing line," was the next order given, and the men of the fighting Third were seen to run through the grass and woods in the direction from which the shots had been fired.

Another peep above the stone behind which I lay and a peep at a great chance of death, and I saw Maj. Wilkinson and Lieut. Ross calling to their men to advance. All the time the shots were fast and furious, and the bullets flew a few inches above our heads as we lay on the beach.

The men continued to advance. The three officers were everywhere. Maj. Wilkinson in charge of the left flank, Gen. Bacon in charge of the center and Lieut. Ross in charge of the right flank. The soldiers were running along, it appeared to me, on their hands and knees, dropping every moment to fire a volley into the ranks of the enemy. The officers, however, stood in the open. They were brave almost to recklessness and seemed only to consider the safety of their men, for they advised them what to do in tones that could be heard all over the point.

For 30 minutes there was a ceaseless roar, and every little while we could hear cries of the men who had been shot. I looked up once and saw that Maj. Wilkinson had been injured, but where I did not know. I heard him cry: "Ross, I've been wounded, but won't give up, for its not bad."

The next moment as he stood right back of his firing line calling at the men: "Give it to them, boys; I've got them going; give it to them; they are cowards and they're going to run." He seemed to stagger and surge as Ross ran toward him.

"Give them ——, general, give them ——," he called at the top of his voice over towards the central flank, where Gen. Bacon was taking aim at a red man. Then he fell into the arms of the doctor, who carried him into the log cabin at the crest of the hill, where he died in one hour and thirty minutes later. There were two wounds in his stomach and an artery had been cut and he bled to death despite the efforts of the surgeon to save him. His was the death of a soldier and such a death as he expressed to me a few minutes before he desired to experience, for the major and myself had walked back from the scouting tour together.

It was an awful sight, but strange as it seems, we reporters down upon the bank talked back and forth of what a good story it would be and did not realize our position until the big battle was over and the shots were fewer and we had nothing to think about except the fact that we might follow in the footsteps of the major.

About the same time the major fell, Private Powell, who was running from one cover to another, was seen to drop, and in the evening, after darkness had come, he was carried to the little cabin, the victim of another bullet from the Indian's Winchesters.

The stripes on the sleeve of another man whom I saw throw up his hands and drop his gun told me that a sergeant had been hit. As he fell he clapped one of his hands to his head and afterward I learned that he was Sergt. Butler, and that he had been killed instantly by a shot through his head.

As he fell, Lieut. Ross, who had charge of the two flanks after the injury sustained by Maj. Wilkinson, was seen to drop upon his knees and fire in the direction in which the shot that had killed Butler had come. They told me afterward that Ross got his man and had fully avenged the death of the gallant sergeant.

After that the men were out of sight up in the woods and behind the cabin, and we could only lay on the beach and wonder when our end would come, for we did not know but that the soldiers had been annihilated. There was no let up in the firing.

Suddenly, to our right, we heard the voice of Col. Sheehan, of St. Paul, deputy United States marshal. We glanced up and could see the veteran Indian fighter leading an advance by a portion of the right flank.

Every time his voice was heard a volley rang out and every time it was further away from us. Afterward it was learned that we had the colonel to thank for our lives. Some Indians had attempted to turn our right flank and attack the civilians on the beach. The colonel saw us and realized our danger, and his gallant attack had undoubtedly saved our lives. As it was, bullets flew about our heads and the stumps, weeds and stones about us were peppered for several yards.

"You've got them whipped, boys; you've got them whipped. Give it to them; give it to them," the colonel was yelling at the top of his voice.

When we realized the position in which the colo[illegible] we called to him to get and[illegible]t he paid no attention to t[illegible]ayed with the men until he [illegible]ccomplished his purpose, and w[illegible] had about made up our minds [illegible]as dead, were startled by a m[illegible] west above us.

"I've been wounded, boys, I've been wounded," was the remark [illegible]e as the weeds parted and the [illegible] colonel fell to the ground be[illegible] We did not know how badly [illegible] hurt, but saw two holes were in his coat sleeve.

"That's not it," he said, as we turned back his sleeve. "It's my stomach; look at that."

And we did so. We tore open his clothes and found only a small wound, but the blood was trickling down. The old man was not frightened by any means.

BRAINERD, Minn., Oct. 8.—Adjutant General, Washington: Walker, Minn., Oct. 6.—One soldier killed today and one Indian police killed, one wounded. Number of Indians killed impossible to estimate. They have now scattered in their canoes during night to the various islands in this section. Have accomplished all that can be done here at this late season and will return with my command tomorrow. Communication with this point rare and difficult. BACON, Brig. Gen.

It is stated at the war department that the last dispatch probably means that Gen. Bacon will return with his command to Fort Snelling unless the force is actually needed for the protection of the people in the vicinity.

WALKER, Minn., Oct. 8.—Gen. Bacon and his men returned from the mainland point Friday and joined the soldiers here under Col. Harbuck's command. Saturday the entire body will move to the Indian agency at Leech lake, and it is given out on good authority that a detachment will be sent to Bear island to disperse hostile Indians.

A demand was made upon the tribes Friday for the surrender of 22 Indians that took part in the battles this week, and to enforce the demand the soldiers will be sent into the reservation. At a council meeting of the tribes Friday all but the Bear island Indians were represented.

The agency Indians profess friendliness, but precautions are taken to prevent an outbreak among them. This town is practically under martial law. Gen. Bacon has ordered all the saloons closed to keep liquor from the soldiers. Gen. Bacon has scattered and whipped all the Indians that went against his command Tuesday.

Massachusetts' Last Hanging.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 8.—Alfred Williams, convicted of the murder of John Gallo, in Lynn, July 22, 1897, was hanged in the Salem jail Friday morning. The drop fell at 10 o'clock. Williams met death coolly. This is the last hanging Massachusetts will ever know. In the future the penalty for all capital offenses will be electrocution.

THE CHIPPEWAS

They Threaten to Go on the War Path in Northern Minnesota.

A Large Band of Redskins Are Camped Within Two Miles of Ferris, Minn.—Friendly Indians Are Buying Ammunition.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 10.—Gen. Bacon's orders for the movement of more troops to the vicinity of Leech lake took 90 men from Ft. Snelling on a special train Saturday night. Two companies of the 14th Minnesota volunteers are held at Duluth ready to start for points along the Fosston line of the Great Northern, where the two batteries of militia artillery men have preceded them, and Sunday another company of the 14th, made up of 50 men from Company E, of Merriam Park and 50 from the guard stationed in charge of Camp Vanduse, where the 14th is to be mustered out, was ordered to take the 9 o'clock train Monday morning for points along that same road. The last will take with them the equipment of the two Duluth companies which was left at Camp Vandusee when the men were furlonghed. The government is particularly anxious about the danger to the dams at the headwaters of the Mississippi, only a small guard having been stationed there since the trouble with the Indians came on. By Monday night over 700 soldiers will be scattered all around Leech lake protecting settlers and property from the possible attack of the uncertain number of Indians now in arms against the government, because they objected to being taken to court as witnesses in prosecutions for illegal selling of liquor to Indians.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 10.—A special from Ferris, Minn., a small town north of Leech lake, says:

Settlers living near the Indian reservation are seeking shelter in towns along the railroad. A large band of Indians of about 150 were reported late Sunday evening camped within two miles north of this town. Armed citizens are guarding the town expecting an attack during the night or early morning.

Indians professing to be friendly were at Graeland, one and a half miles west of here Sunday evening trying to purchase ammunition.

Flatmouth and his band of 40 Chippewa Indians may be on the war path before another day has passed. At the council to be held at noon Monday he will deliver a message asking that the troops be taken away from the agency and informing the authorities that in the event of a refusal to do this he will join the hostile Pillager Indians.

The situation Sunday night was more ominous than ever. At the agency Sunday a council was held between the Indians, Gen. Bacon, Col. Herbach, Indian Agent Sutherland and Marshal O'Connor. The result of the conference was not in any way unlike that of those previously held, except in the fact that not one of the leading men of the different bands was present.

A most significant fact is this: Saturday 30 canoe loads of Bear island Indians and their families, professing to be peaceful, arrived at the agency. Sunday every one of the bucks in the party left, but where they have gone is only to be surmised. There is little doubt, however, that they have left for Bear island to join those who are already prepared to fight. There must be by this time several hundred armed men on the island and from what can be learned Sunday many more are on the road. Two or three of the Bear island men, who are still on the agency, have been questioned in regard to last Wednesday's battle, but they positively stated that they knew nothing whatever in regard to the dead and wounded among the Indians and had seen none of those who were in the fight.

A special from Walker says:

It was reported Sunday night on the authority of a citizen who has conversed with a hostile Pillager Indian, one who was in Wednesday's battle and who has sat in all the councils of the Pillagers, that the Indians have sworn to an agreement to accomplish, if possible, the following:

They will attempt in a few days to drive from the reservation all of the troops already there. They will, if they are successful in the above, not allow any United States authorities or United States troops thereafter to land upon the reservation. If the troops land upon a point not inhabited by the hostile Indians, an attempt will be made to drive them off as soon as possible.

MRS. M'KINLEY'S BROTHER.

Geo. D. Saxton Shot and Killed at Canton, O.—Mrs. Anna B. George Charged With the Crime.

CANTON, O., Oct. 8.—George D. Saxton, a brother of Mrs. William McKinley, was shot dead at 6:10 o'clock Friday evening in front of the residence of Mrs. Eva B. Althouse, widow of the late George Althouse, 319 Lincoln avenue, where he has presumed to have gone to make a call. Five shots were fired, three of which entered his body, and Mrs. Annie G. George has been placed under arrest on anspicion of the murder.

His position indicated that he had been on the step of the Althouse residence when the shots were fired. The body was taken to the undertaking room and placed in charge of the coroner. Immediately after the autopsy it will be taken to the home of M. C. Barbor, a brother-in-law, where Saxton, who was unmarried, made his home. Mr. Saxton left the Barber home about 6 o'clock, riding his bicycle, and this was the last seen of him by his friends. The Althouse home was dark and locked and the neighbors said Mrs. Althouse had not been at home for the past three days. One of the neighbors said a woman supposed to have done the shooting, had passed back of the house. Mrs. George took her supper as usual at a down town restaurant at 4:45 and some time later was on a west-bound car, and according to the motorman's story got off at Haslett avenue, near the Althouse home. About 9 o'clock she was arrested and locked up. Trouble in locating her was due principally to the fact that she moved from her old home Thursday.

Mrs. George is the divorced wife of Sample C. George, who formerly was a tenant of Saxton in his down-town business block, conducting a dress-making business. Her divorce was obtained in Dakota and a proceeding later filed in local courts by the husband against Saxton charged that Saxton had sent her there to secure the divorce, the proceeding here being a suit for damages for the alleged alienation of the wife's affections. This case has been through all the intermediate courts and was passed upon by the state supreme court on an interpleading and finally remanded for hearing on its merits here. Before this occurred, and on Wednesday, a settlement was effected, Saxton paying George $1,825 on the claim that was set up of $20,000. Mrs. George has also had several cases against Saxton, claiming the detention of furniture, the defense of Saxton being that the articles were held for overdue rent in the rooms. Mrs. Althouse, in front of whose house the shooting occurred, several months ago began peace proceedings against Mrs. George, alleging that her life had been threatened.

For some time past Mrs. George has been living at No. 1516 West Tuscarawas street, about five blocks from where the shooting occurred. Early in the week she is said to have packed up her household goods to have them shipped to her mother's home at Hanoverton. Since her goods have been gone she has been living at the rooms of Mrs. Jake Oberlin in the same house. She left the house about 9 o'clock Friday morning and did not return. While the officers were talking to Mrs. Oberlin Friday night, Mrs. George was seen coming across a lot near by. As she attempted to go around to get in the back way, she was put under arrest by the officers and brought to police headquarters.

It is common talk that Mrs. George made frequent threats of taking Saxton's life, many of these threats are said to have been sent through the mails, and the federal grand jury, setting in Cleveland last fall, indicted her for alleged improper use of the mails. Mrs. George gave bond, and the indictment, so far as is known here, is still alive.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The news of the murder of Mrs. McKinley's brother was received at the white house just about the time that the reception to the Episcopalian council, in session here, was about to be brought to a close. Mrs. McKinley was receiving with the president during the evening and was in her usual spirits.

Mrs. McKinley expressed a wish to attend the funeral, and accordingly hurried arrangements were made whereby she will start for Canton shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday evening.

The Lucania Disabled.

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 8.—The Cunard line steamer Lucania, Capt. McKay, which left New York on October 1 for Liverpool by way of this port, was sighted off Brow Head at 2:10 p.m. Friday, apparently in a disabled condition.

Permanent Hospital at Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 8.—Surgeon General Sternberg has ordered that the general hospital here be made a permanent hospital, and improvements are rapidly going on toward making it complete. The sick are doing well, and the order, which was later countermanded, that a large portion of the sick be taken to Ft. Thomas, created no end of uneasiness among the patients, who are satisfied with their quarters and surroundings here.

IN HONOR OF A HERO.

School Children Will Raise a Monument to La Fayette.

October 19 Has Been Set Aside as "La Fayette Day" by the Governors of the Different States.

[Special Correspondence.]

On the 19th day of this month the students and school children all over these United States will unite in doing honor to one of the greatest and most beloved heroes of all history. The governors of the different states have issued proclamations setting aside October 19 as "La Fayette day" in all the schools and educational institutions of the country. This is in compliance with a request from the special La Fayette memorial commission organized by the commission-general of the United States to the Paris exposition and in response to the warm and earnest personal recommendation of President McKinley. On this special day exercises of a patriotic nature will be held in all the institutions of learning throughout the land, recalling the days of our early struggle for liberty and the connection of generous and boyish La Fayette therewith, contributions to be made at the same time by the students and children to the fund which is to erect a monument to the gallant hero's memory.

The following letter has been issued from the executive mansion by President McKinley recommending the movement to the educational officials and youth and school children of the country:

"Your letter, written in behalf of the La Fayette memorial commission, has greatly interested me, and I have read with much satisfaction the plans already outlined for the proposed monument to the memory of a great soldier and patriot.

"The undertaking is one in which I am sure it will be considered a privilege to participate, and the idea that the students in the schools, colleges and universities shall take a prominent part in this tribute will not only be of vast educational value as one of the most important epochs in history, but will keep prominent before them the inspiration of a high ideal of devotion to great principles and of the public recognition paid to lofty purposes.

"Gen. La Fayette was but a young man when he espoused the cause of liberty and independence, overcoming well-nigh insurmountable obstacles to do so. It is altogether fitting, therefore, that the youth of America should have a part in this testimonial to his goodness and greatness.

"I am glad to note that your committee has fixed a date when our people, in every part of the country, may testify their interest in this proposed monument and their determination that the movement already begun shall achieve the greatest success.

"Very sincerely yours,

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY."

La Fayette, a boy of 19, gave up all his prospects of wealth and high position in France to come to the aid of this country when it was struggling for liberty, and that in its very darkest hour. It was when report came to Europe of great American losses and reverses and English victories that La Fayette started out, and, in spite of the direct mandate of the French king and the protests of his wealthy relatives and royal friends, and notwithstanding arrest and delay and all conceivable obstacles which were put in his way, set sail with 11 picked companions for American shores. When this black news came from the patriot camp he said: "Then, the more do they need me," and after much difficulty escaped in disguise over the French border into Spain and there set sail.

He had been promised by Silas Deane, the American representative in Paris, a commission as major general in the patriot army. When congress dissented to this on account of his age and inexperience, La Fayette, who was waiting without, sent in word that he be permitted to enter the army as a private and without pay. From this moment to the end of the revolutionary war this young Frenchman was one of the most ardent and able champions of the patriot cause. He immediately became Washington's dearest friend and engaged with him in many of the councils which led to the final colonial victories. Monmouth, Brandywine, Baron Hill and Yorktown were scenes of his exploits on the field. His aid to America, however, in this trying time was not confined to valor alone. He was instrumental in securing the patriots success in a more material way. Through him it was that the alliance with France was finally secured which brought the turning point of the revolution. La Fayette, by his influence in Paris, did possibly more than any other agency to induce the French king to take up arms with us against tyrannic England. It was through La Fayette's agency also that the colonies secured that famous loan of 27,000,000 livres from the French government, of which that nation said later in regard to its payment: "Of the 27,000,000 we have loaned you we forgive you 9,000,000 as a gift of friendship, and when with the years there comes prosperity you can pay the rest without interest."

Washington's friendship for La Fayette continued throughout life, and formed one of the greatest examples of mutual attachment in the history of great men, and both he and his successors until the death of La Fayette let no opportunity pass to do the noble Frenchman honor. Upon the occasion of his visit to this country after American independence had been gained he was met with manifestations on the part of the people unparalleled in the records of appreciation of a nation. When he returned to these shores in 1824 congress gave him an official reception in the hall of representatives, and the people contended with the horses for the honor of drawing his carriage. Congress presented him with an appropriation of $200,000, a township of land, built and named in his honor a man-of-war, the Brandywine, and tendered the same to him for his conveyance home.

A notable event was the marriage of Charles F. Hull, promlneut young business man of Lawrenceburg, Ky., to Miss Harriet Welliugton Glascock, one of Maysville's charming belles. The ceremouy was performed in the parlor of the Gibson House, Wednesday evening, at 6:30 o'clock. The bride looked beautiful in a Paris gown of white satin. Miss Alberta Glascock, the bride's sister, wore an elegant gown of cerise satin. The elegant dresses mentioned above, from the Enquirer, were designed, made and fitted by Mrs. Annie Wilson, of this place, and were exhibited to the writer and several other ladies while in the process of making up. There were 340 yards of satin ribbon used on the bridal robe, and it looked to be a fairy creation.

The case of J. J. Hudson vs. C. N. O. & T. P. R. R., S. M. Felton, receiver, was tried by Judge Berton on Saturday, Oct. 5th. Hudson was awarded a judgment of $7 82, the value of one hog lost from the car—plaintiff having proved the loading of 53 hogs on the car and only 52 were delivered, and further, that the car was not safe against probable loss. A member of the bar was heard to remark that the Judge's decision was good law. Begging his pardon, the opinion is hazarded that a decision is either according to law or it is not—a bad law may be enacted or be in force, but it is law nevertheless, and the intelligent school boy knows that law and justice are not synonymous terms—more's the pity.

Mr. A. M. Rouse has on exhibition at the mill three Jersey sweet potatoes that weigh 8¾ pounds—one of them 3¼. The Jersey's are generally considered as small potatoes but these have the dimensions and appearance of yams.

For some time our people have been felicitating themselves with the idea that the town had become a great deal better, that riotous carryings on had become extinct, that hereafter everything would be serene. They were rudely aroused from this delusion on last Thursday night after the performance at Cooper & Co.'s show. The last of the moveables of the concern were going down in wagons to the Southern depot, when a rock was thrown from the sidewalk near the Odd Fellows' Hall, and was supplemented by the sharp report of a pistol, when fifteen more shots were fired. The mauager, who was ahead of the showmen, hurried back, learned what was the matter and ordered them to go to the wagou at the depot in which there were lots of guns, to bring them up and give their assailants particular h—l. One of the Walton gang said they would wait for them there, but they didn't. They scattered, and when the showmen came back none of them could be found. One of the pistol balls went through a window in E. J. Gorman's drug store, two in Mrs. King's hotel—one in her dining room and the other in her daughter's bed-room, which a few minutes sooner might have seriously wounded the occupant, as it penetrated the weather-boarding and plastering, flattenlug itself on the top of a mahogany dresser just above the looking glass. It was remarked by many that the showmen were the most orderly lot that ever came to town. It was rumored that they had planned to take one of the company's ponies, and it is related or rather known as a fact that some years ago a jennet was stolen from a showman and was accidentally discovered by the loud braying which came continuously from an old out of the way barn. It is rumored here that one of the showmen has died at Lexington from a wound received in the affray.

Saturday evening, Marshal A. R. Hance arrested Edw'd Lawes, Sbelby Stepheus and Alonzo Dixon, charged with making the murderous assault on the men of Cooper & Co's. show on the highway last Thursday night. Lawes and Stepheus were bailed by A. M. Edwards and Dixon by Kirtley Roberts.

WEDDINGS.

DAVIS-GAINES—GAINES-DUNCAN.

The historic old Bullittsburg Baptist church, with its one hundred and five years of continued existence, where hundreds of marriage vows have been taken, was the scene of a beautiful double wedding on the afternoon of the 5th inst. The old church had been beautifully and artistically decorated with autumn leaves, golden-rod, cat's diums, cat tails, cannas and a variety of cut flowers.

The contracting parties were Miss Bertha Gaines, the beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Gaines, and Mr. Chester T. Davis, the popular and prosperous young merchant of Hebron and Constance; and Miss Eunie Duncan, the lovely daughter of Mr. James A. Duncan, and Mr. Vee Gaines, the energetic and thriving young stock trader.

Two prouder men never led to the altar two sweeter, lovlier brides. The two young ladies are first cousins, have grown up together, intimate as sisters. Each possesses au amiable, lovely disposition, and nothing could have been more appropriate than that they should have passed, side by side, from the life of a maiden luto that of a matron.

Love has been a long time knitting the hearts of these young couples, and we congratulate the young men that Hymen has, at last, joined their hands. It is our sincere desire that through these young men wealth, honor, and happiness wait these young brides.

Long before the appointed hour some five hundred friends, from far and near, had assembled in the church, filling every available space. They were entertained lu the interval before the arrival of the bridal party with two lovely songs sang by Miss Anna Rice, of Covington. Miss Anna has a clear, musical soprano voice, highly cultivated and peculiarly adapted to a large hall. The two songs rendered were: "Call Me Thy Own," and "O, Promise Me!" She sang them artistically and pathetically, bringing out the true sentimeut of the composer.

At the appointed hour Miss Zayda Gaines, at the organ, commenced playing Mendelssohn's time-honored wedding march. The church doors were thrown opeu, and two beautiful little girls, Misses Omer Hawkins and Carrie Graves, dressed in pure white, with a basket of roses lu their haud, began marching up either aisle, in perfect step to the well rendered music, while following them at an interval came the ushers, Messrs. Edwiu Gaines, Felix Gaines Hubert Walton and Elmore Gaines, in couples, in pace with the little girls. Next came the brides on the left and the grooms on the right. Just here all eyes were centered upon the vision of beauty that was moviug up the left aisle. The brides were dressed in pure white Paris muslins, trimmed in valenciennes lace and satin ribbons, with white aigrettes in their hair. Their cheeks were aglow with a crimson hue which rendered their lovely faces more strikingly beautiful. The grooms on the right, looked happy and handsome in their conventional black cutaways and white ties.

They were met at the altar by Rev. James A. Kirtley, the venerable pastor, who, for more than fifty years, has performed the ceremony that has bound together the lives of several hundred couples. The ceremony was beautiful and impressive. The lovers' vows, it seems to me, were given sweeter in every whispered word, than I had ever heard before.

After prayer, the beautiful little flower girls joined hands, and, in perfect time with the music, left, the most beautiful ceremouy that was ever performed in the old church, followed by the grooms with their brides and the ushers.

The bridal party left immediately for Cincinnati, where they spent the night, going the next day to Lexington, Saturday they returned, and that night they were given a royal reception at Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Clore's.

The brides received many handsome presents, but only a partial list can be given as all had not been sent lu:

Silver tea set, and complete table set from Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Clore to Miss Bertha; two handsome parlor lamps to Misses Eunu and Bertha from Edwin Gaines: three pictures to Miss Bertha from Miss Grace M. Davis, India and Clora Davis and Miss Lizzie Lee Graddy; sterling silver hat brush from J. J. Graddy to Miss Bertha; silver ladel from Mr. and Mrs. Mike Clore to Miss Bertha; silver berry spoon from Mr. L. H. Aklnsou to Miss Bertha; gold bowl sugar spoons from Felix Gaines to Miss Eunie and Miss Bertha; silver cream spoons to same from Mrs. Anuie Gaines; China salad dishes to same from Mrs. N. S. Walton; cake plates to same from Mrs. Eunie Arnold; silver top pitcher from Mrs. Alice Beall to Miss Bertha; green vase to each of the brides from B. C. Gaddy; Dresden China vase from Carlton G. COLLINS-LASSING.

Weddings are, perhaps, the most interesting events in the affairs of well regulated communities. People like to hear of them, attend them, and read of them in the neighborhood news. This being true, we take especial pleasure in writing of them.

The marriage of Miss Mary Coleman Lassing and Mr. Joseph Milton Collins, which occurred at 2 o'clock p. m., October 4th, at the elegant home of the bride, was an event of unusual interest to be remembered with delight by all who were present. "Beechhurst," situated, as it is, among towering beeches, whose branches droop until they touch the gables, presented a gay appearance, as elegant turnouts from all parts of the county, dashed up to the doors, filled with happy guests. The parlor, hall and dining rooms had been artistically decorated for the occasion. In the parlor bay window was a lovely wedding bell hanging from the ceiling, and separating the bay window from the main room was a lace work of carnations and evergreens, giving curtain effect. Roses, carnations, violets, goldenrods and [illegible] were used in the decoration of the [illegible].

At 1:45 the [illegible] been received in a graceful and [illegible] manner by Miss Martha and Walter Lassing, and presented a [illegible] appearance as, with smiling [illegible], they waited the coming of [illegible] when Rev. Davis, of the Presbyterian church, should unite in holy bonds of wedlock one of Boone's fairest and most accomplished daughters, and one of Grant county's popular sons.

Promptly at 2 o'clock the bride and groom stood under the marriage bell, the bride carrying a magnificent bouquet of bride's roses, and wearing an exquisite dress of blue cloth trimmed in velvet and silk. The groom wore the conventional black. Rev. Davis stepped forward in that manner peculiarly his own, and performed the ceremouy that made them man and wife. A perfect tidal wave of congratulations was bestowed upon the happy couple. The guests spent twenty minutes offering congratulations and exchanging friendly greetings, after which they were invited to the dining rooms, where ice cream, cake and coffee were served. Here the dainty china and the glimmer of the light reflected from lovely cut-glass, gave poetical effect to the scene, making happy faces look happier and lovly flowers look lovlier. The cream was delicious, the cake was feathery in lightness and rich enough for a king. The coffee was of exquisite flavor and taste.

After refreshments, the guests returned to the parlor, and until 4 o'clock the goddess of friendship held high carnival, and was, indeed, "merry as a marriage feast."

At 4 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Collins were prepared to leave for their wedding tour east, and everbody that could get a supply of rice to throw, was ready to assist them off. Wheu, at last, good bys were said, and the carriages were at the door, a start was made, and we had a glimpse of the departing bride and groom, between showers of rice, flowers and old shoes, and they were gone.

The guests at 4:15 began leaving each one offering their kludest congratulations of respect to Dr. and Mrs. Lassing with many thanks for the delightful evening.

The guests, many of them from a distauce, were Lost—At the Baptist church, last Sunday night, an embroidered chiffon handkerchief; finder will please return to Mrs. J. R. Clutterbuck.

In some fields the young wheat covers the ground. It is getting an excellent start to make root enough to carry it safely through the winter.

A large number of the farmers in the Limaburg and Pt. Pleasant neighborhoods, have posted their lands, as has Mrs. Ben A. Sleet, of Verona.

A strange man stopped at W. J. Rice's, last Sunday morning. Mr. Rice and others who saw him, did not like his looks and actions a little bit.

The Fiscal Court has advertised in the Enquirer for bids on the work to be done on the court house. Bids will be received by Judge Roberts until the 15th inst.

The funeral of Mrs. Donovin, of the Beaver neighborhood, was preached by Rev. S. M. Adams at the Beaver Baptist church of which she was a member, Monday afternoon.

The protracted meeting at the Florence Christian Church closed last Friday night, with four additions. A protracted meeting will begin at the Bullittsville Christian Church next Monday night. Elder Geo. W. Watkins, the pastor, kindly invites everybody to attend.

A. O. Hall showed us a letter, the other evening written by Pennel Beall, July 23, 1827. The letter was written on the Colonel Trimble when four weeks out from New York on an eastern voyage. Beall was a relative of Mr. Hall.

The protracted meeting is still in progress at the Baptist church, and Rev. S. M. Adams has been preaching excellent sermons. The attendance at both services, last Sunday, was very large, the congregation at night being about the largest ever in attendance there since the new edifice was erected, except on occasions of celebrations.

John Smith, of Bellevue and proprietor of Laughery island, has a tenant he would like to get rid of. Smith ordered him to leave the other day, when the squatter told him he would better leave himself, that he had killed one man and would kill another if necessary. Smith did the leaving after he had acquired the above information.

Last Thursday was moving day for several Burlingtonites, who had, for some time been contemplating a change of residences. W. C. Brown moved to the residence which Judge Roberts has occupied for several years, the latter going to the Baker farm west of town, while Geo. Blyth moved from there to the premises vacated by Mr. Brown. James Clore who assisted in the transfers says he got so badly mixed up in the business that he does not know who owes him for his work.

FISCAL COURT.

Following is a synopsis of the business transacted by the Fiscal Court at its session held on the 4th inst:

B. J. Crisler, police judge of the town of Petersburg, allowed $3 for holding an inquest on body of F. A. Schwill, who was drowned in the river at Petersburg.

B. H. Ryle was allowed $3 for holding inquest on body of Col. Carrier killed at Hamilton, last summer.

J. S. Clutterbuck allowed $3 85 for having Assessor's book bound.

J. F. Blyth, Superintendent of Infirmary, submitted his quarterly report of expenses of said institution showing them to be $404 85. Same was received by the court, and he was allowed $500 to defray current expenses.

The committee appointed to examine the iron bridge at Plattsburg, and the wooden bridge at Ashby's Fork reported. Same was received. The report is as follows:

To the Fiscal Court.—Your committee appointed to view and report as to the condition of the bridges at the crossings of the old Woolper pike at Woolper creek and Ashby's Fork, report as follows:

Esquires Clinton Gaines and M. B. Green met at said bridges on the 10th day of Sept., 1898, Esq. J. H. Walton not being present. We examined said bridges carefully and find the fill on the south side of the bridge at Woolper creek almost entirely washed away, and the old road bed still south of fill entirely cut away by head water; the bridge and abutments on either side in fair condition, except the flooring, which is much decayed and partly gone. We find the abutments at Ashby's Fork bridge in good shape, but the bridge very much decayed, and as we think, unsafe for travel.

CLINTON GAINES.
M. B. GREEN.

Judge Roberts was authorized to spend $5 for the benefit of the family of Park Strader.

T. J. Adams, jailer, allowed $17 35.

A. B. Rouse presented claim for $5 for recording testimony in two examining trials held by County Judge. The court took time on said claim.

W. W. Tarvin, Coroner of Kenton county, presented a claim for $25, for holding post mortem on Joe Michaels, which was continued until next term.

Henry Humphrey allowed $7 for landing and burying drowned man.

Ordered by the court that all claims hereafter presented to this court for burying paupers in this county and furnishing coffins for same, the claimant must furnish proof to the satisfaction of the court that the person buried or the person for whom the coffin was furnished is a pauper, and the claimant must prove the quality and kind of coffin used.

R. A. Brady allowed $200 10 due him from the State on account of his services as Assessor.

Esquires M. B. Green, B. H. Ryle, J. H. Walton and Clinton Gaines each allowed $3 for one day's services. B. W. Adams, clerk, allowed $2, for one day's service.

Habitual Law Breakers.

If all reports are true there are some men in every precinct of Boone county who are habitual law breakers, so far as the game law of Kentucky is concerned. They like the law because it makes the law abiding citizens refrain from hunting while they get the choice of the covey. These men are generally known in their vicinity and it is the duty of every good citizen to see that the game law is observed—a few indictments by the grand jury would go far towards breaking up this lawlessness. If the people are not on to the game of this class of men you will know them from the following signs: "They are out killing a few rabbits or a few young meadow larks, or out exercising a young dog" Whenever you find a man at this season of the year out with his gun and dog, claiming to be doing any one of the above things, you may be fully convinced that he is doing nothing of the kind, but is hunting quail; these men not only break the law, but are one of the causes of the scarcity of game. Many quail have not hatched out yet and many of the young birds are small and if the old one is killed it is not only the loss of one bird, but the whole brood. Keep your eye on him. A SPORTSMAN.

County Court.

Oct. 5th.—Mrs. J. A. Clore, widow, was appointed administratrix of the estate of Yancy Clore. J. A. Gaines, Edgar Cropper and O. W. Gaines were appointed appraisers. The property was appraised Monday.

Arm Broken.

Mrs. Sarah Carpenter, of this place, went to visit her brother and family, Mr. Maley Green, at Walnut Hills, last week. When she went to leave the street car which she boarded in Cincinnati for the hills, she was, by some means, thrown to the pavement, breaking one of her wrists. It caused her considerable pain, and received the attention of a surgeon as soon as she reached her brother's.

Live Stock Sales.

W. C. Goodridge delivered to James Riley, last Thursday 39 hogs that averaged 109 pounds at 3½ cents per pound. Robert Carver delivered to same ten head—1 sow and 9 shoats that weighed 1,110 pounds, at 3½ cents per pound.

R. A. Brady attended the Cincinnati horse market a day or two last week, disposing of some of his surplus horses.

A car containing 131 hogs was received at Cincinnati, one day last week, all but 70 of which had died enroute. Too many in the car.

Dr. Cowen sold a horse at the Union Stock Yards, Cincinnati, one day last week, for $165. R. A. Brady sold one at the same place for $60.

It will be fine fishing as soon as the creek clears up again. W. P. Sullivan says there are some in the Lonesome hole down on Gunpowder that are akin to whales. He has seen them several times this fall. They have 999 chances to 1 to remain there, so far as the fishermen are concerned.

More Coal Miners Jailed.

Last Thursday about noon, Add Riddell and one of his neighbors, a Mr. Matson, arrived in town with a squad of prisoners, whom they had arrested for appropriating to their own use coal that had lodged on the Chambers bar at North Bend. The prisoners were Joseph Steel, aged about 60, his son, Ferman Steel, about 30, and Charles Huff, about 18. They were taken before Judge Roberts, and after a wordy skirmish between the old man and County Attorney Lassing, each of the prisoners pleaded guilty to taking coal as charged, and they were each given the lowest fine, $10 and costs. The younger Steel, rather a good looking young fellow, appeared very much distressed, and said that he had no idea that he was committing a wrong when taking the coal, and that he had a very sick child at home. The young man so demeaned himself that he gained the sympathy of the officers and the spectators, and the court permitted him to return to his family upon his promising to return and pay his fine. The older Steel and Huff were committed to jail to serve out their fines. Old man Steel questions the right of Kentucky land owners along the river to exercise control over the bars and to claim the coal that lodges thereon. They were released from jail Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Lucretia Rich died at her home near Beaver Lick, on the 4th inst. She was the widow of the late Joseph Rich, of that neighborhood, and a daughter of the late M. M. Black, of Big Bone. She has four brothers and one sister living in the Big Bone district. She leaves a family of three children to mourn her departure. She was a kind and indulgent mother and a good neighbor. She was a member of Hughes Chapel (Methodist,) where she was buried, after the funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. M. Adams, who preached from Revelations 2:10—"Fear none of these things. Be thou faithful until death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

The Synod in session at the Hopeful church last week, was largely attended, there being among the crowd a great many persons from a distance. The good people of that neighborhood spared no labor to make the stay of strangers among them of the most pleasant character. Genuine Kentucky hospitality was on tap at every home in that neighborhood, and the visitors from a distance returned home delighted with the services at the church during the meeting and highly pleased with the cordial reception accorded them. Bro. Lentz, the popular pastor, was untiring in his work to make the Synod a grand success in every particular.

Property owners in Gallatin county pay some taxes—in fact the county rate there would almost result in a rebellion in this county. At the last term of the Fiscal Court the following levies were made for county purposes. "Tythe tax, $1.50, advalorem tax—20 cents for repairs of roads and bridges; 12 cents to pay interest on turnpike bonds and redeem same; 3 cents to pay interest on funding debt bonds and redeem same; 25 cents to pay interest on county orders and redeem same, and for other purposes; a total of 60 cents on the $100 to taxable property." To this add the State rate, 52½ cents, and you have the amount paid on the $100 in that county.

T. L. Swetnam, aged 68, and for many years the leading merchant at Florence, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jesse Corwin, in Covington, one day last week. The funeral was preached by Rev. Lentz, after which the remains were brought to Florence and interred. The deceased was a man who was held in high esteem by all, and his departure is lamented by a very large number of friends who sympathize with the wife and the two daughters in their bereavement.

INFLUENCE OF WOMAN.

The Mothers of To-Day Are Better Than Those of the Past.

Woman's Influence for Good Has Never Been Estimated, Though the Cost of the Wicked Has Been Counted—Talmage's Sermon.

The agmentation of parental influence, as the courtesies go by, Dr. Talmage here sets forth while discoursing about one of the grandmothers of Bible times. The text is II. Tim. 1, 5: "The unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois."

In this pastoral letter which Paul, the old minister, is writing to Timothy, the young minister, the family record is brought out. Paul practically says: "Timothy, what a good grandmother you had! You ought to be better than most folks, because not only was your mother good, but your grandmother was good, also. Two preceeding generations of piety ought to give you a mighty push in the right direction." The fact was that Timothy needed encouragement. He was in poor health, having a weak stomach, and was a dyspeptic, and Paul prescribed for him a little, "a little wine; for thy stomach's sake"—not much wine, but a little wine, and only as a medicine. And if Timothy had been as much adulterated with logwood and strychnine as our modern wines he would not have prescribed any.

But Timothy, not strong physically, is encouraged spiritually by the recital of grandmotherly excellence. Paul hinting to him as I hint this day to you, that God sometimes gathers up as in a reservoir, away back of the active generations of to-day, a godly influence, and then, in response to prayer, lets down the power upon children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren. The world is woefully in want of a table of statistics in regard to what is the protractedness and immensity of influence of one good woman in the church and world. We have accounts of how much evil has been wrought by a woman who lived nearly a hundred years ago, and of how many criminals her descendants furnished for the penitentiary and the gallows, and how many hundreds of thousands of dollars they cost our country in their arraignment and prison support, as well as the property they burglarized and destroyed. But will not some one come out with brain comprehensive enough, and heart warm enough, and pen keen enough to give us the facts in regard to some good woman of a hundred years ago, and let us know how many Christian men and women and reformers and useful people have been found among her descendants, and how many asylums and colleges and churches they built, and how many millions of dollars they contributed for humanitarian and Christian purposes?

The good women whose tombstones were planted in the 18th centnry are more alive for good in the 19th century than they were before, as the good women of this 19th century will be more alive for good in the 20th century than now. Mark you, I have no idea that the grandmothers were any better than their granddaughters. You can not get very old people to talk much about how things were when they were boys and girls. They have a reticence and a nonecommittalism which makes me think they feel themselves to be the enstodians of the reputation of their early comrades. While our dear old folks are rehearsing the follies of the present, if we put them on the witness stand and cross-examine them as to how things were 70 years ago the silence becomes oppressive.

The celebrated Frenchman, Volney, visited this country in 1796, and he says of woman's diet in those times: "If a premium was offered for a regimen most destructive to health, none could be devised more efficacious for these ends than that in use among these people." That eclipses our lobster salad at midnight. Everybody talks about the dissipation of modern society and how womanly health goes down under it, but it was worse a hundred years ago, for the chaplain of a French regiment in our revolutionary war wrote in 1782, in his "Book of American Women," saying: "They are tall and well proportioned, their features are generally regular, their complexions are generally fair and without color. At 20 years of age the women have no longer the freshness of youth. At 30 or 40 they are decrepit." In 1813 a foreign consul wrote a book entitled "A Sketch of the United States at the Commencement of the Present Century," and he says of the women of those times: "At the age of 30 all their charms have disappeared." One glance at the portraits of the women a hundred years ago and their style of dress makes us wonder how they ever got their breath. All this makes me think that the express rail train is no more an improvement on the old canal boat, or the telegraph no more an improvement on the old-time saddle bags than the women of our day are an improvement on the women of the last century.

But still, notwithstanding that those times were so much worse than ours, there was a glorious race of Godly women, seventy and a hundred years ago, who held the world back from sin and lifted it toward virtue, and without their exalted and sanctified influence before this the last good influence would have perished from the earth. Indeed, all over this land there are seated to-day—not so much in churches, for many of them are too feeble to come—a great many aged grandmothers. They sometimes feel that [illegible] has more [illegible] and [illegible] for that they are of little account. Their head sometimes [illegible] from the racket of the [illegible] down stairs or in the [illegible]. They stand themselves [illegible] as they go up and down. When they get a cold it hangs on them longer than it used to. They [illegible] no ear to hear the grandchildren [illegible] when they deserve it, and have so relaxed their ideas of family discipline that they would spoil all the youngsters of the household by too great leniency. These old folks are the resort when great troubles come, and there is a calming and soothing power in the touch of an aged hand that is almost supernatural. They feel they are almost through with the journey of life and read the old Book more than they used to, hardly knowing which most they enjoy, the Old Testament or the New, and often stop and dwell tearfully over the family record half-way between. We hail them to-day, whether in the house of God or at the homestead. Blessed is that household that has in it a grandmother Lois. Where she is, angels are hovering around and God is in the room. May her last days be like those lovely autumnal days that we call Indian summer!

Is it not time that you and I do two things—swing open a picture gallery of the wrinkled faces and stooped shoulders of the past and call down from their Heavenly thrones the godly grandmothers to give them our thanks and then to persuade the mothers of today that they are living for all time and that against the sides of every cradle in which a child is rocked beat the two eternities?

Here we have an untried, undiscussed and unexplored subject. You often hear about your influence upon your own children; I am not talking about that. What about your influence upon the twentieth century, upon the thirtieth century, upon the fortieth century, upon the year 2,000, upon the year 4,000, if the world lasts so long? The world stood 4,000 years before Christ came; it is not unreasonable to suppose that it may stand 4,000 years after his arrival. Four thousand years the world swung off in sin, 4,000 years it may be swinging back into righteousness. By the ordinary multiplication of the world's population in a century your descendants will be over 300, and by two centuries over 50,000, and upon every one of them you, the mother of to-day, will have an influence, for good or evil, and if in four centuries your descendants shall have with their names filed a scroll of hundreds of thousands, will some angel from Heaven, to whom is given the capacity to calculate the number of the stars of heaven and the sands of the seashore, step down and tell us how many descendants you will have in the four thousandth year of the world's possible continnance? Do not let the grandmothers any longer think that they are retired, and sit clear back out of sight from the world, feeling that they have no relation to it. The mothers of the last century are to-day in the person of their descendants, in the senates, the parliaments, the palaces, the pulpits, the banking houses, the professional chairs, the prisons, the almshouses, the company of midnight brigands, the cellars, the ditches of this century. You have been thinking about the importance of having the right influence upon one nursery. You have been thinking of the importance of getting those two little feet on the right path. You have been thinking of your child's destiny for the next 80 years, if it should pass on to be an octogenarian. That is well, but my subject sweeps a thousand years, a million years, quadrillion of years. I can not stop at one cradle. I am looking at the cradles that reach all around the world and across all time. I am not talking of Mother Eunice. I am talking of Grandmother Lois. The only way you can tell the force of a current is by sailing up stream: or the force of an ocean wave, by running the ship against it. Running along with it we can not appreciate the force.

In estimating material influence we generally run along with it down the stream of time, and so we don't understand the full force. Let us come up to it from the eternity side, after it has been working on for centuries, and see all the good it has done and all the evil it has accomplished multiplied in magnificent or appalling compound interest. The difference between that mother's influence on her children now and the influence when it has been multiplied in hundreds of thousands of lives, is the difference between the Mississippi river away up at the top of the continent, starting from the little Lake Itasca, seven miles long and one wide, and its mouth at the Gulf of Mexico, where navies might ride. Between the birth of that river and its burial in the sea the Mississippi pours in, and the Ohio pours in, and the Arkansas pours in, and the Red and White and Yazoo rivers pour in, and all the states and territories between the Allegheny and Rocky mountains make contribution. Now, in order to test the power of a mother's influence, we need come in off the ocean of eternity and sail up toward the one cradle, and we will find 10,000 tributaries of influence pouring in and pouring down. But it is after all one great river of power rolling on and rolling forever. Who can fathom it? Who can bridge it? Who can stop it? Had not mothers better be intensifying their example? Had they not better be rousing themselves with the consideration that by their faithfulness or neglect they are starting an influence which will be stupendous after the last mountain of earth is flat, and the last sea has dried up, and the last flake of the ashes of a consumed world shall have been blown away, and all the telescopes of other worlds directed to the track around which our world once swung shall discover not so much as a cinder of the burned-down and swept-off planet. In Ceylon there is a granite column 36 square feet in size, which is thought by the natives to decide the world's continuance. An [illegible] robe spun from zephyrs is once a century to descend and sweep the hem of that robe across the granite, and when by that attrition the column is worn away they say time will end. But by that process that granite column would be worn out of existence before mother's influence will begin to give way.

"If a mother tell a child if he is not good some bugaboo will come and catch him, the fear excited may make the child a coward, and the fact that he finds that there is no bugaboo may make him a liar, and the echo of that false alarm may be heard after 15 generations have been born and expired. If a mother promises a child a reward for good behavior, and after the good behavior forgets to give the reward, the cheat may crop out in some faithlessness half a thousand years further on. If a mother cultivate a child's vanity and eulogize his curls and extol the night-black or sky-blue or nut-brown of the child's eyes and call out in his presence the admiration of spectators, pride and arrogance may be prolonged after half a dozen family records have been obliterated. If a mother express doubt about some statement of the Holy Bible in a child's presence, long after the gates of this historic era have closed and the gates of another era have opened the result may be seen in a champion blasphemer.

Good or bad influence may skip one generation or two generations, but it will be sure to land in the third or fourth generation, just as the Ten Commandments, speaking of the visitation of God on families, says nothing about the second generation, but entirely skips the second, and speaks of the third and fourth generation: "Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the third and fourth generation of them that hate me." Parental influence, right and wrong, may jump over a generation, but it will come down further on as sure as you sit there and I stand here. Timothy's ministry was projected by his grandmother Lois. There are men and women here, the sons and daughters of the Christian church, who are such as a result of the consecration of great-great-grandmothers. Why, who do you think the Lord is? You talk as though his memory was weak. He can as easily remember a prayer offered five centuries ago as a prayer offered five minutes ago. This explains what we often see—some man or woman distinguished for benevolence when the father and mother were distinguished for pennriousness, or you see some young man or woman with a bad father and a hard mother come out gloriously for Christ, and make the church sob and shout and sing under their exhortations. We stand in corners of the vestry and whisper over the matter, and say, "How is this, such great piety in sons and daughters of such parental wordliness and sin?" I will explain it to you if you will fetch me the old family Bible containing the full record. Let some septuagenarian look with me clear upon the page of births and marriages, and tell me who that woman was with the old-fashioned name of Jemima or Betsy or Mahitabel. Ah, there she is, the old grandmother, or great-grandmother, who had enough religion to saturate a century.

There she is, clear od soul, Grandmother Lois. In beautiful green wood cemetery there is the resting place of George W. Bethune, once a minister of Brooklyn Heights, his name never spoken among intelligent Americans without suggesting two things—eloquence and evangelism. In the same tomb sleeps his grandmother, Isabella Graham, who was the chief inspiration of his ministry. You are not surprised at the poetry and pathos and pulpit power of the grandson when you read of the faith and devotion of his wonderful ancestress. When you read this letter, in which she poured out her widowed soul in longings for a son's salvation, you will not wonder that succeeding generations have been blessed.

"NEW YORK, May 20, 1791.

"This day my only son left me in bitter writhings of heart; he is again launched on the ocean—God's ocean. The Lord saved him from shipwreck, brought him to my home and allowed me once more to indulge my affections over him. He has been with me but a short time, and ill does it improve it; he has gone from my sight, and my heart bursts with tumuituous grief. Lord have mercy on the widow's son, 'the only son of his mother.'

"I ask nothing in all this world for him; I repeat my petition: Save his soul alive, give him salvation from sin. It is not the danger of the seas that distresses me; it is not the hardships he must undergo; it is not the dread of never seeing him more in this world; it is because I can not discern the fulfilment of the promise in him. I can not discern the new birth or rich fruit, but every symptom of captivity to Satan, the world and self-will. This—this is what distresses me, and in connection with this his being shut out from ordinances at a distance from Christians; shut up with those who forget God, profane His name and break His Sabbath; men who often live and die like beasts, yet are accountable creatures, who must answer for every moment of time and every word, thought and action. O Lord, many murders hast Thou shown me; Thy ways of dealing with me and mine have not been common ones; add this wonder to the rest. Call, convert, regenerate and establish a sailor in the faith. Lord, all things are possible with Thee; glorify Thy Son and extend His kingdom by sea and land; take the prey from the strong. I roll him over upon thee. Many friends try to comfort me; miserable comforters are they all. Thou art the God of consolation; only conform to me Thy precious word, on which Thou causest me to hope in the day when Thou saidst to me, 'Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive.' Only let this life be a spiritual life, and I put a blank in Thy hand as to all temporal things.

"I wait for salvation. Amen."

With such a grandmother, would you not have a right to expect a George D. Bethune? And all the thousands converted through his ministry may date the saving power back to Isabella Graham.

GOLD AND SILVER VALUES.

The Silver Dollar Is an Important Factor in Our Financial Transactions.

The products of manufactories in the United States, according to Mr. Mulhall, are one-half as much as those of the balance of the world, being annually $7,315,000,000, while those of the entire world are $22,370,000,000. The gentleman from Maine (Mr. Reed), now speaker of this house, in a speech before that body on February 1, 1894, referring to the manufacturing interests of this country, said: "I do not vouch nor can anyone vouch for these figures, but the proportion of one-third to two-thirds nobody can forcibly dispute. We produce one-third and the rest of the world, England included, two-thirds. The population of the world is 1,500,000,000, of which we have 70,000,000, which leaves 1,400,000 for the rest of mankind. We use all our manufactures or the equivalent of them. Hence we are equal to one-half the whole globe outside of ourselves, England included, and compared as a market with the rest of the world our population is equal to 700,000,000." With such an array of facts and figures who can doubt that this nation in commerce, mining and manufactures and agriculture is equal to at least one-fourth if not one-third of all the nations of the world? With such a power and such a force, is it possible that we are too weak to establish a financial policy of our own? It has been estimated that there are between $20,000,000,000 and $30,000,000,000 of long times indebtedness, consisting of national, state, county, city and corporation bonds and individual promissory notes, owed in this nation. Over one-half of this is payable in lawful money of the United States. Under free coinage silver dollars become legal tender for the payment of all that $10,000,000,000 or $15,000,000,000 of debt. It is a principle recognized in all political economy that, if one dollar is cheaper than another, all the lawful obligations payable in lawful money will be paid in the cheaper dollar, and thus if silver should ever go to a discount compared with gold, there would be an enormous demand created for silver by the debtors who owe the $10,000,000,000 or $15,000,000,000. With such an enormous demand upon the limited quality of silver available for coinage, is it possible that anyone would part with silver at an appreciable discount? You must remember that this silver dollar is not only a legal tender for the payment of private debts, but it is also a legal tender for the discharge of state, county and city taxes, which aggregate about $500,000,000 a year. It is a legal tender for the payment of all import duties, internal revenue duties and postage dues for the national government, and you must remember that the national government raises by those duties the enormous sum of almost $500,000,000 a year.

JOHN F. SHAFROTH.

REMONETIZATION OF SILVER.

The Necessity of Bringing Out Free Coinage Is More Apparent Than Ever.

Republicans who are extremely anxious to convince the people that silver sentiment is dead are saying that "events have changed the conditions since 1896."

In what direction have the conditions been changed? Is the oppression of the people because of the gold standard relaxed in any degree? Are the prices of real estate advanced? Has the farmer experienced any benefits brought about by foreign causes, such as the famine in India and the short crop of wheat abroad?

As a matter of fact, the necessity of bringing about the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one is more apparent to-day than ever. And as another matter of fact, there are more people to-day in the United States who favor such a change than there were in 1896.

Down south the silver question is very much alive, but not more so than in the west and northwest. So far as labor is concerned, the conditions are such as to demand the remonetization of silver. In this connection the Atlanta Constitution says:

"In certain classes of labor—the cotton operatives of New England—wages are in some instances below the pauper labor of Europe. A gold standard advocate will either not admit this or he will say that it is not a serious matter; but it is a very serious matter, indeed. By cutting off a part of our money supply we have suffocated demand in our home markets.

"To remedy this we have reduced wages to the European pauper level in order that we may compete with the products of this pauper labor in its own natural markets. Can that which gives the whip hand to misery, poverty, distress and degradation in this country be called a great victory for American trade?"

No, indeed; silver sentiment is not dead, nor have events changed the conditions since 1896. The monetary question is the great issne of to-day and will continue to be the great issue until it is settled and settled right.—Chicago Dispatch.

——The enormous tariff imposed on wool by the Dingley law having failed to give the advance in that staple promised the Ohio wool growers, who were the chief moving force in securing the Dingley wool schedules, are resorting to a new scheme to lift wool prices. They have taken measures, it is said, looking to the organization of a league of dealers in the principal markets, who are to receive consignments, advance money to growers and local buyers and hold the wool for sale until satisfactory prices are offered by eastern dealers.—Grand Rapids Democrat

REPUBLICAN LOG ROLLING.

Under the Wilson tariff law, which, though by no means perfect, was measurably enlightened, lumber was on the free list, to the great advantage of every consumer of lumber, an advantage enjoyed largely by the people in the northwest, where the use of lumber in the construction of dwellings and farms is well-nigh universal. But lumber manufacturers who had denuded the great natural forests of the northwest made an outcry. Their privileges—that is, their opportunity to put their hands in another man's pocket by the aid of the general government—were infringed.

When this country returned to McKinleyism a tariff tax was placed upon lumber, the purpose being to shut out from this market the manufactured product of Canadian forests. But the schedule was cunningly contrived. Logs were not placed upon the free list by name, but the schedule of lumber was so drawn that, as a matter of fact, they were exempt. The reason was that the great lumber barons of the northwest, who had grown mighty in their riches taken with the aid of the government from every household, found themselves without sufficient supply of logs to be dressed. They wanted free trade in logs, and so the schedule was arranged that logs rafted from the Canadian possessions on the great lakes should come to them free, while the product of the Canadian mills should come to this country taxed.

Mr. Dingley, who prepared the latest McKinley atrocity, was particularly careful to look after his own constituents, and, lest the general clause might fail he had a clause incorporated looking to the especial protection of American owners of forests of the state of Maine upon the St. John river and its tributaries and the St. Croix river if logs were sawed or hewed in the province of New Brunswick, all such product to come in free.

When Canadians found that the United States had so arranged their tariff as to gain for the lumber barons of the American lake region free logs and a tariff on sawed lumber they rose in their wrath, and, intimating that they could do something of the Dingley act themselves, put an export duty on Canadian logs equivalent to American duty on sawed lumber. Thus the lumber barons of the United States in the lake region were beaten at their own game. They could not have the whole hog themselves.

Since divers and sundry differences have arisen largely by reason of artificial restraints on freedom of commerce between Canada and the United States a commission has been created to adjust them. It is now sitting in Quebec, making little progress because of the hide-bound, moss-backed character of the American commissioners, who do not understand the benefits of freedom of commerce, but imagine that the American people may get rich by taking themselves for the benefit of some particular manufacturing millionaires. They want Canada to throw off the export duty on logs, but the Canadian commissioners answer in substance that where equity is sought equity must be done, and assert that no concession will be made on the part of the Canadian government in the way of permitting Canadian logs to go free into the United States unless the United States make some concession in the way of reducing or removing the present duty of two dollars a thousand on Canadian sawed logs.

Reprisals beget reprisals. At the end of the nineteenth century, in the most enterprising and enlightened quarter of the globe, a foolish trade policy is pursued worthy of the darkest of the dark ages.—Chicago Chronicle.

A Sure Sign.

Maine went for the republicans. In fact, it went for them with a battle-ax, their majority being cut down one-third. From this and the result of other recent elections it looks very much as if the influence of the republican party will become very much decayed during the next decade. The next republican candidate for the presidency ought to be a happy man. He can go to bed on election night without bothering himself about election returns. There will be no doubtful states as far as he is concerned.—Tammany Times.

——That eminent patriot and statesman, Mark Hanna, of Ohio, has declared in a published report of an interview that "this war business is not going to cut much of a figure in the coming elections." Mr. Hanna has no great reputation or honor as a political prophet either in his own country or elsewhere. In fact, he is a novice in politics and inexperienced, and was unknown as a politician until a couple of years ago. It is the common belief of the best informed and most astute political observers that "this war business," which spells Algerism, and the administration's indorsement of it, is going to cut a very considerable figure in the coming elections.—Philadelphia Ledger.

——Even more significant than usual are the elections of this year, showing as they do distinct republican losses in the face of the expectation of the republican leaders to turn the war to their own account. These results show that the people do not propose to let the republican politicians take credit for that which they have no claim whatever—the splendid victories on land and sea—but do propose to hold the republican administration responsible for the scandalous treatment of the brave soldiers by the department presided over by the republican secretary of war.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE ONLY GOOD DOLLAR.

Gold Alone Does Not Constitute Sufficient Money for the People of This Country.

Rejecting the shallow, insufficient and irrelevant definitions of our gold standard friends, let us propose you a definition of an honest dollar. My definition of an honest dollar is this: It is a dollar of unchanging value, a dollar which is worth the same to-day as it was 20 years ago, which will be worth the same 20 years from now as it is to-day. That is the only honest dollar that the Fifty-fourth congress can devise, or [illegible] dollar that can look an honest [illegible] face and say, I never robbed [illegible] soul in all my pilgrimage through [illegible] the commerce of the world. [illegible] dollar that has gone down [illegible] it has robbed the credit [illegible] the benefit of the debtor. [illegible] a dollar that has gone up, then [illegible] robbed the debtor for the [illegible] of the creditor. A dollar [illegible] either way robs somebody [illegible] benefit of somebody else, and the only dollar that never robs anybody is the dollar that never changes value. Now, is the gold dollar one of that kind? If it is, it is an honest dollar, and the gold standard ought not to be abolished. My gold standard friends ought to find themselves able to agree with me in that. Their objection to using both gold and silver is that it would make money go down. My objection to using gold alone is that it would make money go up. In other words, we say that the gold standard makes money so high and everything else so cheap. They say the donble standard will make money so cheap and every thing else so high. Now, of course, a low price of money means a higher price of property. High prices of money means a low price of property. And when our gold standard friends tell us we are going to make money too cheap by using both gold and silver, what do they mean? They mean that we are going to make property and all the products of labor too high. Not only so, but they mean that we are going to make money too plentiful. They must mean that because nothing ever became too cheap in all the history of this world until it first became too plentiful. If they will find in all the history of the world a single country and a single generation where any country ever had too much money, I will give up this controversy. In all the thousands of years through which the world has passed, not one single nation in any age of the world ever had too much gold and silver money. I have no fear that that which has not happened in all the years which have gone is going to happen in all the years to come. But I have a deep-seated fear that even with gold and silver both, instead of having more than you want, the most of you will have less than you need. Knowing that gold alone does not constitute sufficient money for the people of this country, I demand that we use both gold and silver, and when we have used them both it would still be necessary to supplement them by the use of paper. Our gold standard friends, recognizing that there is not gold enough on which to transact all the business of the country, say you do not need the money; all you need is a standard, and then you can have credit for the balance of it, and they propose to supply it how? My friend, Mr. Burke, has aptly said they stole an idea from the populists, and that is the only idea the middle-of-the-road populists ever had.

MODEL SWINE HOUSE.

A Good Carpenter Should Be Able to Build It in Four Days at a Cost of $35.

A suitable house for swine is found on but very few farms, for the great majority of farmers seem to think that a fence on the lee side of some straw stack is good enough, and to go to the expense of building a cheap house none can find to go into and sleep at night, or in bad weather seems like throwing money away. They do not stop to think that a well prepared swine house would soon [illegible] many nickels.

and-ends of planks, etc., lying around in the yard that would go a long way toward building a suitable house for swine, and anyone with a little knack at rough carpentering can build one if he knows just what kind of a building he wants.

I will describe my hog house, and if I were to build another I do not see how I could improve it, except only the roof. Mine is a gable roof, and I think I should like a slant roof better. I made my house out of old odds-and-ends of plank that were left over from tearing down an old house. It has not got a single new piece of timber in it, and I did all the work myself, at odd times when I could do nothing else. The only cash that I paid was for nails and some shingles. The windows and door came out of the old house.

Fig. 1 shows the house. It is 24 feet long by 16 feet wide. W W are windows, D D doors. The door in the gable end is for convenience in putting anything into the loft that I want to put there. I made it so I could put corn there to feed in the winter if de-

Fig. 2 shows the ground plan. As you will see, it has two apartments, each 12x16. The feed alley, F, is three feet wide. J is the slop barrel, V V a common V pig trough that runs from G to G, nearly the width of the building. D D are doors hung over the trough to keep the pigs out while putting the slop in. The doors are hung to the piece marked A A. It is 2x5. The dotted line shows the position the doors are in when putting in feed. The places marked G G are gates. D D are doors that open to the inside and are three feet wide by three feet long. There is a strip nailed to the floor for the doors to open against, with a hook to fasten them. When the weather is cold I shut the door at night and also during the day when the wind blows cold. All other times I leave it open. The places marked E are gates to turn the hogs from one pen to another by letting out only one lot. The pen 24x16 has an open shed. The house and yard are floored with odd plank sawed off to fit in. I forgot to state that the building is seven feet up to the square. The cost and amount of material are about as follows:

133 feet of sills	$1.66
40 studding, 187 feet	2.33
Floor joist, 171 feet	2.13
Rafters, 170 feet	2.12
Sheathing, 390 feet	4.87
Flooring, 384 feet	4.80
Shingles, 3,850	5.73

SIZE IS IMPORTANT.

There Is No Market Now for Undersized Horses, No Matter How Good They May Be.

For years the standard of the market for horses has been steadily advancing. It takes a better horse nowadays to be called a good one than ever before. He must have more quality, more style and, above all, more size than ever. The last is especially important in the opinion of the National Stockman. A horse must be of good size for his class to bring a good price. A little draft horse is a chunk and maybe a poor one at that. A small driver is not wanted by men who can afford to pay good prices for driving horses, and is too small to work. If a man is breeding drivers to sell, he must get the size. He cannot afford to risk getting extreme speed one time and losing the other things nine times. He must breed for quality, style and size and all the speed he can add thereto will profit him. But a farmer cannot afford to breed small horses on the chance of getting speed, for too often he doesn't get it or doesn't know when he has it. Get them good and big, and they will sell.

IMPROVING PASTURES.

Surprise the Owner in Its Beneficent Results.

If there is any one part of the farm that is neglected in the summer time when the rush of harvesting takes up most of the time and attention of all, it is the pasture fields, says a writer in Indiana Farmer. While there may be some little excuse for this on large grain farms, it can hardly be overlooked on a dairy farm, where grass and green pasture are the chief dependencies for success. The improvement of pasture fields is a crying need on many old places. As a rule the roughest and most sterile fields are given over to pastures, and it is not giving a cow a fair show to make her pick up a living on land that would not produce anything else. This is often the case, however, and then we blame the cow for not giving more milk. Half the fault against our dairy cows can be traced to improper feeding. Because a cow has a large field or meadow to graze in it does not follow that she ought to give a large flow of milk. A much smaller piece of land would produce much better results if the pasture was rich and well cared for. It is all right to give the cows for pasture the roughest and rockiest part of the farm, for naturally one does not select that portion for plowing under crops. But it is the part of wisdom to bestow a little care upon such fields to improve them each year. A few days' labor devoted to the pasture fields every season will surprise the owner in the results five years later. First there are rocks and stones that can be gradually carried off the field and piled up. Clearing the pasture field in this leisurely way will yield its reward some day when it is found desirable to cultivate the meadows or hillside for orchard or field crops. Along with this work should go that of clearing the land of wild berry bushes, brush, roots and weeds. The roots once taken up will kill the bushes and trees for good, and so with the weeds. See that they are rooted up, and not simply cut off. Noxious weeds prevent grass plants from growing, and generally they harbor parasites and rusts of grain which may spread to the cultivated fields any day, and do a great amount of damage. This work of clearing the pastures of foreign growths is very important at this season of the year when weeds are about ready to produce their seeds. One plant destroyed root and branch now may prevent the growth of 50 next summer. So it is wise to begin at once, for every year that the work is postponed the pasture field degenerates so much more. While engaged in this work of destruction it might be well to reconstruct, too. Plant a few shade trees in the most convenient place of the field, and if necessary for their protection fence them in until they attain a good growth. Years later they will be appreciated by both man and beast. When the weeds are pretty well rotted out, it will pay to sow the field in the fall with grass seed, spreading it thinly around to reenforce the old grass.

NOTES FOR BEEKEEPERS.

September is the proper time to begin feeding.

To prevent robbing it is usually best to feed at night.

Every colony should have 25 to 30 pounds of stores now.

The thinner the honey when extracted the more evaporation it will require.

For keeping, extracted honey is much more easily cared for than comb honey.

It is an advantage always to furnish a new swarm with a frame of young brood.

It is important with bees in winter to provide thorough ventilation in the hive.

It is a mistake to leave honey in the hive any length of time, as it becomes yellow.

Extracted honey will granulate and become hard on the approach of cold weather.

Bees will bear confinement much longer on a good quality of honey than on inferior honey.—St. Louis Republic.

Sheep on Weedy Farms.

That sheep are more profitable for the average farmer than cattle, and especially for those owning hilly or broken farms, cannot be denied, as sheep will thrive where a steer will starve, and for renewing worn-out and run-down farms they have no equal, as they soon rid the land of weeds, briars and brush, while their manure is the richest of all fertilizers and is distributed evenly over the surface of the soil. But, like every other business, care and judgment must be exercised in order to secure the highest rate of profit. A full-blooded ram should be used, as a scrub is dear at any price.—Epitomist.

Sheep in the Pastures.

Whenever the pastures have been overgrown with shrubs and young trees the best way to repress their growth is to turn in sheep to pasture. A flock can thus be kept on land that without it would soon be so overgrown that no grass could be procured. The sheep will bite off the tender growth of the present year, and will get as much nourishment from it as they would from feeding with hay. As a means of keeping pastures from being covered with brush, sheep are invaluable. They will thrive where any other stock would scarcely be able to live.—American Cultivator.

PICTURE OF THE FILIPINO.

He Is Called "Treacherous" and "Streak of Yellow" in His Composition.

The Filipino, somewhere away back in his ancestry, has the drop of black blood which makes him cower and shrink when a bullet hits him. It is the display of what sporting men call the "streak of yellow."

But so long as he is a winner, and even for a longer time than is the case with most dark races, after he has begun to lose, the Filipino will fight like a demon, and he is so immeasurably the superior of the Spaniards in fighting ability, his "streak of yellow" lies so much further below the surface than the don's, that the odds are in his favor, anyway. That he has made a good fight goes without saying. The result is his justification, and although I do not believe he would ever have achieved anything without the aid of Dewey's guns and the more powerful American dollar, he has in the past, and would have in the future had Spain's claim been put off, have given the Castilians not a little trouble in the matter of the collection of revenues.

The Filipino—he is just now most enthusiastically in love with the Americans. Out in the country there is nothing too good for the American. I have lived with the native in his hut, and I have had the best the hut contained put freely at my disposition, the best to eat, the best split bamboo floor, soft and springy, to sleep upon even the best of his weapons, the pride of his heart, his loved machete, keen enough to shave with and heavy enough to cleave a man's skull at a blow, offered to me as a free gift.

And yet there has always been, in my mind, a lurking distrust of my host. There is something of a glint—a suggestion of the Malay drop in his mixed ancestry—in the soft brown eye, recalling to mind those old stories of dark men running amuck to kill and kill and kill, until they have themselves been shot in their tracks like dogs, as they deserved.

I have recalled the fact that no wise sea captain will ship a Manila man as one of his crew, and that native Filipinos have been taken, as children, into Spanish families and tenderly reared only, at the last, to put poison in the food of the entire family, and to make no excuse for the atrocious act other than to say they had grown "hot in the head."

Whether such a people can ever be trusted to govern themselves, as the Filipinos clearly expect the Americans to trust them, is a question for statesmen—but I would most respectfully suggest to the statesmen, before attempting its solution, that they come out here and take a few practical lessons in ethnology.—N. O. Picayune.

MEN BEHIND THE GUNS.

An English Naval Authority on Lessons of American Naval Victories.

Lord Brassey, the great British naval authority, on his way to New South Wales, of which he is governor, in an interview the other day said:

"The navy of the United States is small, but a very good one, and it has upheld the best traditions of the sea and of the race. The Spaniards are no seamen. The officers in the fight off Santiago were brave enough, I have no doubt, but I fancy smoking cigarettes has always been the chief occupation in Spain's navy. As for gunnery, who could have looked for any better results from them? I never heard of any Spanish naval maneuvers, and I don't remember hearing of any target practice. Their engine and fireroom force is wretched and incapable.

"The war has confirmed what naval experts have long held, that inflammable material in the construction of men-of-war should be done away with. The fires at Manilla and Santiago have settled that question for good. In the second place, it is demonstrated that good men are better than good ships; though, of course, good men in good ships is the ideal to strive after.

"But most important of all results of the war on the side of the naval service is the conclusion to which it seems to point with regard to the merits of rapid-fire guns. I don't hesitate to say that the war has proved it is necessary to have good protection against rapid-firing high-power rifles and machine guns, even if one has to sacrifice a number of guns to secure this protection. The importance of what were the secondary batteries on the American ships cannot be overrated. The big guns must give way to quick-fire guns of medium caliber, although you cannot altogether do away with big guns."

Lord Brassey said he had not followed closely the operations of the American army, but he believed it would have been better to have left operations against Cuba in the hands of the navy until fall.

He said he saw no further reason for differences between England and the United States, and that there ought to be no need of formal treaties to perpetuate the good understanding already existing.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Tiniest Queen on Earth.

Djihan Begum is believed to be the smallest monarch in the world. This tiny queen, who is over 50 years old, but is no larger than a child of ten, reigns over more than 3,000,000 subjects in the Hindoo vassal state of Bhopal. But in this dwarf's realm peace and prosperity are supreme, for despite her size she has a firm grip on the reins of government, and her rule is as strong as if she were ten times as large.—N. Y. A DOMESTIC INCIDENT.

From the Observer, Flushing, Mich.

"Early in November, 1894," says Frank Long, who lives near Lennon, Mich. "on starting to get up from the dinner table, I was taken with a pain in my back. The pain increased, and I was obliged to take to my bed. The physician who was summoned pronounced my case muscular rheumatism accompanied by lumbago. He gave me remedies and injected morphine into my arm to ease the pain.

"My disease gradually became worse until I thought that death would be welcome release from my sufferings. Besides my regular physician I also consulted another bnt he gave me no encouragement.

On Getting Up from the Table.

"I was finally induced through reading some accounts in the newspapers regarding the wonderful cures wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, to try them. I took the pills according to directions and soon began to notice an improvement in my condition. Before the first box was used I could get about the house, and after using five boxes, was entirely cured.

"Since that time I have felt no return of the rheumatic pains. I am confident that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life and I try to induce my friends who are sick to try the same remedy. I will gladly answer inquiries concerning my sickness and wonderful cure, provided stamp is enclosed for reply. "FRANK LONG."

MATTER OF FACT.

He Thought the Poor Girl Needed a Change from "the Style to Which She Had Been Accustomed."

He is a young man whose unbounded assurance has ever been his chief characteristic.

When he proceeded to talk to the practical old gentleman about marrying his daughter he was evidently prepared for the usual question:

"Do you think you can support my daughter in the style to which she has been accustomed?"

The parent spoke this phrase with the air of a man who thinks he has uttered a poser. The sniter looked him in the eye.

"Let's talk this thing over," he said. "Do you think your daughter is qualified to make a man a good wife?"

"Yes, sir. Her mother and I are both practical people and we have given her a practical education. She can not only read Greek and play the piano—she practices three hours a day—but she can get a good dinner and make her purchases in market as intelligently as an experienced steward. Moreover, her abilities with the needle are not confined to fancy work. She's a treasure, and we don't propose to have any misunderstandings about her future."

"You were asking me if I thought I could support her in the style to which she has been accustomed."

"I was."

"Well, I could. But I don't propose to. After she marries me she's not going to practice three hours a day on any piano nor cook dinners nor take back talk from market people. She's going to have all the sewing done outside of the house, read what she enjoys, whether it's Greek or Chinese, and go to the matinee twice a week. It's time that girl was beginning to have some good times in this life."—Washington Star.

MRS. PINKHAM TALKS TO THE FUTURE WOMAN.

Will the New Generation of Women be More Beautiful or Less So? Miss Jessie Ebner's Experience.

A pleasing face and graceful figure! These are equipments that widen the sphere of woman's usefulness. How can a woman have grace of movement when she is suffering from some disorder that gives her those awful bearing-down sensations? How can she retain her beautiful face when she is nervous and racked with pain?

Young women, think of your future and provide against ill health. Mothers, think of your growing daughter, and prevent in her as well as in yourself irregularity or suspension of nature's duties.

If puzzled, don't trust your own judgment. Mrs. Pinkham will charge you nothing for her advice; write to her at Lynn, Mass., and she will tell you how to make yourself healthy and strong.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound strengthens the female organs and regulates the menses as nothing else will. Following is a letter from Miss JESSIE EBNER, 1713 West Jefferson St., Sandusky, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to let you know of the great benefit your remedies have been to me. I suffered for over a year with inflammation of the ovaries. I had doctored, but no medicine did me any good. Was at a sanatarium for two weeks. The doctor thought an operation necessary, but I made up my mind to give your medicine a trial before submitting to that. I was also troubled with leucorrhœa, painful menstruation, dizziness, nervousness, and was so weak that I was unable to stand or walk. I have taken in all several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now in good health. I will always give your medicine the highest praise."

We are informed by Mr. Woodward himself that on August 10 the sow went under a strawstack and there remained until September 21 without a mouthful to eat or a drop to drink. He also states that when she disappeared she weighed about 250, and that when she came out she had lost about 100 pounds of flesh, but had a good appetite and is now regaining her flesh rapidly. Mr. Woodward's veracity can not be doubted; he says the hog neither ate nor drank anything for forty-two days. He can not account for the strange act of this 'hermit-like' hog and would like to know if anybody ever heard of a similar circumstance.—Munsfordville News.

CHURCH NEWS.

Rowland Lewis, aged 81, was one of the converts at a meeting in Madison county, and was baptized.

The West Kentucky and Tennessee Baptist Association, comprising over one hundred delegates, met in Fulton last week.

The protracted meeting that was held in the meal room of a distillery on the Kentucky river by Drs. Ziegler and Douglas, of Jessamine county, was unusually successful, and certainly a novel revival.

The little country church of 178 members, at Wilmore, Boyle county, composed wholly of farmers, has undertaken to raise in full the salary of their pastor, the Rev. Dr. Guerrant, allowing him six months of the time for evangelistic work, and pledging him near $4,000 to be expended under his direction in work among the people of the mountain churches.

The Baptist church in Richmond is owned and occupied by two different congregations—the Old Baptist and the Missionary Baptist, a fact that has caused consider friction and been the cause of more than one pastor resigning. An important step has been taken toward closing the copartnership. The Old Baptist offered the Missionary Baptists $2,500 for their half interest, which will doubtless be accepted and another church building erected.

The State League of Colored Republicans will meet in Paris next Friday.

The registration at Mt. Sterling was about two-thirds what it usually is.

A young man in this town says he got fat in the army. He may hear of something to his advantage by addressing the Secretary of War. —Philadelphia North American.

VOL. XXIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1898. NO. 52.

Attention, Walton Democrats!

The Democrats of the Walton precinct are requested to meet in mass convention at Walton, Saturday, October 22d, 1898, at 3:30 p. m. for the purpose of choosing a member of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee. Said meeting will be called to order by Squire J. C. Byland, who will preside until a permanent chairman shall be chosen. D. E. CASTLEMAN,
Chmn Boone Co., Dem. Ex. Com.

THE RECORDER is twenty-three years old with this issue, and has neither rheumatism, gout nor dyspepsia.

ACCORDING to the Government's report on the foreign wheat crop, the price of that cereal in this country will go still lower.

THE Nebraska people did the very handsome thing by President McKinley when he visited the exposition at Omaha, last week.

TAKING the registration in the cities throughout the State as a pointer, the Republicans do not expect to put up a strong fight this fall.

MR. BYNUM has Deserted the Gold Democrats and joined the Republicans. One thing is certain: He will never get to be Treasurer of their National Committee.

THE stars and stripes were hoisted over Porto Rico yesterday, that is if the Spaniards did not turn some unexpected trick, which is hardly possible at this stage of the game.

UNCLE SAM may have to burn some more powder around the edge of the Philippines before peace is established. Spain is not acting like the spanking she recently received has restored her sense.

PALMER has gone back to the Republican party. The poor old fellow never did cut much ice as a Democrat, and his return to his original political home will not disturb the Democrats in the least.

THE Lutheran World, published at Cincinnati, has been received at this office. Rev. H. Max Lentz is the office editor. Mechanically the World is very handsome, and is brim full of interesting reading matter.

SENATOR FORAKER believes in this country keeping its promise to Cuba, made at the beginning of the war with Spain, and does not see wherein there will be any necessity for keeping a standing army on the Island.

IN Madison county, Indiana, are five persons whose ages range from 100 to 111 years. The sum total of their ages is 527 years. Three of these aged people are natives of this State—Julia Hamilton, 100; Monroe Hedges, 105 and Thomas Wells, 104.

SENATOR FORAKER is shooting two ways. He is lavish in his praise of the manner in which the Administration conducted the war with Spain, but fires hot shot into the President's Cuban policy. Foraker is a hard man to round up to the entire satisfaction of those who are in command at Washington.

THE Democrats expect to capture the lower House of Congress this fall, and the Democrats of Kentucky are relied on to aid materially in the effort necessay to accomplish that result. The contest, which, by the way, is a warm one, is now on in several of the districts. In this district the Democrats seem to think they have an easy fight before them and are resting quietly. They will have to shake off their lethargy, and it is time that they were doing something in that direction, if they expect and desire to maintain their position as the banner Democratic district in the State. Boone county Democrats ought to roll up one of their old time majorities.

THE American Tobacco Company has absorbed the Drummon Tobacco Company of St. Louis. The sum realized for the property being $3,457,500. The deed passing the title required $453 dollars worth of revenue stamps. It is claimed that the American Tobacco Company will control about sixty per cent of the entire output of manufactured tobacco in the United States. Besides this trust has a monopoly of the cigarette trade, and is rapidly extending its tentacles to the leaf tobacco realm. It has a capital of $25,000,000 and there is no telling what a powerful influence it will ultimately exert on the tobacco interest of this country, but it is not to be in a direction to benefit the producers.

THE New York Advertiser gives the following brief synopsis of the Democratic platforms adopted by the States that have held conventions this year:

Connecticut—Arraigns the Administration generally for the mismanagement of the war and declares for bimetallism as enunciated by Jefferson.

Deleware—Declares devotion to all the cardinal principles of the Democratic faith which have come down from Jefferson and Jackson, calls for a reformation of the currency system, and, now that the war with Spain is ended, demands that war taxes be lessened.

Florida—Condemns territorial aggression and declares for free and independent silver coinage at 16 to 1.

Idaho (Fusion)—Declares its firm conviction that all territory over which the United States has acquired sovereignty or control, is ours henceforth, to be governed as an inseparable part of the United States.

Iowa (Fusion)—Opposes acquisition of territory, other than coaling and naval stations, in other parts of the world than the Western Hemisphere, and declares against a large standing army in time of peace. Pronounces for the free coinage of gold and silver at a ratio of 16 to 1.

Massachusetts—Declares uncompromising hostility to imperialism, insists that Cuba shall be made free and independent and calls for restoration of both gold and silver to free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1.

Missouri—Favors the retention of Porto Rico and the annexation of Cuba whenever the Cuban people so elect, and opposes acquisition of the Philippines or other territory in the Eastern Hemisphere, except for coaling station. Demands free silver coinage at 16 to 1.

New Hampshire—Opposes territorial expansion, reaffims the Chicago platform and expresses admiration for W. J. Bryan.

New York—Ignores all national questions, but denounces the Administration for the suffering of soldiers in camp. The rest of the platform is devoted to State issues.

New Jersey—The only reference to national issues is reaffirmation of the "great and vital principles of the Democratic party" on such questions. Declares State issues paramount in this campaign.

Ohio—Believes that until the people of Cuba and the Philippines, redeemed from Spanish domination, declare otherwise, "we should keep the faith" (not to exercise over them sovereignty, jurisdiction or control) "upon which the war was begun and prosecuted." Indorses the Chicago platform and favors the nomination of W. J. Bryan in 1900.

Pennsylvania—Makes no allusion to national questions except to declare support of the Government in waging war with Spain. The remainder of the platform is devoted to alleged Republican misrule in Pennsylvania.

Rhode Island—Insists upon retention of the Philippines, demands that the Cuban people be allowed a chance to establish a stable government of their own and indorses the Chicago platform.

Texas—Favors keeping Porto Rico and the annexation of Cuba when the people of the latter island so desire, and opposes annexation or continued retention of the Philippines or any other territory in the Eastern Hemisphere; approves an increase in the present standing army, and indorses free silver and pledges Texas Democrats to the support of W. J. Bryan for President in 1900.

Vermont—Opposes the "imperialistic policy of the Republican party in the annexation or colonization of any territory won from Spain by our arms," denounces the annexation of Hawaii as unwise, reaffirms the Chicago platform and expresses "undiminished admiration of and confidence in William J. Bryan."

Wisconsin—The platform is evasive on the subject of territorial expansion and declares allegiance to Democratic principles proclaimed at Chicago in 1896.

Wyoming—Favors the retention of all territory over which the American flag floats and reaffirms the Chicago platform.

GEN. P. WAT HARDIN made a speech at Shelbyville, the other day in which he announced himself a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and denounced the charge that he is a political back number. He is full of vim and vigor yet, and declares his intention of making a hot fight for the nomination.

It is getting to be a question now whether it was Quay who shook the plum tree or whether the plum tree has shaken Quay.—Baltimore News.

CHURCH NEWS.

The devil dont' have to go among sinners to get helpers. He can get all he wa[illegible] the churches.—Sam Jones.

These [illegible] waking up. D. D. stands for d[illegible]head, doodle diggers, or devil [illegible]wers. The last is all right.—Sam Jones.

A heap of pre[illegible]ach please the devil, and when they [illegible] do goodby, John, with them. So[illegible] fellows have at their churches [illegible] a duet and a sermonette.—Sam Jones.

Rev. J. W. Porter met with great success in his meeting with the Carlisle Baptist church. The church was not large enough to accommodate the crowds that turned out, to hear him, and the meeting was transferred to the court house.

One of the most interesting religious characters in the State is the Rev. John S. Greathouse, who has been conducting a revival in the court house at Glasgow. He asserts that Christ will again visit the earth in 1899, and says he is waiting and working that he may be able to give a good account of himself when "the Redeemer appears." The evangelist says that since 1889 he has walked over 10,000 miles, preached 5,000 sermons, visited 10,000 sick people, married 300 couples, and had printed for free distribution more than 500,000 sermons. In all his sermons there is but one that contains the pronoun I, as he says the Scripture forbids anyone endowed with the Holy Spirit to speak of himself.

It is possible that the scandal about the mismanagement of our army during the war may be succeeded by a greater scandal about the negotiations for peace in Paris. The precautions taken to prevent the American public from getting at the secrets of this extraordinary and picturesque conclave of Americans, who do not speak Spanish, and Spaniards who do not speak English, are almost incredible.

It was ex-Secretary Day who made the motion in joint session of the Spanish-American commission that the proceedings be kept an absolute secret. This secrecy is maintained, not only with respect to the joint sessions, but also covers separate meetings of the American commissioners.

Not only is the American public to be kept in utter ignorance of what the United States will propose to Spain as a basis of peace, in order that the pending Congressional elections may not be affected, but a few choice spirits have apparently been let into the secret of the situation so rigidly guarded from the public.

In consequence, a ring has been formed to buy Phillipine bonds, and the market is being scoured for them. I discovered two days ago that powerful friends of both Spanish and American commissioners had received inside information that the United States will insist upon annexing the whole archipelago, and would assume responsibility for the Philippine debt, although the interest on the bonds might be reduced from 6 to 4, or even 3 per cent. I know that communications on the subject of these bonds have been passing between Paris and Madrid.

In order to test the situation, I tried to buy some Phillipine bonds in Madrid through French agents.

I at once discovered that a powerful movement was on foot to gather up the Philippine bonds. This is one of the most suggestive results of Day's scheme of secrecy. Under its shelter gigantic combinations seem to be forming enterprises that would be impossible were the air and sunlight of publicity let into the main features of the negotiations.

The situation is curiously like that which existed in Washington when two Senators arranged the sugar schedule of the tariff in secret sessions, while their friends made millions of dollars in the stock market on the basis of private information. I cannot yet ascertain how far there may be a Wall Street end to this, but there certainly is a Madrid bourse end to it.

No wonder there is a strong, almost irresistible, pressure on the commissioners to keep such valuable secrets from the general public. Masterful craft also is now being employed to suppress the Cuban Republic and to annex the island to the United States. This scheme is being pressed by a gigantic combination of Spanish capitalists, backed by the Spanish Government and aided by some Americans. They have even secret hopes that with annexation the United States might guarantee some fraction of the immense Cuban debt. But in this they will surely be disappointed, for I know of a certainty that every American Commissioner is determined to resist every responsibility, direct or indirect, for the so-called Cuban debt, a debt which in reality has nothing to do with Cuba or its people, but is properly chargeable on the royal treasury at Madrid.

The scheme's sole object is to increase the value of Spanish property and enhance Spanish interests. It has behind it all the cunning and power of the wealthiest men in Spain.

POLITICAL.

On Monday Col. Berry came to Williamstown and made a speech at the court house to a very large crowd. His popularity in Grant county was never greater than at the present time and he will get likely the biggest majority this fall that he has yet secured in this county.—Courier.

Some of R. F. Peak's friends think that Senator Goebel made a difference between Mr. Peak and Mr. Thorn by introducing Mr. Thorn and allowing Mr. Peak to speak without an introduction at the convention on last Saturday. Mr. Goebel may not have intended it.—Trimble Banner.

Delegates were sent to Newport to nominate Hon. A. S. Berry for Congress; and we are all for him to a man, but when they tried to commit the Democratic voters for a State office to be voted for in 1899, then they overstepped their authority. Their action was undemocratic and is loudly denounced in this county.—Carrollton News.

It is said that the resignation of Hon. Wilbur R. Smith, of Lexington, as Adjutant General of the State, will in a few days be handed to the Governor, and that he will accept it. Gen. Smith was only appointed to the place a few weeks ago upon the resignation of Gen. Dan Collier, who gave up the office on account of private business relations.

At Preston, in the case of John D. Young, jr., under conviction and sentence of six years for the killing of Plinney Fassett, Judge Cooper promptly granted a motion for a new trial and also granted a change of venue to Menifee county. It was proved by four witnesses that one of the jurors had frequently expressed the opinion that defendant was guilty of murder and ought to suffer the extreme penalty for that crime.

Ex-Senator Blackburn, says; "The political outlook in Kentucky is as satisfactory as Democrats could wish. Of the eleven Congressional Districts they will carry nine certainly, and of the remaining two there is more than even chance of carrying one, the Louisville district. It seems to me that there is every reason to regard the condition of the Democracy throughout the Nation, with complacency, and I believe that the gains made by the party in November, will be large in a majority of the states."

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

The rain and continued warm weather have had bad effect on the housed tobacco.

Mr. R. B. Craig showed us a peach the other day that tipped the beam at 11 ounces.

The marriage of Miss Mary Settle, daughter of Hon. E. E. Settle, and the Rev. Jessie Caldwell, pastor of the Owenton Christian church will take place at the church next Tuesday at high noon.

Owen county carries off all the honors this year. Settle was nominated by acclamation by the Democrats, and Capt. Hardin, for the Republican party, the Captain is a clever gentleman, but if he will get in bad company, he may as well expect to get as good beating as any other Republican.

Robert Kinman, "Uncle Bob", of Lusby's Mills, died suddenly at his home last Wednesday night of heart trouble. He had returned from Downingsville that day, and during the trip had several spells, but an hour or two after his return felt much better, and only a few minutes before his death was laughing and talking with the family. He was 73 years of age, had lived at Lusby's Mill most all his life, and was identified with the interests of the county for many years. He was married three times.

[Herald.]

Capt. T. J. Hardin, the Republican nominee for Congress in this district, is an elegant gentleman and will poll the usual strength of his party in November, but he can have no possible hope of being elected. He and Mr. Settle are good friends, citizens of the same county and members of the same profession.

The farmers are about through cutting tobacco in this locality, and quite a quantity was cut green for fear of frost.

The Fiscal Court let the pauper practice to Dr. D. E. Lusby for $14 and the pauper coffins to J. C. Hartsough at $6 for each coffin and $2 for the box.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

Commonwealth's Attorney, M. D. Gray, after an illness of a month with a variety of complaints is about once more, a little the worse for wear, but still in the ring.

Twenty-five applications have been filed for keeper of the county infirmary, and still "there are more to follow." As only one can be elected there are apt to be a number disappointed after the selection is made.

Dudley Starnes, of Holbrook, left at the Courier office last Monday, a sample of white corn grown on his farm on Eagle creek, that takes the cake as far as size, weight and quality, of any corn seen at the Courier office this year. The ears are over a foot long, well developed and of perfect shape, and weigh very heavy.

If tobacco has been damaged in the house as badly as reports indicate, a very large proportion of the crop in this county will be of very inferior quality. Tobacco did the most of its growing in the latter part of the season, and, in many instances became very rank, the stalks and stems being unusually large and full of sap. This uncommon condition existed when the tobacco was put in the house, and the unfavorable weather that followed, rendered the preservation of the crop very difficult, even with an unusal amount of precaution on the part of the growers when putting the crop in the house. Some fired their tobacco as son as they discovered that it was rotting, but only a very small per cent. of the producers resorted to that preventive. The actual damage sustained by tobacco by reason of house-burn can not be estimated anything like accurately before the crop is stripped, at which time it is hoped much less injured tobacco will appear than is now anticipated.

THE farmers in this county are paying more attention to their stock than they did a few years ago, and are taking greater pains to improve the grade of cattle they produce. Experience has taught them that there is no money in raising scrubs, and the cedar-heads have about disappeared from the pastures, their places being supplied by the more profitable shorthorns. When a land owner goes out to buy grazing cattle he does not make his purchase as promiscuously as of yore, but hunts for stock that exhibits signs of good breeding, and those who produce the better grades of cattle never experience any trouble in securing buyers for their animals in the event they become overstocked. A good steer requires no more food and attention than one that is inferior, and the cattle men of the county are constantly on watch for the best animals that are for sale, and this inspires an effort to improve the breeding.

James Hogan allowed $8 for repairing public privy vault.

Thens Nesbitt allowed $3 50 for taking depositions in case of Commonwealth of Ky., vs Harry Hamlin.

N. E. Riddell allowed $6, amount paid for advertising in Cincinnati Enquirer for bids on work on Court-house.

A. M. Thomas qualified as Police Judge of the town of Florence to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. H. Rice.

Judgment entered directing the allotment of dower to Mrs. Virginia Conner in the lands of her deceased husband, Reuben Conner, and for a division of the remainder between the two daughters and three sons of the deceased. In placing a value on the tracts occupied by J. W. and W. W. Conner the commissioners are directed to disregard the improvements, they having been put on the land by the two boys at their own expense A. P. Collins, M. S. Rouse and J. C. Hughes are the commissioners and are ordered to meet on the 24th inst. to begin the partition.

J. E. Duncan, J. M. Barlow and Ben Stephens, commissioners commenced Monday to set off dower to Mrs. Yancy Clore, and divide the remainder of the 400 acres among the four heirs.

A tramp stopped at a house down in the country, the other day, where the lady had just finished churning and emptied the butter milk into a slop-bucket. He picked up a tin cup that was near, and, remarking, "it's a pity to let so much nice milk go to waste," proceeded to fill his capacious maw with the milk, it taking about half a gallon to satisfy him.

The hunters are waging a war of extermination on the rabbits, and the envy of squalls that gets up runs a great risk of getting in range of a load of shot. The posting season is also here, and many of the farmers are posting their lands, but to suppress the hunters one hundred soldiers, placed in each magisterial district, would be kept busy.

As Hubert Gaines was leaving town with a load of coal, after dark, last Friday night, a negro driving a buggy collided with his team, the buggy shaft penetrating the breast of one of the horses, making a very ugly wound.

SERMON ON IRRIGATION.

A Worthless Area Once Was the Far Western Regions.

It Is Now as Rich as Any in the Nation—Irrigation Makes the Dessert Blossom —So Should Waste Places Be Flooded With Gospel.

Dr. Talmage, in this discourse, takes us with him on a journey to the Pacific, and finds "The footsteps of the Creator" everywhere, as Hugh Miller found them in the old red sandstone. Texts: Isaiah xxxv., 6, "Streams in the desert;" Psalms civ., 32, "He toucheth the hills and they smoke."

My first text means irrigation. It means the waters of the Himalaya, or the Pyrenees, or the Sierra Nevadas poured through canals and aqueducts for the fertilization of the valleys. It means the process by which the last mile of American barrenness will be made an apple orchard, or an orange grove, or a wheat field, or a cotton plantation, or a vineyard—"streams in the desert." My second text means a volcano like Vesuvius or Cotopaxi, or it means the geysers of Yellowstone park or of California. You see a hill, calm and still, and for ages immovable, but the Lord ont of the heavens puts His finger on the top of it, and from it rises thick and impressive vapors: "He toucheth the hills and they smoke!"

Although my journey across the continent this summer was for the eighth time, more and more am I impressed with the divine hand in its construction, and with its greatness and grandeur, and more and more am I thrilled with the fact that it is all to be irrigated, glorified and Edenized. What a change from the time when Daniel Webster on yonder Captoline hill said to the American senate in regard to the center of this vast continent and to the regions of the Pacific coast: "What do you want with this vast, worthless area, this region of savages and wild beasts, sands and prairie dogs? To what use could we ever put these great deserts or these great mountains, impenetrable and covered with eternal snow? What can we ever hope to do with the western coast, rock-bound, cheerless and uninviting, and not a harbor on it? I will never vote one cent from the public treasury to place the Pacific coast one inch nearer Boston than it now is." What a mistake the great statesman made when he said that! All who have crossed the continent realize that the states on the Pacific ocean will have quite as grand opportunities as the states on the Atlantic, and all this realm from sea to sea to be the Lord's cultivated possession.

Do you know what in some respects is the most remarkable thing between the Atlantic and Pacific? It is the figure of a cross on a mountain in Colorado. It is called the "mount of the Holy Cross." A horizontal crevice filled with perpetual snow, and a perpendicular crevice filled with snow, but both the horizontal line and the perpendicular line so marked, so bold, so significant, so unmistakable, that all who pass in the daytime within many miles are compelled to see it. There are some figures, some contours, some mountain appearances that you gradually make out after your attention is called to them. So a man's face on the rocks in the Wilts mountains. So a maiden's form cut in the granite in the Adirondacks. So a city in the moving clouds. Yet you have to look under the pointing of your friend or guide for some time before you can see the similarity. But the first instant you glance at this side of the mountain in Colorado, you cry out: "A cross! A cross!" Do you say that this geological inscription just happens so? No! That cross on the Colorado mountain is not a human device, or an accident of nature, or the freak of an earthquake. The hand of God cut it there and set it up for the nation to look at. Whether set up in rock before the cross of wood was set up on the bluff back of Jernsalem, or set up at some time since that assassination, I believe the Creator meant it to suggest the most notable event in all the history of this planet, and He hung it there over the heart of this continent to indicate that only hope for this nation is in the cross on which our Immanuel died. The clouds were vocal at our Saviour's birth, the rocks rent at His martyrdom, why not the walls of Colorado bear the record of the crucifixion?

First, consider the immensity of this continental possession. If it were only a small tract of land, capable of nothing better than sage brush, and with ability only to support prairie dogs. I should not have much enthusiasm in wanting Christ to have it added to His dominion. But its immensity and affluence no one can imagine unless, in immigrant wagon or stage coach, or in rail train of the Union Pacific or the Northern Pacific of the Canadian Pacific or the Southern Pacific, he has traversed it.

I supposed in my boyhood, from its size on the map that California was a few yards across, a ridge of land on which one must walk cautiously lest he hit his head against the Sierra Nevada on one side, or slip off into the Pacific waters on the other—California, the thin slice of land, as I supposed it to be in boyhood, I have found to be larger than all the states of New England and all New York state and all Pennsylvania added together, and if you add them together their square miles fall far short of California. And then all those newborn states of the union, North and South Dakota, Washington, Montana, Idaho and Wyoming. Each state an empire in size.

"But," says some one, "in calculating the immensity of our continental acreage you must remember that vast reaches of our public domain are uncultivated heaps of dry sand, and the 'Bad Lands' of Montana and the Great American desert." I am glad you mentioned that. Within 25 years there will not be between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts 100 miles of land not reclaimed either by farmers' plow or by miners' crowbar. By irrigation, the waters of the rivers and the showers of Heaven, in what are called the rainy season, will be gathered into great reservoirs, and through aqueducts let down where and when the people want them. Utah is an object lesson. Some parts of that territory which were so barren that a spear of grass could not have been raised there in 100 years are now rich as Lancaster county farms of Pennsylvania, or Westchester farms of New York, or Somerset county farms of New Jersey. Experiments have proved that 10 acres of ground irrigated from waters gathered in great hydrological basins will produce as much as 50 acres from the downpour of rain as seed in our regions. We have our freshets and our droughts, but in those lands which are to be scientifically irrigated there will be neither freshets nor droughts. As you take a pitcher and get it full of water, and then set it on a table and take a drink out of it when you are thirsty, and never think of drinking a pitcherful at once, so Montana and Wyoming and Idaho will catch the rains of their rainy season and take up all the waters of their rivers in great pitchers or reservoirs, and refresh their land whenever they will.

The work has already been grandly begun by the United States government. Over 400 lakes have already been officially taken possession of by the nation for the great interest of irrigation. Rivers that have been rolling idly through these regions, doing nothing on their way to the sea, will be lassoed and corralled and penned up until such time as the farmers need them. Under the same process the Ohio, the Mississippi and all the other rivers will be taught to behave themselves better, and great basins will be made to catch the surplus of waters in times of freshets, and keep them for times of drought. The irrigating process by which all the arid lands between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans are to be fertilized is no new experiment.

It has been going on successfully hundreds of years in Spain, in China, in India, in Russia, in Egypt. About 800,000,000 of people of the earth today are kept alive by food raised on irrigated land.

And here we have allowed to lie waste, given up to rattlesnake and bat and prairie dog, lands enough to support whole nations of industrious population. The work begun will be consummated. Here and there exceptional lands may be stnboorn and refuse to yield any wheat or corn from their hard fists, but if the hoe fail to make an impression, and the miner's pickax will discover the reason for it, and bring up from beneath those unproductive surfaces coal and iron and lead and copper and silver and gold. God speed the geologists and the surveyors, the engineers and the senatorial commissions, and the scientific and the new settlers and the husbandmen, who put their brain and hand and heart to this transfiguration of the American desert! "Streams in the desert!"

But while I speak of the immensity of the continent, I must remark it is not an immensity of monotone or tameness. The larger some countries are the worse for the world. This continent is not more remarkable for its magnitude than for its wonders of construction. Yosemite and the adjoining California regions! Who that has seen them can think of them without having his blood tingle? Trees now standing there that were old when Christ lived! These monarchs of foliaged reigned before Cæsar or Alexander, and the next thousand years will not shatter their sceptor! They are the masts of the continent, their canvass spread on the winds, while the old ship bears on its way through the ages.

That valley of the Yosemite is eight miles long and a half mile wide and 3,000 feet deep. It seems as if it had been the meaning of Omnipotence in crowd into as small a place as possible some of the most stupendous scenery of the world. Some of the cliffs you do not stop to measure by feet, for they are literally a mile high. Steep so that neither foot of man or beast ever scaled them, they stand in everlasting defiance. If Jehovah has a throne on earth these are its white pillars! Standing down in this great chasm of the valley you look up and yonder is Cathedral Rock, vast, gloomy minister built for the silent worship of the mountains! Yonder is Sentinel rock, 3,270 feet high, bold, solitary, standing guard among the ages, its top seldom touched, until a bride, one Fourth of July, mounted it and planted the national standards, and the people down in the valley looked up and saw the head of the mountain turbaned with stars and stripes! Yonder are the Three Brothers, 4,000 feet high; Cloud's Rest, North and Sonth Dome, and the heights never captured save by the fiery bayonets of the thunderstorm!

No pause for the eye, no stopping place for the mind. Mountains hurled on mountains. Mountains in the wake of mountains. Mountains flanked by mountains. Mountains split. Mountains ground. Mountains fallen. Mountains trimmphant. As though Mt. Blanc and the Adirondacks and Mt. Washington were here uttering themselves in one magnificent chorus of rock and precipice and water-fall. Sifting and dashing through the rocks the water comes down the Bridal Veil falls so thin you can see the face of the mountain behind it. Yonder is Yosemite Falls, dropping 2,634 feet, 16 times greater descent than that of Niagara. These waters dashed to death on the rocks, so that the white spirit of these slain waters ascending in robe of mists seeks the heavens. Yonder is Nevada Falls, plunging 700 feet, the water in arrows, the water in rockets, the water in pearls, the water in amethysts, the water in diamonds. That cascade flings down the rocks enough jewelry to array all the queens in beauty, and rushes on until it drops into a very hell of waters, the smoke of their torment ascending forever and forver.

But the most wonderful part of this American continent is the Yellowstone park. My two visits there made upon me an impression that will last forever. Go in by the Monoida route as we did this summer and save 250 miles of railroading, your stage coach taking you through a day of scenery as captivating and sublime as the Yellowstone park itself. After all poetry has exhausted itself concerning Yellowstone park, and all the Morans and Bierstadts and the other enchanting artists have completed their canvas, there will be other revelations to make, and other stories of its beauty and wrath, splendor and agony, to be recited. The Yellowstone park is the geologist's paradise. By cheapening of travel may it become the nation's play-ground! In some portions of it there seems to be the anarchy of the elements. Fire and water, and the vapor born of that marriage, terrific. Geyser cones or hills of crystal that have been over 5,000 years growing! In places the earth, throbbing, sobbing, groaning, quaking with aqueous paroxysm. At the expiration of every 65 minutes one of the geysers tossing its boiling water 185 feet in the air and then descending into swinging rainbows. "He toucheth the hills and they smoke." Caverns of pictured walls large enough for the sepulcher of the human race. Formations of stone in shape and color of calla lilly, of heliotrope, of rose, of conslip, of sunflower and of gladiolus. Sulphur and arsenic and oxide of iron, with their delicate pencils, turning the hills into a Luxemburg, or a vatican picture gallery. The so-called Thanatopsis geyser, exquisite as the Bryant poem it was named after, and the Evangeline geyser, lovely as the Longfellow heroine it commemorates.

Wide reaches of stone of intermingled colors, blue as the sky, green as the foliage, crimson as the dahlia, white as the snow, spotted as the leopard, tawny as the lion, grizzly as the bear, in circles, in angles, in stars, in coronets, in stalactites, in stalagmities. Here and there are petrified growths, or the dead trees and vegetables of other ages, kept through a process of natural embalment. In some places waters as innocent and smiling as a child making a first attempt to walk from its mother's lap, and not far off as foaming and frenzied and ungovernable as a maniac in struggle with his keepers.

But, after you have wandered along the geyserite enchantment for days and begin to feel that there can be nothing more of interest to see, you suddenly come upon the gerorsest on of all majesty and grandeur.

The great canyon. It is here that it seems to me—and I speak it with reverence—Jehovah seems to have surpassed himself. It seems a great gulch let down into the eternities. Here, hung up and let down, and spread abroad are all the colors of land, sea and sky. Upholstering of the Lord God Almighty. Best work of the architect of worlds. Sculpturing by the Infinite. Masonry by an omnipotent trowel. Yellow! You never saw yellow unless you saw it there. Red! You never saw red unless you saw it there. Violet! You never saw violet unless you saw it there. Triumphant banners of color. In a cathedral of basalt. Sunrise and Sunset married by the setting of rainbow ring.

Gothic arches, Corinthian capitals and Egyptian basilicas built before human architecture was born. Huge fortifications of granite constructed before war forged its first cannon. Gibraltars and Sebastopols that never can be taken. Alhambras, where kings of strength and queens of beauty reigned long before the first earthly crown was empearled. Thrones on which no one but the King of Heaven and earth ever sat. Fount of waters at which the hills are baptized, while the giant cliffs stand around as sponsors. For thousands of years before that scene was unveiled to human sight, the elements were busy, and the geysers were boiling away with their hot chisel, and glaciers were pounding with their cold hammers, and hurricanes were cleaving with their lightning strokes, and hail stones giving the finishing touches, and after all these forces of nature had done their best, in our century the curtain dropped, and the world had a new and divinely inspired revelation, the Old Testament written on papyrus, the New Testament written on parchment, and this last testament written on the rocks.

Hanging over one of the cliffs I looked off until I could not get my breath, then retreating to a less exposed place I looked down again. Down there is a pillar of rock that in certain conditions of the atmosphere looks like a pillar of blood. Yonder are 50 feet of emerald on a base of 500 feet of opal. Wall of chalk resting on pedestals of beryl. Turrets of light trembling on floors of darkness. The brown brightening into golden. Snow of crystal, melting fire of carbnncle. Flaming red cooling into russet. Cold blue warming into saffron. Dull gray kindling into solferino. Morning twilight flushing midnight shadows. Auroras crouching among rocks.

Yonder is an eagle's nest on a shaft of basalt. Through an eyeglass we see among it the young eagles, but the stoutest arm of our group can not hurl a stone near enough to disturb the feathered domesticity. Yonder are heights that would be chilled with horror but for the warm robe of forest foliage with which they are unwrapped. Altars of worship at which nations might kneel. Domes of chalcedony on temples of porphyry. See all this carnage of color up and down the cliffs; it must have been the battlefield of the war of the elements! Here are all the colors of the wall of Heaven, neither the saffron, nor the chrysolite, nor the topaz, nor the jacinth, nor the amethyst, nor the jasper, nor the 12 gates of 12 pearls, wanting. If spirits bound from earth to Heaven could pass up by way of this canyon, the dash of heavenly beauty would not be so overpowering. It would only be from glory to glory. Ascent through such earthly scenery, in which the crystal is so bright, would be fit preparation for the "sea of glass mingled with fire."

THEY WILL NOT HELP.

Democrats Will Not Cover Up the Abominations of the McKinley Administration.

Because the democratic party is parading the corruption, favoritism and incompetency of the administration during the war, republican leaders are charging it with disloyalty to the country. They say the peace commission may fail in its mission and that war with Spain may have to be resumed, and because of that nothing should be said about the conduct of the war lest it should discredit America with the other nations, and embolden Spain to reject any and all demands except those of her [illegible]. The democracy will not [illegible] the whitewashing of the administration, because if Europe [illegible] the facts it might go hard with the United States. But the republican leaders are not bothered about [illegible] Europe thinks of President McKinley's administration. It is the American people they are afraid of. Their appeal to democrats to [illegible] the facts on patriotic grounds is a clear case to prevent exposure. Every democrat in the United States will admit that the country would be disgraced by exposing the rottenness of the war end of the administration's conduct of the affairs of the nation, but they believe the country would suffer far worse in the end by covering up the facts.

The men who compose the president's official family are not weaklings. They are among the strongest leaders of the party, and it cannot be said that they stumbled into ways of political favoritism and official corruption without knowing it. There has been too much method in making generals of political wire-pullers and party henchmen to suggest anything but premeditation. Too much care was taken to select certain "distinguished" republicans for contractors for army supplies to indicate any haphazard business about it. Too much incompetency was shown in handling the volunteers to make one believe that an experienced hand was directing the affairs of the army. But, anyway, the people could not be fooled by keeping silent on these matters, and if they could the democratic party would not keep silent. It is the business of the democracy to expose the corruption, favoritism and incompetency of McKinley's administration, and it is going to push its business without any reference whatever to what the disgrace of the exposure may be in the eyes of Spain or any other country. The democratic party will not help cover up the abominations of the McKinley administration on patriotic or any other grounds; besides, the highest quality of patriotism finds expression in exposing corruption, favoritism and incompetency in high official circles.—Kansas City Times.

CONDITION CHANGED.

Trusts Built Up by Republican Legislation Are Trampling Down the People.

In an interview with a Cleveland reporter Senator Hanna makes the highly unorthodox admission that the chances for success in the struggle for life in this country are vastly less to-day than they were some 25 years ago. This is most dangerous doctrine, and the senator is likely to find himself classed with the anarchists and fomentors of social discontent. The proper thing to say is to insist that every young man to-day has just as good a chance to become a Gould, a Vanderbilt, a Huntington or a Hanna as those worthies enjoyed when they began the pleasant task of exploiting the people. The social philosophy which was supposed to be safe and conservative insists that opportunity is as great now as it was before corporate capital had learned the art of debauching legislators and securing control of all the natural monopolies.

Senator Hanna, for a wonder, declines to subscribe to this fiction. He limits his bright promise of the future to the chance that young men of ability and industry may, if they are in the employ of a good concern, get to the top in time and enjoy large salaries. This is an abandonment of all the ideals that have made Americans pushing and progressive. It is a confession that the old American determination to achieve independence, to become your own master, is doomed in the new conditions of the twentieth century to failure in the majority of cases.

And the worst of it is that what Senator Hanna says is true.

From a nation of men striving upward toward independence and self-employment we have become a nation of servants, only seeking to improve in some degree the conditions of our servitude. The public lands which in bygone years offered a field of conquest to those who revolted against industrial servitude are gone. The great corporations and trusts, built up by 40 years of republican legislation, have so circumscribed the field of individual effort that for the clerk to become a merchant, the artisan to become a manufacturer on his own account, is a task almost as impossible as the labors of Hercules.

Moreover, the people who have built up and who now enjoy the fruits of this enormous structure of monopoly which is crowding the people down into serfdom are not the men whose genius and capacity for systematizing industry have improved and are improving systems of manufacture or of trade. They hire men to do that. The trust magnates are men skilled in juggling with stocks and bonds; the railroad barons are men who know how to "reorganize" corporations; the unscrupulous and the unfit are at the top. Mr. Rockefeller hires men who know how to make oil, while he devotes himself to the more mysterious operations of stifling competition. Mr. Carnegie finds relaxation in foreign lands while his hired men devise for him methods of cheapening and improving steel and iron.

It is well that the people should understand the condition that exists, and it is therefore fortunate that so prominent a figure as Senator Hanna should have the brutal frankness to admit it. But to accept it as inevitable, as incapable of remedy, would be criminal folly. The remedies are at hand, and the people have power to apply them whenever they will bestir themselves. The attack on monopoly—the monopoly of land, of money and of opportunity—strenuously urged, will in time win. We will then see fewer great captains of industry, but more independent Americans.—N. Y. Journal.

A Dastardly Act.

Writes a correspondent from Washington: "One of the most dastardly crimes for political purposes was committed by the war department on the 4th of October, 1898. Col. W. J. Bryan had been lying for over a week on a sick bed at Washington, D. C., having come there to secure the furlough of the dying men in his regiment. The administration took advantage of his helpless condition and ordered him back to Jacksonville to have it appear that he was derelict in his duty as a soldier. Mr. Bryan's wife was at his side, having come all the way from Nebraska to nurse her husband. Such are the depths of infamy to which the republican leaders descend in order to obtain a political advantage. As there was no fighting to do, what excuse can our government offer for such contemptible action?"—Illinois State Register.

—Another woolen mill has failed under the blessings of the protection afforded by the Dingley law. The Plymouth Woolen company, of Plymouth, Mass., has made an assignment. It is a 16-set mill, and has been running since 1879 in Plymouth. It was in operation for many years before in Franklin, Mass. Woolen mills are closing, and shoddy mills are clothing the American people with "American woolens." Besides, the price of wool is going down so that the farmers are kicking because they are not getting the promised benefits of a higher duty on wool. In this business it seems that the wool grower and the wool manufacturer have cut each other's throats. —Utica Observer.

—Mark Hanna says "that no member of the administration is responsible for the starvation of our soldiers." He claims that he ought to know, "because he was at the war department almost all the time." Then there was starvation among the soldiers after all? Mark Hanna admits it, and his admission should prove conclusive evidence in anything relating to the administration he created.

ISSUE OF THE WAR.

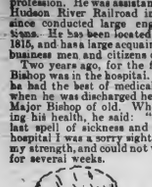
How Republicans Have Tried to Bar the Way to the Freeing of Cuba.

As democrats we do not believe in claiming the credit of the war with Spain; we believe the whole great American nation is entitled to that honor; but as Grosvenor, Hanna and the republican congressional committee have made such a challenge, and for partisan purposes are claiming that the republican party and Mr. McKinley are entitled to all the credit, it becomes us to state some of the facts of history and show that every effort was made by the administration and the republicans in congress, with a very few exceptions, to stifle the public feeling in favor of freeing Cuba, and that even after the destruction of the Maine the peace party had control of the administration. The democrats in congress were united in their efforts to pass a resolution declaring the belligerent rights of the Cubans, and the republicans placed every obstruction in the way. Mr. Reed, the speaker of the house, refused to appoint any committee on foreign affairs at the extra session which began soon after the inauguration of Mr. McKinley, so that all bills and resolutions of any kind, except the tariff bill, when introduced, were merely filed to await action at the regular session. Mr. Lewis, of Washington, on May 27, 1897, attempted to overcome this by a resolution introduced declaring for the belligerent rights of the Cubans as a privileged question. He made a very strong argument, showing that our foreign relations were privileged, and quoting opinions of former speakers and even the rulings of Mr. Reed to prove his case, but the speaker decided against him. He appealed from the decision of the chair, and the chair was sustained by 89 yeas to 53 nays, all republicans voting to sustain the speaker and all the democrats for free Cuba. Similar efforts were made by all democrats from time to time, but the efforts of the administration and the speaker prevented action and kept the republicans in line against free Cuba. When the regular session convened in December, 1897, the committees having been appointed by the speaker, all bills and resolutions relating to Cuba were referred to the committee on foreign affairs. No report was made on any of the Cuban matters. On January 10, 1898, Mr. Brucker, of Michigan, introduced a resolution directing the committee on foreign affairs to report without further delay senate resolution No. 26, declaring that a state of war existed in Cuba, and that strict neutrality should be maintained. Mr. Hitt, the chairman of the foreign affairs committee, made a point of order against the consideration of the joint resolution, and the point of order was sustained by Speaker Reed. Mr. Brucker appealed against the decision, and on a division the chair was sustained, yeas 169, nays 125. (See Congressional Record, page 816.) The votes that sustained the speaker against taking any action in favor of the Cubans were all cast by republicans, and the democrats voted unanimously in favor of the same. It will thus be seen that the republicans were determined to do nothing to aid the Cubans.

Currency Legislation.

It will be observed that none of the republican papers is saying anything about the "enlightened currency" legislation which the grand old party has pronounced for. Why don't they print the bill reported by the house committee on banking and currency, to which the republican party stands committed, and explain and defend its provisions? This bill, which is substantially the measure prepared by Mr. Hugh Hanna's monetary reform commission, and introduced in the house by Jesse Overstreet, provided for the destruction of the greenbacks, for the total abondonment of silver as standard money, for the irrevocable establishment of the single gold standard, for the granting of a monopoly of the issue of paper currency to the national banks, and the most vicious and dangerous expedient of reckless and dishonest finance known, as banking on assets. The issue presented by this measure is the most important before the country, save the question of humanity and justice raised by the war department scandals. Why don't the republican press discuss this issue?—Indianapolis Sentinel.

—Now is the time when the spell binder, in a burst of eloquence, declares that where the American flag has once been raised, there civilization and humanity must abide forevermore. And, at the same time, from the far west come long and glowing reports of incidents that tell of our civilizing and humanizing influence on the American Indians. In the one hundred and twenty-third year of our existence as a nation, our Indian problem is as much of a problem as ever. And yet some of us in their enthusiasm think that we can civilize and humanize millions of antipodean savages at the drop of the hat. We are a great people, and we know it, for our spell binders tell us so when they want our votes.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.



—It is the business of the democracy to expose the corruption, favoritism and incompetency of McKinley's administration, and it is going to push its business without any reference whatever to what the disgrace of the exposure may be in the eyes of Spain or any other country. The democratic party will not help cover up the abominations of the McKinley administration on patriotic or any other grounds; besides, the highest quality of patriotism finds expression in exposing corruption, favoritism and incompetency in high official circles.—Kansas City Times.

THE MAJOR'S EXPERIENCE.

From the Detroit Free Press.

One of the staunchest supporters of the deep-water way from the Great Lakes to the ocean is Major A. C. Bishop, of 715 Third Ave., Detroit, a civil engineer of wide experience and considerable prominence in his profession. He was assistant engineer on the Hudson River Railroad in 1850 and has since conducted large engineering operations. He has been located in Detroit since 1815, and has a large acquaintance among the business men and citizens of this city.

Two years ago, for the first time, Major Bishop was in the hospital. For two months he had the best of medical attendance, but when he was discharged he was not like the Major Bishop of old. When asked regarding his health, he said: "When I had my last spell of sickness and came out of the hospital I was a sorry sight, I could not gain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks.

Major Bishop.

"I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and I bought two boxes. I did not take them for my complexion but for strength. After using them I felt better, and know they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic to build up their constitutions.

"A. C. BISHOP."

ROBERT E. HULL, Jr. Notary Public.

The pure, powerful vegetable ingredients in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People supply the antidote for poisonous matter in the blood and add those elements needed to build up body and brains. Many diseases long supposed by the medical profession to be incurable have succumbed to the potent influence of these pills. They can be taken by young or old, being harmless in their nature, but powerful in eliminating disease.

HE HAD A FINE TIME.

Got His Muscle Up Fighting Bugs and Insects Down in the Country.

"Feel better after your outing, neighbor?" asked one Joy street man of another.

"In training while you were gone?"

"Yes; fighting bugs; all kinds of winged insects. It was just hell! bang! all day and most of the night. Exercise? I not only struck and kicked and danced, but went through every possible contortion of the human body. A moth miller is a nice, pretty, innocent little thing, but get 25 of them inside of your collar all at once and see how it goes. But that was only an item. While the millers were enjoying themselves I'd have my eyes full of some small bug that defies every form of death except by drowning; big beetles would be hitting my ears with a deafening noise, the mosquito fleet assailed me at every angle, the flies played the part of rough riders and some kind of bugs in three colors that gave forth a sound like that of a buzz saw ripping through a hardwood knot did a regular war dance. They drove me out at the finish, but my muscles are harder and more flexible than they have been since I was a schoolboy. I might have survived it another week, but when a lot of bees tried to hive in my old straw hat while I was wearing it I took a lumber wagon and caught the first train for home."—Detroit Free Press.

A New York Central Innovation.

George H. Daniels, of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, has made an announcement which is of a rather startling nature, but it is one which ought to please the patrons of that great system, and particularly those who travel on mileage books. The circular reads as follows:

Mileage books, good for 500 miles and 1,000 miles travel, are now on sale at all stations on the New York Central (divisions and branches) at the rate of $10 and $20 respectively.

These tickets are good until used, and are available for passage on the main line of the New York Central, and all of its branches and divisions, including the Harlem, Putnam, Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg, Carthage & Adirondack, Saratoga & Mohawk and the Adirondack (Utica to Montreal) divisions.

Mileage books will be issued in the name of the head of a family or firm, and will be available for the use of any member of such family or for any traveler for a firm, provided the name of such member or traveler is written in the book by the agent selling [illegible] ace designated. They will be honored for transportation by the conductors of all trains, including limited trains, but only to the end of the run of each conductor.

If the holder of such ticket desires to ride beyond the run of a conductor, or on a night train, or to a point on a branch line, he should present his mileage ticket to the ticket agent, who will detach the proper mileage and issue a mileage exchange ticket, on which baggage will be checked to any station on the New York Central or any of its branch lines, thus avoiding the necessity of being disturbed after retiring, or of rechecking baggage.—From the Pittsburgh Post, August 21, 1898.

A GREAT GAME.

Republicans Have Opened the Way to Wealth for Bankers and Trusts.

Time flies quickly. In the 70's Sherman blinded the eyes of many when he changed the 6s. to 4s. It was a game of anticipation; they sold for nearly the same amount. People wondered at this wonderful feat on the part of Honest John, but the trick was shortening the interest and lengthening the time the bond had to run. This was done for the sake of the banks, whose charters were soon to be renewed. They desired the open and shut game between four per cents. and their bank notes, thus causing a back and forward dancing between notes and bonds, the business community paying the fiddler. There was a side play going on also; banks were allowed one-quarter of one per cent. commission and three months' time to pay them in, when they could have been sold for cash without a commission. Thus a cool $5,000,000 was grabbed by the banks. Mr. Gage is continuing on the same line. The $400,000,000 bonds for carrying on the war with Spain, at three per cent. will just come in handy for the secretary's pet bank scheme. The national banks will come up again for recharter the beginning of the next century. They are particularly interested. Our republican financiers are not in a great hurry about ultimate gold monometallism; the banks object to having their notes payable in gold. Uncle Sam has shouldered the responsibility so far. They prefer to arrive at it by easy stages, and the disturbances from time to time they will blame to overproduction, war, strikes, elections, crop failures and what not, and as soon (God forbid that!) as they control all real estate and the money of the country the system should be reversed and the investors would reap a rich harvest for decades to come. L. Von Stein said: "There can be, according to all the laws of human development, no doubt that there will be a time when metallic money will disappear and mankind will possess only paper money." Millions upon millions will go to money autocrats ere this shall come to pass. It is a great game of cards, with tremendous stakes to win. Large trumps have been played, but the joker is still out.

RUDOLPH H. REEMELIN.

THE TRUTH AVOIDED.

Republican Organs Keep Out the Facts About the Ill Treatment of the Soldiers.

Republican managers are much worried over the fact that republican newspapers—that is, some republican newspapers—have yielded to the pressure for news and have printed the facts about Santiago and Montauk Point.

It would have been much more satisfactory to McKinley, Alger, Hanna & Co. (limited) if all the republican newspapers had suppressed the news or had "edited" it as the administration is said to have "edited" Roosevelt's report of the Santiago campaign. Facts are stubborn things, and this fact is being made manifest to the republicans by the democratic successes present and prognosticated.

In discussing the bad tactics of the republican newspapers, the Washington Post says:

"Republican managers have been heavily handicapped by the stupidity of a good many republican papers. When the war ended those papers, instead of dwelling on the unparalleled success that our government had achieved; instead of pointing to a record of glory unequaled in any chapter of history, permitted themselves to walk right into the trap that had been set for their clumsy feet.

"It was not the superb record of our government, not its splendid success in naval and land engagements, not the speedy end which unexampled victories had brought, not the acquisition of Spanish domain, not the expansion of Spain from the western world, not this wonderful story, but a mass of calumny, with here and there a grain of truth mixed in its mud, that those republican organs began to dish up to their readers. They got their stock from opposition papers, and they handed it about as if proud of being dupes."

This is a clever way to put it. The Washington Post is not lacking in cleverness, but the real meaning of it all is that the republican editors must quit telling the truth and begin to "lie like gentlemen" for the administration.

Should the truth continue to be told the republicans will lose control of congress, and that means an honest investigation of the army scandals and the downfall of Alger, the punishment of the incompetent sons of millionaires who starved the soldiers and a severe blow to the republican administration.—Chicago Democrat.

——Do the farmers want the present condition of things to continue indefinitely? Irrespective of political considerations, can they as a class afford to have present conditions exist? The value of farm lands has depreciated on an average about one-half. New offices are created at each session of the legislature, to be filled at the expense of the taxpayer, making taxes higher instead of lower, as should be if the equity of the case should be taken into consideration. Prices of farm products are barely high enough to cover the cost of production, and yet the "tax eaters" are insisting that "farmers are prosperous."

——It has been left for the republican party to make all the annexations of noncontiguous territory and champion a policy of expansion, dangerous to our republican institutions and obnoxious to the teachings of the fathers. Between that policy and the democratic traditional policy there is nothing in common. Between republican imperialism and democratic expansion there is no parallel, and when our republican contemporaries appeal to the democratic acquisition record for the purpose of helping their cause they prove too much for their own good.—Richmond Dispatch.

ENGLISH ROYAL SALARIES.

The duchess of Edinburgh brought her husband a dowry of $1,500,000 and an annuity of $56,250, which goes to her children at her death.

The queen's daughters, Princess Christian, Princess Louise and Princess Beatrice, all have $30,000 a year and each had a dot of $150,000.

Prince Christian has $2,500 a year as ranger of Windsor park and the marquis of Lorne $6,000 a year as governor of Windsor castle.

The duke of Connaught has $125,000 a year and his pay as general is nearly $15,000. The duchess brought a dowry of $75,000 and the duke settled $7,500 a year upon her at her marriage.

The duke of Edinburgh, for instance, whose financial affairs have so often been made the subject of gossip, had an allowance of $75,000 a year on attaining his majority and another $50,000 a year on his marriage, but voluntarily ceded this latter item on succeeding to the duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

The duke of Cambridge has $60,000 a year and Gloucester house rent free, which is equal to another $15,000 a year, and, although the rangership of the Green park, St. James', Hyde and Richard parks are altogether worth only $550 a year, the residences which go with them are worth a couple of thousand pounds a year. While the duke was commander in chief, as well as colonel of the grenadiers, he drew about $32,000 a year from the war office as well.

HORSE TALK.

Sunlight and pure air are potent elements in promoting health and vigor in horses as well as other stock.

Generous feeding of the growing colt will surely result in a larger and smoother animal than if it is allowed to grow up on the farm as best it can.

The horses used for plowing and getting out the corn and other work on the farm will be as well off without shoes as with them. Try it.

If all grooms and herdsmen realized the importance of their making themselves agreeable to the stock they handle we would have fewer unruly, nervous and worthless animals.

Since the time of the revolution horses have been steadily increasing in size. Mr. Wallace believes this to be due to the importation of larger horses from abroad for breeding purposes, and selecting the largest of their progeny to breed from.

If it was only health, we might let it cling.

But it is a cough. One cold no sooner passes off before another comes. But it's the same old cough all the time.

Mrs. M. SINGER, 104 Hudson Ave., Rochester, N. Y., writes to Mrs. Pinkham as follows:

"When I applied to you for advice I had been suffering some years from debility, nervousness, etc. I had had several miscarriages and was pregnant when I wrote to you.

"I am grateful to say that after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was considerably better, and after using three more it brought me where I am to-day. I am well, and the mother of a three-months' old baby.

"Doctors had failed to help me. I have no one to thank but Mrs. Pinkham and her wonderful remedy."

Mrs. ELLA DUNGAN, Reeder's Mills, Iowa, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I thank you for what your medicine and advice have done for me.

"I have a baby two months old. When he was born I was sick only fifteen minutes, whereas with my other children I was sick for two or three days, and also suffered with my left leg, and could get nothing to relieve the pain but morphine. My leg did not trouble me at all this time. I had no after pains and was not as weak as I had been before.

"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly. May God bless you in your noble work."

Mrs. J. W. PRUETT, Medford, Oregon, says:

"My health, also the baby's, we owe to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. JOHN W. LONG, Wyoming, Iowa, writes:

"I had shooting pains all over my body, was very weak and nervous. I could not straighten up. I wished to become a mother but was afraid I never could. Seventeen months ago I got some of your Vegetable Compound, and after taking half a bottle was much relieved. I took four bottles and was cured. Now I have a big baby boy which I feel I owe to your Compound. Many thanks for your kind advice."

If Tom Judge was carrying a sack of rye on his shoulder from a street-car in Cincinnati, and it came untied and spilled on the car floor, he would simply go right on as though nothing had happened, and might say in a quiet way, "What happened, Mr. Norman?"

Dr. Crouch is a courteous and hospitable host, and does all he can to have visitors enjoy themselves at his house, and yet his method of calling the guests to breakfast at 5 o'clock, by putting a pair of wooden shoes on his feet, hanging a bushel basket on his arm and parading the house is peculiar.

M. C. Weaver, of Tennessee, is no stranger to us, and we were pleased to hear from him so unexpectedly, and all of a sudden. Martin is a good fellow and we like him, but he ought to know that interrogation points are dangerous weapons to draw on a newspaper cor. They are liable to explode or call for facts (which makes it worse.) He interrogates about Rouse & Son's saw mill blowing the Sardis church into Smith's field and wants to know if the "Elm Hole" has two valves at one end or both ends, and is it safe to cross during the wet weather. Then he wishes us to tell him the difference between a sawmill boiler that is a steam boiler or a blood-boiler, and one that has a safety plug in the fire-box, and 200 feet of lightning rod on the smokestack to prevent people who ask questions from being killed by lightning immediately if not sooner. One question Martin asks sounds well (from a distance) and seems logical; that is, "Where was that valve situated?" We answer, in a very proper place, for as the fire got hotter, the steam got lower—mill hands not scarced—life insurance rates went up—the plug melted out and the water came in, quenching the fire, saving the mill, &c. So it is today Sardis is safe—the "Elm Hole" was not blown in at both ends like the smithereens, but is a hole and as a whole will remain a hole so long as any part of the whole remains.

Is any one sick at the school house? The Doctor has been seen there several times. Once he was reading. It couldn't have been the daily paper as he could have read that nearer home. He must have been consulting a medical volume.

He had been a great sufferer of consumption for a long time, but was patient to the last. Everybody in the neighborhood knew and loved Uncle Jake, and all are sorry to lose such a good friend. He will be greatly missed by all. Services were held at the house Thursday at 11 o'clock, and he was then laid to rest near the house in which he had lived so long.

Last Saturday, W. P. Cropper, armed with an agricultural book, went out in search of a new variety of mushrooms. Before it was adopted the report was so amended as to authorize the Moderator to appoint a committee of five to cooperate with the Interdenominational committee in securing the needed temperance legislation. The committee was appointed as follows:—G. Jones, S. M. Adams, N. S. Walton, M. Allen and D. E. Castleman.

The report on Foreign Mission shows that in Africa, Brazil, China, Italy, Mexico and Japan, there are 626,185,231 perishing souls. To save these there are 76 Missionaries and 117 native assistants. For this work the 175,849 Baptists in Kentucky gave $13,513 46, last year. Of that amount the North Bend Association, with 2,942 members, contributed [illegible] cents and 7 mills per member. The Foreign Mission Board closed the year with $3,000 in the treasury. There were, during the year, 701 baptisms.

The Home Missions made very gratifying progress during the year. The contributions were larger and a greater number were baptized than the previous year. The report on Home Missions urges upon the churches the importance of putting forth greater efforts for this board, that it may be able to meet the demands of the fields just opened. The new fields referred to is Cuba, mentioned in the report.

The contributions for State Missions were $76 51 smaller than last year. Number of Missionaries employed, 41; number of sermons preached, 4,556; number of prayer meetings, 1,609; number of professions of religion, 1,182; number baptized, 576; number received by letter and relation, 611. These Missions raised for church buildings on their Mission Fields, $14,652 04, and for Missions, $1,332 13. They organized 38 new Sunday schools. Number of religious visits, 16,770; pages of tracts distributed, 85,022; value of Bibles, books and tracts sold, $1,513 46; value of Bibles, books and tracts given away, $111 25. On these Mission Fields were 79 sunday schools, with 5,508 pupils. The schools raised $350 61 for Missions, and $606 58 cents for benevolent purposes. In Eastern Kentucky there are 17 county seats without a church of the Baptist faith.

The report on the Baptist Orhans' Home shows that during its existence of more than 28 years the Home has cared for 1,038 children. Miss Mary Hollingsworth has been the good matron all these long years. There were in the Home a year ago, 85 children; 22 have been received during the year; 19 adopted; 6 apprenticed; 1 died, leaving 85 still in the institution. The following amounts were pledged by the churches for the Home:—First Covington, $25; Bullittsburg, $20; Bellevue, $15; East Bend, $5; Big Bone, $25; Madison Avenue, $10; Walton, $10; Beaver Lick, $20; Ludlow, $5; Union, $12; Third Covington, $10; amount of cash collected, $46 48.

The Executive Board reports, "We have fallen back a little the past year in our collections for Missions. This is due more to a failure to press the work than anyother cause. We have undertaken nothing in the way of Mission work in our territory. This ought not so to be, but our money has all been absorbed in the Erlanger church building. During the year we have paid on the principal $155. There is still an unpaid amount of $957 50."

Going home from Buffalo Bill's show, last Wednesday, John Soothorn, who lives on Elijah creek, undertook to show his companions how Cow Boys ride, and in mounting his horse, which is a young animal, he spurred it severely, when it ran away, dashing him to the ground, breaking one of his arms and a leg. He was found in an unconscious condition by William Goodridge, who put him in his road wagon and hauled him home, where he lay a day or two before the extent of his injuries was discovered.

The RECORDER readers have been reading about large sweet potatoes all the fall, and waiting to see what size they would have to produce to beat the record. Mr. W. I. Rouse could not wait any longer than last Saturday, when he brought to this office three potatoes, weighing in the aggregate 16 pounds, the largest weighing 6½ pounds. They are not of the yam tribe, and Mr. Rouse says they are as finely flavored as the celebrated Jersey potato, which he grew near them. Beat these potatoes and we will say no more about the tater family this year.

The criminal division of Esq. M. B. Green's court was in session at Petersburg, last Friday. D. E. Castleman and P. E. Cason, of Burlington, being the only attorneys present, the latter looking after the interest of the State in place of the regular county attorney. There were only three cases on the docket, and two of them were dismissed. The charge of assault and battery on which Reuben Akin was arraigned, was reduced to a breech of the peace, and the accused was fined one dollar and costs. Akins and Chas. Shipman had had a hostile meeting, out of which the trial grew. Quite a large crowd attended the trial.

As deputy Sheriff Allphin was going to Big Bone, one day last week, he lost his pocket book, containing $80. He missed it when about five miles from town, and came back about three miles looking for it but in vain. He gave it up as lost, unless an honest person should pick it up. That evening when Glen Crisler went to his pasture, he found the pocket book, which by the way is a large one, lying on the side of the road, Mr. Allphin having passed it twice in his search. Mr. Crisler opened the book and discovered to whom it belonged, and was in town early next morning with it to gladden the heart of the deputy sheriff.

A youthful couple riding a tandem, arrived in town last Friday about three o'clock. Col. Graddy, of Bullittsville, who was in town, suspicioned that they were on matrimony bent, and put the question to them, which they answered in the affirmative. He theu volunteered his services and piloted them into the county clerk's sanctum, where the chief inkslinger of that department was informed of the young people's desire. They each claimed to be over 21 years of age, but the clerk did not believe them and refused, absolutely, to issue a marriage license, very much to the chagrin of the youugsters. No one asked them their names. They claimed to have come from Lexington, but this statement is regarded about as truthful as the one they made in regard to their ages. It being evident that no license could be obtained, Col. Graddy took the parties to one side and gave them some fatherly advice, and they promised him that they would go to Erlanger and return to Lexington on the train that evening.

LORENZO SNOW, the newly chosen president of the Mormon church, is an Ohioan by birth, and is a product of the Oberlin college, the alma mater of so many distinguished men before him. He is now 84 years old, but in perfect health and possessed of all the keen mental faculties that are requisite for a leadership of the Mormon church.

A FRENCH doctor is now asserting that a person who is so unfortunate as to have his head removed by the guillotine retains the senses of sight, smell and hearing for three hours after the supposed execution, and that death by such a method is one of the most prolonged forms of capital punishment.

LAST spring Typographical Union No. 6 acquired a tract of land near New York as an experiment. A number of the men who were unemployed were given parcels of ground to cultivate. They have succeeded admirably and some of them are so stuck on agriculture as a pursuit that they think of becoming farmers for all time to come.

HORSE flesh, ass flesh and mule flesh are now eaten in such large quantities in France that the regular butchers who deal in beef and mutton are getting uneasy. In the dingy restaurants frequented by the lower orders of Rome, Florence and Naples they go one better. There is a dish composed of a harmless wood serpent's flesh which is regarded as something of a dainty.

THE crops of fruits and vegetables in Denmark are a complete failure. In consequence, the prospects for American canners is of exceptional brightness, and already inquiries are coming in freely and some good orders have been received. As the crops in this country have been most excellent, there is a prospect that the canners will get good prices all through the coming winter.

THE case of Henry Washington, colored, of 1328 Philip street, Philadelphia, who was operated on for appendicitis by Prof. Da Place, at St. Agnes' hospital recently, is a very rare one. In the first place, statistics show that appendicitis is seldom found among colored people, and it is very rare that it develops in people over the average age of 23 years, while Washington is 51 years old.

LEIPZIG university refuses to accept time spent at the University of Freiburg, in Switzerland, in the count of its degrees, on the ground that the teaching there has deteriorated below university standards since the Dominican monks have obtained control. The other German universities are likely to follow the example of Leipsig and will refuse to recognize the Freiburg degrees as well.

ADDITIONAL experiments by Prof. Dewar have shown that liquid hydrogen is by far the lightest of all known liquids. Its density is one-fourteenth that of water, and, curiously enough, this happens to be the same ratio of density that hydrogen in the gaseous state bears to air. Heretofore the lightest liquid known has been liquified marsh gas, which possesses about two-fifths the density of water.

THE farmers of the islands in the San Joaquin river, California, are continually praising the soil on their ranches as being the most productive of any in the world, but they have been confronted with a wonderful freak of nature this season. It is nothing more or less than a second crop of peaches, pears and cherries. The trees of these three kinds of fruit are in full bloom for the second time this year.

THE Chicago post office is to have a new permanent employe in the person of a physician, at a salary of $1,700 per year. He will be stationed at the main office for the purpose of examining employes who report themselves as being sick, and it is expected that he will make a large saving to the government in salaries, as some of the employes report themselves as being incapacitated when they are able to perform the duties.

A FRENCH railroad company has painted the outside of its passenger coaches with poetic devices, or the images of stars, fishes, birds, etc., sketched large and in emphatic colors. The object is to enable the passenger who gets off for refreshments to recognize his carriage and class from amid the crowd and in the gathering dusk. He says to himself: "I'm the fish, the scales, the swallow," etc., and makes for his own place.

THE town of Meriden, Miss., has passed a curfew law for admits which provides that on each night of the week, except Saturday, no person shall be allowed to be upon the streets of the city after 8 o'clock, except in cases of extreme necessity, and said hour of 8 o'clock to be indicated by eight taps of the city bell. On Saturday night everybody must seek shelter at 10 o'clock. The fine for a violation of the curfew law will be $25.

THIRTEEN SAFE.

Twelve Bodies of the Passengers of the Mohegan Have Been Rescued.

Thirty-Eight Bodies Have Been Identified, Mostly the Bodies of Sailors—Tugs in the Vicinity of the Accident to Pick up Bodies.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The Atlantic Transport Co.'s steamer Mohegan, formerly the Cleopatra, of the Wilson & Furness-Leyland line, which left London for New York Thursday with 50 passengers and a crew of 150, is ashore off The Lizard, between the Manacles and the Lowlands.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Atlantic Transport Co. issued the following statement Sunday evening regarding the fate of the passengers and crew of the steamer Mohegan, which was wrecked last Friday evening off The Lizard, between the Manacles and the Lowlands: Of the passengers 11 have been saved, 10 bodies have been recovered and 33 are missing.

"Of the crew and cattlemen 39 have been saved, 14 bodies have been recovered and 51 are missing."

Since this statement was issued nine other bodies have been picked up, including two that have been identified as those of passengers.

The reports of the various correspondents differ widely as to the rescues, recoveries and losses, though none have been able to obtain the exact number of those saved or of the bodies recovered.

The latest advices from Falmouth Sunday evening say that 33 bodies have been identified, mostly the bodies of sailors. Four are as yet unidentified, including those of two elderly ladies. One appears to be a German. She wore a watch and a wedding ring, both engraved "1871." The other wore a silver brooch, with the letter "D" in pearls. This is probably the body of Mrs. Charles Duncan.

Nine of the bodies have been brought to Falmouth, the others to the village church at St. Keverne. The rescued passengers are being sheltered at cottages along the shore and the crew at the sailors' home at Falmouth.

Tugs have been cruising in the vicinity all day Sunday, despite the very rough weather, in hope of picking up other bodies. The cause of the disaster remains the profoundest mystery. Nobody attempts to explain how the Mohegan got so far north of her true course—from 6 to 7 miles. There was no fog at the time; while the wind on her port quarter was not sufficient to prevent her answering the helm. It has been suggested that her compass was faulty; but daylight lasted long after Eddystone light was passed.

The sailors say the fact that The Lizard light was not visible should have served to give the alarm.

The masts of the Mohegan, which are above water, show that her stern is landward, cansing a theory that the navigating officer on discovering that he was in the bay suddenly turned seaward. Two engineers who were saved declare, however, that they never slackened speed.

Remarkable stories of rescue continue.

Robert Barrow, a seaman, performed the feat of swimming, unaided, through the roughest water to Coverack Point, a distance of two and one-half miles. He climbed up the ragged cliff, where a searching party found him early the next morning, completely exhausted. A. G. L. Smith, of Oregon, a passenger, surrendered to a woman in the water wreckage that was supporting him and swam ashore unaided. The woman was saved. Her name is reported as Miss Webb, but no such name appears in the company's list.

Messrs. Smith and W. J. Bloomingdale say there was the greatest difficulty in launching the boats. The ropes were new and stiff and the blocks would not work. Four or five times as many sailors as should have been necessary struggled to lower each boat. The lockers were hard to open.

The crew, in a chivalrous effort to save the women, made the mistake of undermanning the boats. There were only four sailors in one boat, which capsized as soon as it was launched. Messrs. Smith and Bloomingdale say that Capt. Griffiths had appeared ill all day.

Grantess' Body Stolen.

MIDDLESBOROUGH, Ky., Oct. 17.—It is reported that the body of Mahala Mullins, the 650-pound woman who died at Waldon's Ridge not long ago, has been stolen.

Defied the Americans.

MANILA, Oct. 17.—The insurgents at Lagsapi have prevented the American steamer Hermanos from loading or unloading, on the ground that there are Spaniards on board. They also refused to allow an officer of the United States cruiser Raleigh to land without permission of Gen. Aguinaldo.

Jerusalem Crowded With Visitors.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 17.—The city is already overcrowded with visitors, chiefly Germans, awaiting the arrival of Emperor William.

TROOPS TO GO TO MANILA.

They Have Been Officially Assigned and the First Will Probably Sail From San Francisco on Monday.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—The troops to go to Manila on the transport Valencia have been officially assigned. They include the 3d battalion of the Washington regiment, composed of Companies F, G, I, and L, under Lieut. Fife, which has been stationed on Angel island and a portion of the batteries A and D of the California heavy artillery.

With the assistant surgeons and members of the hospital corps the Valencia will carry 509 men. The troops will in all probability go into the transport on Monday and the Senator and Valencia will sail together. The Ohio and Indiana will be ready the last of next week and the Newport by the end of the month. It is generally conceded that Gen. Miller and his headquarters, with a battalion, possibly from the Tennessee regiment, will sail on the Newport.

The Pennsylvania and Rio Janeiro are expected to arrive any day and only a few other vessels will be required to move all the troops ordered to the Philippines.

GEN. FRANCIS V. GREENE.

COLOR LINE IN THE ARMY.

Ex-Confederate Objects to the Appointment of Negro Officers—Resolutions Passed to That Effect.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 17.—The appointment of colored commissioned officers in the Negro regiments in the volunteer army has caused quite a commotion in this section. A protest was registered by Commander Fort, of U. B. Forest Camp, confederate veterans.

In the Grand Army halls the question has been discussed, and Missionary post passed the following:

"Resolved, That we, as soldiers of the civil war, and many of us having served by the side of colored regiments officered by white men, and having lived for many years in the south, do hereby recommend to the present military authorities in Washington, D. C., that it is not expedient to have colored commissioned officers in the army, either as volunteers or regulars."

THE WINDOW GLASS PLANTS.

They Failed to Start the Season's Operations Friday Night Throughout the Country Owing to Strike.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 17.—The window glass plants throughout the United States failed to start the season's operations at midnight Friday. Fires were blocked and may be extinguished and 15,000 workers, who have been looking forward to a general resumption on October 15, are forced to remain idle. The strike is for an advance in the wages of the cutters and flatteners, but is really the result of a fight between the Knights of Labor and the American Federation of Labor.

The manufacturers say the fires will be kept blocked for a reasonable time, when they will be extinguished and not relighted, until they are sure to have a clear and concise contract with the workers.

THE YELLOW FEVER RECORD.

Eight New Cases at Jackson, Miss., No Deaths—Six Cases at Yazoo City—Three Deaths and 19 Cases at Other Points.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 17.—The Jackson record of new cases of yellow fever for Sunday was eight, as follows:

W. E. Davison, Otto Galle, Donnie Cloud, Callie Clond, Prof. Moore, Otto Johnson and two Negroes.

There were no deaths though some of the sick are seriously ill. Dr. Furnell who investigated suspicious sickness at Yazoo City reported Sunday that he found six cases of genuine yellow fever there. The state board of health reports three deaths and 19 new cases at other points.

The New Military Hospital.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Col. Middleton has finally decided upon the Presidio reservation as the site for the new military hospital, and the selection has been approved by Gen. Merriam. It will be located near the provisional hospital.

American Fever Hospital at Havana.

HAVANA, via Key West, Oct. 17.—Drs. Lane and O'Reilly have made a report to the surgeon general insisting upon the immediate establishment of an American fever hospital here.

PEACE JUBILEE.

It Was Inaugurated in Chicago With a Union Thanksgiving Service.

Over 12,000 People Were in the Hall and as Many More on the Outside Unable to Gain Admission—McKinley the University's Guest.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The national peace jubilee of Chicago was Sunday night inaugurated with a union thanksgiving service at the Auditorium. President McKinley attended and listened to addresses by a Jewish Rabbi, a Roman Catholic priest, a Presbyterian clergyman and a noted colored orator. The applause for the president was terrific, and at one time he was compelled to rise in his box and respond to the frantic cheering of the audience. The services, however, were of a religious character, and at times the solemn silence of the vast assemblage was much more eloquent than the wildest applause could be.

The president rested during a great part of the day at the residence of Capt. Lafayette McWilliams, his relative, where he is being entertained. He did not attend church in the morning. For a short time in the afternoon he was taken for a drive in company with Mrs. McKinley, Capt. McWilliams and Mrs. McWilliams.

The party was driven to the Auditorium at 3 o'clock, and all along the way people lined the streets to watch the passage of the president's carriage. Easily 12,000 people were within the great Auditorium, and probably as many more were on the outside unable to obtain admittance. The president was seated in a box on the left side of the Auditorium and with him were Alexander H. Revell, President Wm. R. Harper, of the University of Chicago, Capt. McWilliams, and Secretaries Porter and Cortelyou. Among the occupants of the other boxes were James McKinley, the president's nephew, Secretary Wilson and Miss Wilson, Secretary and Mrs. Gage, Secretary Bliss, Assistant Secretary Meiklejohn and Postmaster Gordon.

Elaborate music had been prepared for the meeting under the direction of Henry R. Roney. Rev. Dr. Henry W. Thomas, pastor of the People's church, was chairman of the meeting, Bishop Samuel Fallows led in the recital of the Lord's prayer, and Rev. Dr. Jenkins Lloyd Jones in the responsive reading.

The first address was by Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, who brought out a great burst of enthusiasm by a reference to President McKinley.

Rev. Dr. Thomas P. Hodnett, a Catholic clergyman, caught the fancy and applause of the audience by repeated references to Dewey, Sampson, Schley and the rough riders, and when he mentioned President McKinley by name the people became so demonstrative that the president was compelled to rise in his box and bow his acknowledgments. At the conclusion of his address Dr. Hodnett aroused much enthusiasm by a philippic against the "growing influence of monoply and the cohesive power of unjust corporations."

One of the most stirring speeches of the evening was made by Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows, who took a firm stand in favor of the retention of the Philippines, which sentiment appeared to meet entirely the approbation of the audience.

Booker T. Washington was the last speaker. His address was listened to with marked attention.

Monday for the most part of the day the president was the guest of the University of Chicago, from which institution he will receive the degree of LL. D.

AN EXPLOSION AND MURDER.

Gas Explodes in the Pana Coal Co.'s Shaft—A Negro Miner Shoots and Fatally Wounds Isaiah Ross, Colored.

PANA, Ill., Oct. 17.—A bad fire is burning in Pana Coal Co.'s shaft No. 1. It was started by an explosion of gas in the north entry at noon Saturday, and so far it has been impossible for the company to extinguish it. An effort was made to drag it out, but failing in that, men were sent down Sunday afternoon to build partition walls in hopes of smothering it out. When the explosion occurred there were about 40 Negroes at work in adjoining chambers, but none was injured.

Sunday evening at 5:30 o'clock John Hawkins, a Negro miner employed at Pana Shaft No. 1, fatally shot Isaiah Ross, also colored, as the result of an all day quarrel. The shooting occurred in the company's office where Ross sought safety and was done with a Springfield rifle, a number of which were found there. Maj. Butler, commanding the militia, will disarm the Negroes Monday.

Two Drowned.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—William Lourie and John Welch, both of Newark, were drowned in Newark bay Sunday afternoon. In company with two other young men they went crabbing. The water got rough, however, and they put back. While alongside the Lehigh Valley railroad bridge and endeavoring to climb upon the structure Piers Welch fell into the water. Lourie seized him by the shoulder, but he was dragged down, and both were drowned.

Our Treatment of Spanish Captives.

Never before in history was there a case where a defeated and captive enemy received such generous treatment as we gave the Spaniards. Other nations are astonished. Equally astonishing are the cures brought about by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Never before in history has there been so successful a medicine for the weak, debilitated and nervous, for stomach and liver disorders like dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness and constipation. All nations have benefited by it, and all praise it.

MINERS' BATTLE.

Five Hundred Shots Exchanged Between Strikers and Deputies and Railroad Police.

Many Men on [illegible]th Sides Were Killed and Wo[illegible] Whatever Arms They Can [illegible] of, Expecting More Trou[illegible]

The Town of Virden, Ill., [illegible] Greatest Excitement, and Men [illegible] Whatever Arms They Can [illegible] of, Expecting More Trou[illegible]

VIRDEN, Ill., Oct. 13.—The arrival of the imported Negroes from the south at 12:30 Wednesday was followed by a desperate battle.

Five hundred shots were exchanged between the strikers on one side and Sheriff Davenport and his deputies and railroad police on the other side. It is thought that at least 30 men on both sides were killed and wounded. The best information is that ten were killed, five fatally wounded and five seriously wounded. A Chicago & Alton special policeman is among the killed. His name is said to be D. Kelley.

F. W. LUKENS,

Manager and Treasurer of the Chicago-Virden Coal Company.

When the Chicago & Alton train bearing the Negroes arrived it was met by fully 1,500 armed miners who were lined up on each side of the track, between the telegraph office and the mine of the Chicago-Virden Coal company. The train was stopped immediately in front of the east gates of the stockade and the trouble began. Dozens of shots were fired from the stockade at the white men, while the strikers were half a mile away, and the Chicago & Alton policeman was undoubtedly killed by a shot from the tower.

The town is very much excited, and men are securing whatever arms they can get hold of, expecting to use them for their own protection if the trouble spreads. Women and children are running to their homes and barricading themselves behind their doors.

There is the greatest indignation felt here against Mine Operator Lukens, who is held responsible for the tragedy.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 13.—Gov. Tanner has just received a telephone message from Sheriff Davenport, of Macoupin county, that the fight between the miners and those guarding the stockades is still going on and over one hundred men have been killed.

The governor ordered Capt. Craig in command of Battery B, and Sons of Veterans companies at Pana to proceed at once to Virden. Capt. Craig will leave Pana for Springfield in a short time and thence proceed to Virden with Battery B and one company Sons of Veterans regiment. The governor also ordered Col. Hamilton, commanding Sons of Veterans regiment, to rendezvous four companies of his regiment at once at Springfield for equipment.

Gov. Tanner said: "I shall give Capt. Craig, who will command the troops at Virden, orders to suppress the riot, protect life and property and to not allow imported labor to be unloaded at that place, since the mine owners have carried out their threat, influenced by avarice and gain, to precipitate this riot and bloodshed I do not propose that they shall further disturb the peace of the state. The mine owners and managers are responsible for and guilty of the murder bronght about by this conflict and should be indicted by the grand jury for murder, as I believe they will be."

VIRDEN, Ill., Oct. 13.—A detail of militia at 10:50 Wednesday night killed ex-Lieut. of Police Tom Preston, of Chicago, at the stockade. He was sitting outside the stockade as guard. The militia gave the bystanding miners the command to halt and Preston stepped back to the gate. The militia fired and he was shot in the stomach. He was carried into the office in the stockade, where he expired.

The miners are gathered in little knots on the street of the city Wednesday night but there have been no demonstrations.

The dead miners were removed from the vicinity of the stockade to hotels and livery stables and the wounded miners were taken on litters to the station and taken to Springfield Wednesday night on the 8 o'clock train.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 13.—The special train on the Chicago & Alton, which brought the Alabama Negroes from Virden, had eight wounded men, all deputies, except one, who was a colored miner, who was taken to the Springfield city hospital. Of these one man died Wednesday night.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 14.—Ernest Long, the Mount Olive miner shot through the chest in the battle at Virden Wednesday and brought to St. John's hospital after the fight, died [illegible]day. Herman and Boston are [illegible]live and did not die on the [illegible] Herman's death is momentarily [illegible]ed at the hospital.

VIRDEN, Ill., Oct. 14.—The excitement of Wednesday prior to the arrival of the Negro train, was equaled Thursday night when it became known that a special train consisting of one box car, three apparently empty coaches and a caboose that passed through here at 5:25 Thursday evening bore two car loads of Negroes taken through here to Springfield Wednesday. The train went south and by a clever ruse succeeded in passing through Virden quietly and without interference. A big crowd of miners was at the station but the militia held them in check.

When the train stopped at the stockade Capt. Fevier, who was in command, then shouted: "Don't allow any one to disembark from that train."

The gate was opened and a file of soldiers rushed out on the double quick with fixed bayonets and lined up along side of the train. General Manager Lukens made a formal request that their employes be allowed to land and enter the stockade. Capt. Fevier declined to grant this. Then Lukens put it in the form of a demand, but the officer replied that he was under orders from Gov. Tanner to prevent the disembarking of any Negro miners at the works and he would have to carry out those instructions. General Manager Lukens protested in vain and the train pulled out headed south.

By this time the advance guard of strikers gathered at the depot had advanced up the track to within 100 yards of the stockade. The presence of armed blue coats in the lookout boxes evidently halted them as they remained there until the train passed, when they greeted it with waving hats and cheers for Gov. Tanner, who they believed had been instrumental in starting the blacks on their homeward journey.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 14.—William Harmon, a miner of Girard, died here Thursday night, making the fourteenth death as a result of the riot in Virden Wednesday.

VIRDEN, Ill., Oct. 14.—At 10:20 o'clock Thursday a special train arrived bearing Troops A and C, dismounted cavalry, from Chicago, and three companies of Sons of Veterans.

Col. Young stated that he had no definite orders other than to reinforce the soldiers already here.

VIRDEN, Ill., Oct. 15.—As a result of a meeting held by a number of union miners, during which the terrible fight of Wednesday was discussed, a warrant has been sworn out by Virgil Bishop, a union miner, charging the managers of the Chicago-Virden Coal company, Messrs. Lukens, Loucks, Yorke and others, with murder.

Bishop is one of the leaders among the union miners. The warrant was sworn out by him before Police Magistrate Roberts, of Virden. The complaint charges that "Fred W. Lukens, T. C. Loucks and Mr. Yorke, on and before October 12, as accessories before and after the fact and as principals, did amongst themselves and together with persons so named as H. Gritgell, O. J. Snyder, Jas. Sickles, F. Wilder, T. McEntee, J. W. Moonan, P. J. Hannan, J. H. Smith and others whose names are at present unknown, conspire to murder and kill, and as a result of said conspiracy did on October 13, 1898, kill and murder Frank Bilyer, W. S. Herman, Daniel Breneman, Edward Green, Joseph Kutteller, Ellis Smith and Edward Welsh against the peace of the people of the state of Illinois."

Magistrate Roberts put the warrant in his pocket for safe keeping and now carries it around with him. At first it was decided to serve the warrant Friday but after deliberation it was thought best to avoid complications to hold it until after the inquest has been completed.

This decision was strengthened when Magistrate Roberts, who is foreman of the coroner's jury, began Friday's session of the inquest within the stockade.

Friday afternoon a rumor became general that the Negroes were to be brought back at any moment.

Capt. Craig's men immediately surrounded the railroad station and the vicinity was cleared of citizens.

Newspaper men alone are admitted to the premises. Lieut. Henry stated that his orders are not to stop any more passenger trains, as was done Thursday night, but under no circumstances to allow the Negro trains to pass the depot. From now on the station premises will be kept clear of all citizens, and only those who want to take passage on trains will be permitted to pass the line.

POWERFUL NAVY

Fifty-Five War Vessels Now Under Contract for the Government.

Twenty of the Vessels Are in Various Stages of Readiness and the Shipbuilders Are Hurriedly Gathering Material for Construction of the Others.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The remarkable rapidity with which the naval power of the United States is being increased at the present time may be realized when it is stated that 55 war vessels are now under contract for the government and that their aggregate tonnage far exceeds that of the vessels building at any one time in the civil war. This vast construction programme, which has excited more attention abroad than at home has been authorized gradually by congress until the vessels soon to be completed will place the United States third in rank among the sea powers. In addition to the enormous fleet, including auxiliaries, actually in commission at the present time, 20 vessels are in various stages of readiness and the shipbuilders are hurriedly gathering the material for 35 others. Of the 55 vessels, eight are first-class, heavily armored sea-going battle ships, 38 are torpedo boats, four are monitors and one is a powerful cruiser.

Chief Constructor Hichborn has completed a tabulated statement showing the degree of completion of the 20 vessels now nearly ready for commission or rapidly approaching that condition, from which it appears that 17 of these vessels have already been launched and that the others will be afloat before the end of this year. Of the five battle ships, the Kearsarge, the Kentucky and the Illinois, building at Newport News, Va., are respectively 68, 66 and 55 per cent. complete.

The Alabama, at the Cramp yard, Philadelphia, has advanced to 63 per cent., and the Wisconsin, which is to be launched at the Union iron works, San Francisco, is exactly half finished. Of the ten torpedo boats the 30-knot Rowan (No. 8), at Seattle, is rated at 99 per cent. and will have her trial trip before the end of this week. The 30-knot Farragut (No. 11), the first of the destroyers to be finished by the government, has already been tried by the Scotts at San Francisco, and although readily making her guaranteed speed, has had the misfortune to sustain minor injuries, which may be easily remedied. The Dahlgren (No. 9) and the T. A. M. Craven (No. 10), 30-knot boats, building at Bath, Me., are listed 90 and 81 per cent. complete, but will not be deliverable to the government before spring. The two 23½ knot boats, the Davis (No. 12) and the Fox (No. 13) at Portland, Ore., are practically ready for trial and the Davis may have her speed run next week. The Mackenzie (No. 17) has just been completed by Hillman & Co., of Philadelphia, and her trial has been ordered for the first of next week. This little vessel is almost a year behind contract. The statutes of the remaining three 30-knot destroyers is as follows:

The Stringham (No. 19) at Wilmington, Del., 48 per cent.; the Goldsboro (No. 20) at Portland, Ore., 28 per cent., and the Bailey (No. 21) at the works of the Gas Engine and Power Co., of New York, 37 per cent. The submarine torpedo boat Plunger also is within 15 per cent of completion, and will probably be put into service next month. Two 12 knot tugboats, which are now being built at navy yards, have made rapid progress in the last month, the Penacook at New York being rated at 65 per cent., and the Pawtucket at Mare island at 60 per cent. The sailing ship Chesapeake, building at the Bath Iron works, for use as a training vessel at the naval academy, is 30 per cent. ready. She has the distinction of being the first sheathed vessel designed for the American navy and the first sailing vessel laid down for naval purposes in over 20 years. The last ship under construction, except those whose keels have not been laid, is the cruiser Albany, building at Armstrongs, Elswick, England. She was only 40 per cent. completed when purchased together with the cruiser New Orleans from the Brazilian government just before war with Spain was declared, and work was only begun on her two weeks ago. The contractors have all material ready and have promissd to deliver her within six months.

GEN. SHAFTER INTERVIEWED.

He Says a Great Deal in a Few Words in Regard to the Landing of His Army on Cuban Soil.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Gen. Wm. R. Shafter in an interview here regarding the Santiago campaign says, as to the suggestion that the landing should have been at Aguadores: "Any commanding general who would have landed his troops at Aguadores in preference to Baiquiri, ought to be court-martialed and shot for incompetency. It was not a good beach on which to land. The ground was densely covered with a vine or plant much more deadly than the poisonous ivy. Through this the soldiers would have had to cut their way. The point was strongly defended and there was no water between Aguadores and Santiago. The ground was impracticable, if not impassable. Had I landed at Aguadores and invested Santiago, the Spanish would have had a road over which they could have retreated from the city if they so desired. My army went in over the hills and cut off the Spanish retreat."

TWO MURDERERS HANGED.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Thomas Drugan and George Jacks were hanged in the county jail on Friday. Drugan was hanged at noon and Jacks one hour later.

Jacks murdered Andrew J. McGhee on February 27. McGhee, who was a collector, and was thought to carry considerable money, was decoyed by W. J. Willows to a vacant flat, where Jacks killed him with a piece of lead pipe, securing $26 and a gold watch.

Willows confessed, and is now serving a 16-year term in the penitentiary. Jacks was at one time chief of police of Muskegon, Mich.

Drugan murdered Robert F. Gudgeon in the latter's saloon while attempting to hold him up on the morning of January 11.

Gudgeon threw up his hands, but was thought to be moving toward a gun, and Drugan shot him dead.

Drugan had several confederates, who are now either in the penitentiary or reform school.

In addition it was announced that transports to carry the entire garrisons of Gibara, Holguin and other places in those divisions will leave on October 20, October 24, October 26 and October 30. After they have sailed, it is pointed out half the island of Cuba will have been entirely evacuated.

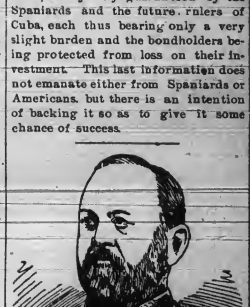
THE CUBAN DEBT

American and Spanish Peace Commissioners at Loggerheads.

Spaniards Say It Would Be an Extraordinary Course to Saddle Spain With the Debt, While Surrendering the Security to Pay It.



LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says: "The peace negotiations are necessarily slow, being conducted less by exchange of words than exchange of notes and statements. Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish commission, does not understand English. Consequently the few words exchanged must be interpreted and even then, they are definitive till committed to paper.

"The Cuban debt question has thus been laid on the table, and the American commissioners had already given a peremptory refusal to discuss a principle which had been settled, as they considered, by the peace preliminaries. Faithful to the attitude adopted by them from the outset, they seemed resolved to take their stand on the instructions—or rather, as I have already said, the precise and concise orders—which they brought with them, but the Spaniards, on their side, do not think themselves bound to bow with docility to the imperative instructions of another government.

"They returned to the charge Saturday, if I am well informed, urging the generally admitted principle which imposes on conquerors the burdens belonging to the territory conquered, either in their own behalf or that of their clients. They insisted that it would be an extraordinary course to saddle Spain, already in so lamentable a financial position, with the Cuban debt, while surrendering to the victor the security with which it should be paid.

"They remarked, according to my information, that if they had asked the United States for permission to raise interest out of the customs revenues, they would naturally have met with a refusal. How then can they be asked to leave to the visitor the pledge allowing payment of interest and yet retain the burden of debt? They observed, however, that, as Cuba is the key to the Gulf of Mexico, the United States will thus be able to pass the only barrier which they had hitherto been unable to cross at will, and that is worth some sacrifice.

"Hence the Spanish commissioners insist, in the name of recognizing international law, that the debt should not rest solely on Spanish shoulders. It is impossible to foretell the American reply, but it is not likely that Mr. Day and his colleagues will yield. An idea is afloat—and said to be warmly advocated by the friends of peace and justice—that the interest should be reduced 2½ per cent., or even to 3 per cent., and jointly guaranteed by the Spaniards and the future rulers of Cuba, each thus bearing only a very slight burden and the bondholders being protected from loss on their investment. This last information does not emanate either from Spaniards or Americans, but there is an intention of backing it so as to give it some chance of success.

THE JUGULAR VEIN SEVERED

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—A man's body, bearing strong evidences of foul play, was found Sunday floating in Gravesend bay. The throat had been cut from ear to ear, evidently by some keen instrument, the wound being a clean one. The jugular vein was severed. There was also the mark of a blow on the left breast. Apparently the body had been in the water about a week. The man had been about 36 years old, five feet eight inches in height and weighing about 160 pounds. The body was nude. There were no marks by which the identity of the victim could be traced.

A MILITANT PAPAL [illegible]

An Effort to [illegible] Said Now to [illegible] Duke of Orleans.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—A [illegible] semi-official statement [illegible] day evening suggesting [illegible] ble motives—such as [illegible] trigues or an attempt by [illegible] to frighten the government into [illegible] persing the troops that [illegible] prevent the success of the strike—to explain the rumors of a military conspiracy.

The mysterious allusions, however, and the absence of any straightforward denial tend to encourage the belief that there must be some ground for the rumors, especially as the statement mentions the telegrams alleged to have been sent by a French general to Prince Napoleon, which it says it is "difficult to believe possible in view of the control exercised by the telegraph authorities."

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says: "It is impossible to obtain clear proofs of the existence of a plot. I believe, however, that the idea of some act of force haunts certain military minds. Maddened and stung by violent criticisms of the army [illegible] Dreyfus affair, they are especially irritated at the attitude of the civilians in claiming to interfere in the detention of Col. Picquart, for which the entire military authority is responsible.

"They returned to the charge Saturday, if I am well informed, urging the generally admitted principle which imposes on conquerors the burdens belonging to the territory conquered, either in their own behalf or that of their clients. They insisted that it would be an extraordinary course to saddle Spain, already in so lamentable a financial position, with the Cuban debt, while surrendering to the victor the security with which it should be paid.

"They remarked, according to my information, that if they had asked the United States for permission to raise interest out of the customs revenues, they would naturally have met with a refusal. How then can they be asked to leave to the visitor the pledge allowing payment of interest and yet retain the burden of debt? They observed, however, that, as Cuba is the key to the Gulf of Mexico, the United States will thus be able to pass the only barrier which they had hitherto been unable to cross at will, and that is worth some sacrifice.

"Hence the Spanish commissioners insist, in the name of recognizing international law, that the debt should not rest solely on Spanish shoulders. It is impossible to foretell the American reply, but it is not likely that Mr. Day and his colleagues will yield. An idea is afloat—and said to be warmly advocated by the friends of peace and justice—that the interest should be reduced 2½ per cent., or even to 3 per cent., and jointly guaranteed by the Spaniards and the future rulers of Cuba, each thus bearing only a very slight burden and the bondholders being protected from loss on their investment. This last information does not emanate either from Spaniards or Americans, but there is an intention of backing it so as to give it some chance of success.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—The Liberte asserts that the military men alleged to have been concerned in the conspiracy are Gens. Boisdeffer and Pellieux.

Attempts, it is added, were also made to compromise Gen. Zurlinden, the military governor of Paris, who, for a short time was minister of war, but it appears the present minister of war, Gen. Chanoine, refused to countenance it.

According to the Jour, the rumor of the plot arose from a forged letter, purporting to have been sent by Gen. Boisdeffer to Gen. Zurlinden, containing these words:

"Let us be ready for Saturday."

The semi-official Temps Friday evening minimizes the affair and says the officials of the ministry of war formally deny that a plot existed.

The Temps suggests that the misinterpretation was placed on some of the numerous dispatches now being exchanged between the different garrisons, in connection with the present movement of troops, which has given strange reports of plots.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 15.—The duke of Orleans, accompanied by Comte Sabran Pontevez, has arrived here to watch events.

The papers here believe the reports of a coup. The Etoile Belge regards it as "the last desperate effort of the French general staff to save itself from downfall."

Other papers say that the conspirators had been meeting clandestinely at Versailles and that M. Brisson has intercepted cipher correspondence pointing to a design to seize 50 prominent republicans.

BLANCO RECEIVES ORDERS.

He Has Been Notified to Hold Cuban Territory Until the Treaty of Peace Has Been Signed.

BAYONNE, France, Oct. 15.—According to advices received from Madrid a rigorous censorship has been revived there since Thursday.

Senor Sagasta and his colleagues are said to be greatly concerned regarding the demands of the United States government, which they assert not only refuses to assume any of Spain's colonial debts, but wants to take the heavy artillery in Cuba and the floating dock recently sent to Havana.

The same advices, says the Madrid Imparcial, announces that the government has cabled Captain-General Blanco not to turn over any more territory to the Americans until the peace treaty has been definitely signed.

John Rousseau, the Deputy Sheriff of Barren county, has been ordered to levy wherever it is necessary, to make prompt collection of taxes, and he has taken the Sheriff at his word, and last week capped the climax by riding up to a negro cabin, over in the neighborhood of Jennie, and levying on the "household and kitchen furniture and two children between the ages of 3 and five years, black as crows, and belonging to John Smith." Smith quickly paid the taxes to get his boys.

William Duncan, of Waco, Madison county, accidently killed himself while attending a school election. He was on a horse and rode up to the school house to dismount. He carried a shotgun, which he attempted to put through the fence before he dismounted. Deceased was forty years of age.

A Paris man is threatening to precipitate a monster law suit. The Kentuckian-Citizen says: "Dr. Current, of this city, after an untiring search for eight months, has at last found the lease in favor of the Jarvis heirs of Rowan county. The doctor has the power of attorney to sue or compromise, as he wishes, and is to have one-half of the entire estate for his services and trouble in hunting the lease. He has engaged the best law firm in Cincinnati to prosecute the case, and will begin at once, as they think it a sure winner.

Pantagraph.

The late crop of tobacco in the Bluegrass section is said to be far superior in quality to the early tobacco. A great deal of the early tobacco suffered from the rust and house burning, while the late crop has escaped such damage. Strange to say the very richest land of this section produced the poorest tobacco this season. The growth was too rapid and the tobacco became rank and coarse of fibre, having entirely too much rain. Very few crops have not been gathered in the Burley section, and that looks fine.

It appears from the following from Madison county that the Compulsory Educational Law is being given a fair test up there: "The compulsory education law is overcrowding the school houses in this county, and in several districts school buildings have been found wholly inadequate."

A CARD.

We desire to announce that for reasons deemed good and sufficient, we have decided not to publish any longer The Boone-Kenton Banner. Mr. Riddell has kindly arranged to finish out all subscriptions with the BOONE COUNTY RECORDER, a tried and well known home paper. Subscribers to the monthly Banner, who did not subscribe for the weekly paper, will receive their unexpired terms in the Lutheran World, which will be sent once a month until subscription expires.

We desire to thank our excellent corps of correspondents, the interested citizens of Erlanger and all others who assisted us in our work. We want everybody properly paid and fully satisfied, and if there is any dissatisfaction for any cause we trust complaint will be made to us direct, and we will endeavor to give satisfaction. All who are owing us accounts are earnestly requested to make as prompt settlement as possible as we desire to square all accounts. Respectfully,

THE GLOBE PRINTING CO.,
Erlanger, Ky.

THE RECORDER will be glad to have the neighborhood correspondents of The Boone-Kenton Banner to contribute to its columns. They can use the stationery supplied by The Boone-Kenton Banner, and when it is exhausted, they can notify this office, from which they will be supplied. Your contributions are solicited.

THOMAS MAJORS, of Chicago has a cat which cost him $2,050.

JUDGE CANTRILL decided that the Goebel election law is constitutional. An appeal has been taken from the judgment.

CHINA is not popularly known as an orange growing county, but in 1897 oranges valued at 10,218 lbs., were exported from Foochow.

THE battleship, Brooklyn, is given the official honor of doing the principal part of the fighting in the battle that destroyed Cervera's fleet.

AT Glasgow, the other day, the Democrats listened to a two hour's speech by Senator Geobel. He put in a good part of the time explaining the workings of the new election law.

AT Ocean City, New Jersey, sixteen citizens were arrested for tarring and feathering a man. It is strange that there are such occurrences in the educated and highly moral East.

THE Louisville Dispatch is booming its subscription list by means of the endless chain scheme, and subscribers are being received by the hundreds. The Dispatch is the Democratic paper of Kentucky.

THE Democrats are very confident of electing a majority of the next national House. It is better not to be too confident—a great deal of hard work will have to be done before that result is accomplished.

SENATOR FORAKER does not object to the Paris Peace Commision on account of the manner in which it proceeds, but from the fact, as he claims, that it was evercreated. The Senator can not get in line with the President, a fact which crops out ever and anon.

THE son of Ham, who introduced a resolution in the Seventh District Republican convention, censuring the Court of Appeals for its decision sustaining the separate coach law, was pursuaded to withdraw it. The convention had sat down on the colored brothers once that day and did not desire to repeat the performance.

GOV. BRADLEY'S note to the Circuit Judges, notifying them that peace officers are not entitled to rewards offered for the capture of criminals, no doubt states the law correctly, and in that event the peace officers will become less diligent in their efforts to run in the worst class of criminals, as they are the ones for whom the State offers rewards.

It seems that there was considerable snubbing indulged at the Chicago peace jubilee, last week. The president, it is claimed, gave General Miles and Governor Tanner, each, the cold shoulder, while General Shafter made it convenient not to see General Miles' hand when extended. There was so much coolness manifested by these four gentlemen that the immense crowd that surrounded the stand, was thoroughly chilled.

THE RECORDER has received from the Courier-Journal Job Printing Company a handsome pamphlet containing the proceedings of the last session of the Kentucky Press Association. The several papers it contains are interesting reading.

ONE faction of the Republicans in Louisville are charging Postmaster Baker with holding back their mail in the interest of Mr. Evans, the candidate he is supporting for Congress. Mr. Baker would not do such a thing, but the charge shows what the Republicans regard their bestmen capable of doing in politics. If the Republicans make such grave charges against each other, it is no wonder the Democrats continue to denounce them as unworthy the confidence of the country.

HENRY LASSING, it is a pleasure for the RECORDER to say, is forging to the front in Nashville, Tennessee, and in his short sojourn there has gained the confidence of the entire community with which he has come in contact, and only the other day the Democrats of his district honored him with the nomination as their candidate for the legislature. The district is overwhelmingly Democratic, consequently the nomination is not an empty honor.

A young man was recently taken to a Lewiston hospital and suffered the removal of a rib. When he came to himself and was told what had been done, he seemed satisfied. Shortly after he dropped into a semi-unconscious state and kept calling for "the woman." For two days he was delirious and frequently called for "the woman." "I want to see the woman," he kept saying.

At last the nurse in desperation said: "Well, I'm the woman!" The man looked at her critically from top to toe, and said: "Who would have thought that they could have made such a pretty girl out of one of my ribs." And then he settled back on his pillow and when he awoke again he was in his right mind and was better.—Kennebec Journal.

Hon. Henry George, of the State Prison Commission, made a speech at Taylorsville, recently, in which he dealt almost entirely with State finances as managed by Republican and Democratic administrations, showing from the books at Frankfort that during the two years and four months the Democrats conducted the penitentiary at Frankfort the total cost was $129,963 57, during which time the State received from the chair plant, $43,724 48, a total deficit of only $36,239 48. For the same period of time under the Republican administration the institution was run at an expense of $56,038 40, and the returns to the State from the chair factory were only $59,019 40, a deficit of $99,789 34, or a difference in favor of the Democratic management of the institution of $62,789 86. He also brought out the significant fact that the Republicans, since they went into power at Frankfort, have increased expenses just in proportion as they have increased taxes, 10 cents on every $100 worth of property. By taking the last fiscal year of the Democratic administration at Frankfort from July 1, 1894 to June 30, 1895, the general expense account for that year was $1,763,674 30, as shown by Auditor Norman's report. The report made by Auditor Stone shows that his general expense account from July 1, 1396, to June 30, 1897, was $2,396,435 62, which is $634,761 71 more than the Democrats report.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

San Francisco is sinking! This is the startling statement of the civil engineer, who conducts the work of the city and county surveyor's office at the city hall. Sinking slowly but steadily, each recurring year bringing additional evidence that a large portion of the city will in a few decades be below the water of the bay. This is no wild or irresponsible statement, but a cold fact demonstrated and proved by the careful scientific observations of engineers in the service of the municipality, men who have been establishing levels through San Francisco for years, and have the data and records of the city surveyor's office as the basis of their discovery. These engineers find in surveying, or leveling, in the unstable districts that the official monuments indicating the levels, or heights above the city base, have sunk with the land, and so it is necessary to begin on firm ground and carry lines over these sunken marks, and always with the same result—streets, sidewalks, curbs, street railroads, buildings all have gone down together.

BIBLICAL DISHWASING.

"Don't you think, Minerva," said Mr. Backenstots, anxiously, as he tied the strings of the kitchen apron firmly around his waist and tucked his whiskers carefully behind the bib to keep them out of the dishwater, "don't you think we are carrying this idea of co-operation in domestic matters to extremes? I have been washing dishes for a week now, and between times I have been doing a little scriptural reading, and I can't find in the Bible any authority for men doing kitchen work; on the other hand, women are frequently spoken of in this connection. 'She looketh well to the ways of her household,' 'she worketh willingly with her hands,' 'she riseth while it is yet night and giveth meat to her household;' these quotations, Minerva, would warrant the conclusion that household duties should properly be assigned to the woman."

"My dear," replied his wife, "like the rest of your sex, you are adapted to thorough research, but are painfully superficial. If you will pursue your studies further you will find in Kings, 21st, these words: 'I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down.' That conclusively proves that you are nobly, although quietly and unobtrusively, doing the work designed for you by Providence. When you are through be sure and wash the towels clean, rinse them, shake them and hang them straight on the rack. Death, you know, George Henry, lurks in the dishcloth." And Mrs. Backenstots tied her bonnet strings in a butterfly bow and went out to attend a meeting of the Society for the Extinction of the Microbe by Means of Electrocution.—Lexington Tribune.

BITS OF KENTUCKY HISTORY.

The first court in the State was held at Harrodsburg in September, 1779.

The first chief justice was Harry Innes, and associate judges, Benjamin Sebastian and Caleb Wallace, June 28, 1792.

One year later, the first Baptist sermon ever delivered in this State was by Rev. Peter Tinsley under the shade of an elm tree.

The first collegiate institution in Kentucky and the first west of the Alleghany mountains was Transylvania Seminary, Lexington, 1783.

Rev. John Lythe, an Episcopal minister, at Boonesboro, Sunday, May 28, 1775. conducted the first divine service ever listened to by a Kentucky audience.

The first Circuit Judges appointed were: Samuel McDowell, John Coburn, Buckner Thurston, Stephen Ormsby, James G. Hunter, John Allen, Ninian Edwards, Christopher Greenup and Allen M. Wakefield.

The first corn planted in Kentucky was near the big spring on the farm of Mr. James M. Forsythe four miles northwest of Harrodsburg, in the year 1774, by James Godowsky, David Williams and John Shelp.

The first bank was established in Lexington, in 1801, which lasted seventeen years and broke. The legislature would not charter a bank, so this institution was known as an insurance company but did the business of a bank.

The first macadamized road built in the United States, was from Maysville four miles towards Lexington. Mr. Clay secured from Congress an appropriation of $150,000 to extend the road to Lexington, but President Jackson vetoed the measure. Soon after this, the legislature of this state appropriated $212,000 or took half the stock in the road and it was completed to Lexington, a distance of about 75 miles.

The first farm product that was exported from the State was a small cargo of tobacco carried on a flatboat down the Kentucky, Ohio and Mississippi rivers, June, 1788. by General James Wilkinson, to New Orleans and sold at a good price. On this, his first trip, he contracted with the Spanish governor Miro, to furnish tobacco for the Spanish King at $9,50 per cwt., and got permission to import, free of duty, all the products of Kentucky.

The law is all on the side of the land owners, and it appears that they will have to resort to the courts for its enforcement, as polite notices that a farm is posted is utterly ignored by these hunters. A few fines will do very much towards convinging some people that the posting is no joke and that the land owers are not to be trifled with.

SOME RADICAL THEORIES

If Adopted They Would Brighten Many a Domestic Circle.

The Garret and Cellar Represents the Boundaries of a Man's Home—Qualities for Married People to Carefully Cultivate—Sermon By Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D.

Dr. Talmage in this discourse sets forth radical theories, which if adopted, would brighten many domestic circles. Text, John xx., 10: "The disciples went away again unto their own homes."

A church within a church, a republic within a republic, a world within a world, is spelled by four letters—home! If things go right there they go right everywhere. If things go wrong there they go wrong everywhere. The doorsill of the dwelling house is the foundation of church and state. A man never gets higher than his own garret or lower than his own cellar. Domestic life overarches and undergirdles all other life. The highest house of congress is the domestic circle; the rocking chair in the nursery is higher than a throne. George Washington commanded the forces of the United States, but Mary Washington commanded George. Chrysostom's mother made his pen for him. If a man should start out and run 70 years in a straight line he could not get out from under the shadow of his own mantelpiece. I therefore talk to you about a matter of infinite and eternal moment when I speak of your home.

As individuals we are fragments. God makes the race in parts, and then he gradually puts us together. What I lack you make up; what you lack I make up; our defects and surpluses of character being the cog wheels in the great social mechanism. One person has the patience, another has the courage, another has the placidity, another has the enthusiasm; that which is lacking in one is made up by another, or made up by all. Buffaloes in herds, grouse in broods, quail in flocks, the human race in circles. God has most beautifully arranged this.

It is in this way that ile balances society; this conservative and that radical keeping things even. Every ship must have its mast, outwater, taffrail, ballast. Thank God, then, for Princeton and Andover, for the opposites. I have no more right to blame a man for being different from me than a driving wheel has a right to blame the iron shaft that holds it to the center. John Wesley balances Calvin's institutes. A cold climber gives to Scotland the strong bones of theology; Dr. Guthrie clothes them with a throbbing heart and warm flesh. The difficulty is that we are not satisfied with just the work that God has given us to do. The water wheel wants to come inside the mill and grind the grist, and the hopper wants to go out and dabble in the water. Our usefulness and the welfare of society depend upon our staying in just the place that God has put us, or intended we should occupy.

For more compactness, and that we may be more useful, we are gathered in still smaller circles in the home group. And there you had the same variety again; brothers, sisters, husband and wife, all different in temperament and tastes. It is fortunate that it should be so. If the husband be all impulse the wife must be all prudence. If one sister be sanguine in her temperament, the other must be lymphatic. Mary and Martha are necessities. There will be no dinner for Christ if there be no Martha; there will be no audience for Jesus if there be no Mary. The home organization is most beautifully constructed. Eden has gone; the bowers are all broken down; the animals that Adam stroked with his hand that morning when they came up to get their names have since shot forth tusk and sting, and growled panther at panther; and mid-air iron beaks plunge, till with clotted wing and eyeless sockets the twain come whirling down from under the sun in blood and fire. Eden has gone, but there is just one little fragment left. It floated down on the River Hiddekel out of Paradise. It is the marriage institution. It does not, as at the beginning, take away from man a rib. Now it is an addition of ribs.

This institution of marriage has been defamed in our day. Mormonism and polygamy, and the most damnable of all things, free-lovism, have been trying to turn this earth into a Turkish harem. While the pulpits have been comparatively silent, novels—their cheapness only equaled by their nastiness—are trying to educate, have taken upon themselves to educate this nation in regard to holy marriage, which makes or breaks for time and eternity. Oh, this is not a mere question of residence or wardrobe! It is a question charged with gigantic joy or sorrow, with Heaven or hell. Alas, for this new dispensation of George Sand! Alas for this mingling of the nightshade with the marriage garlands! Alas for the venom of adders spit into the tankards! Alas for the white frosts of eternal death that kill the orange blossoms! The Gospel of Jesus Christ is to assert what is right and to assail what is wrong. Attempt has been made to take the marriage institution, which was intended for the happiness and elevation of the race, and make it a mere commercial enterprise; an exchange of houses and lands and equipage; a business partnership of two stuffed up with the stories of romance and knighterrantry and unfaithfulness and feminine angelhood. The two after a while have roused up to find that instead of the paradise they dreamed of they have got nothing but a Van Amburgh's menagerie filled with tigers and wild cats. Eighty thousand divorces in Paris in one year preceded the worst revolution that France ever saw. And I tell you what you know as well as I do that the notions on the subject of Christian marriage are the cause at this day of more moral outrages before God and man than any other cause.

There are some things that I want to bring before you. I known there are those of you who have had homes set up for a great many years; and, then, there are those here who have just established their home. They have only been in that home a few months or a few years. Then, there are those who will, after awhile, set up for themselves a home, and it is right that I should speak out upon these themes.

My first counsel to you is, have God in your new home, if it be a new home; and let Him who was a guest at Bethany be in your household; let the divine blessing drop upon your every hope and plan and expectation. Those young people who begin with God end with Heaven. Have on your right hand the engagement ring of the Divine affection. If one of you be a Christian, let that one take the Bible and read a few verses in the evening time, and then kneel down and commend yourselves to Him who setteth the solitary in families. I want to tell you that the destroying angel passes by without touching or entering the door post sprinkled with blood of the everlasting covenant. Why is it that in some families they never get along, and in others they always get along well? I have watched such cases, and have come to a conclusion. In the first instance everything seemed to go pleasantly, and after awhile there came a devastation, domestic disaster or estrangement. Why? They started wrong. In the other case, although there were hardships and trials and some things that had to be explained, still things went on pleasantly until the very last. Why? They started right.

My second advice to you in your home is, to exercise to the very last possibility of your nature the law of forbearance. Prayers in the household will not make up for everything. Some of the best people in the world are the hardest to get along with. There are people who stand up in prayer meetings and pray like angels who at home are uncompromising and cranky. You may not have everything just as you want it. Sometimes it will be the duty of the husband and sometimes of the wife to yield; but both stand punctiliously on your rights, and you will have a Waterloo with no Blucher coming up at nightfall to decide the conflict.

Never be ashamed to apologize when you have done wrong in domestic affairs. Let that be a law of your household. The best thing I ever heard of my grandfather, whom I never saw, was this: that once having unrighteously reubuked one of his children, he himself having lost his patience, and, perhaps, having been misinformed of the child's doings, found out his mistake, and in the evening of the same day gathered all his family together and said: "Now, I have one explanation to make, and one thing to say. Thomas, this morning I rebuked you very unfairly, I am sorry for it. I rebuked you in the presence of the whole family, and now I ask your forgiveness in their presence." It must have taken some courage to do that. It was right, was it not? Never be ashamed to apologize for domestic inaccuracy. Find out the points; what are the weak points, if I may call them so, of your companion, and then stand aloof from them. Do not carry the fire of your temper too near the gunpowder. If the wife be easily fretted by disorder in the household, let the husband be careful where he throws his slipper. If the husband comes home from the store with his patience exhausted, do not let the wife unnecessarily cross his temper; but both stand up for your rights, and I will promise the everlasting sound of the warwhoop. Your life will be spent in making up, and marriage will be to you an unmitigated curse. Cowper said:

> The kindest and the happiest pair
> Will find occasion to forbear;
> And something, every day they live,
> To pity, and perhaps forgive.

I advise, also, that you make your chief pleasure circle around about that home. It is unfortunate when it is otherwise. If the husband spend the most of his nights away from home, of choice, and not of necessity, he is not the head of the household; he is only the cashier. If the wife throw the cares of the household into the servant's lap, and then spend five nights of the week at the opera or theater, she may clothe her children with satins and laces and ribbons that would confound a French milliner, but they are orphans.

It is sad when a child has no one to say its prayers to because mother has gone off to the evening entertainment. In India they bring children and throw them to the crocodiles, and it seems very cruel, but the jaws of social dissipation are swallowing down more little children to-day than all the monsters that ever crawled upon the banks of the Ganges.

I have seen the sorrow of a godless mother on the death of a child she had neglected. It was not so much grief that she felt from the fact that the child was dead as the fact that she had neglected it. She said, "If I had only watched over and cared for the child, I know God would not have taken it."

The tears came not; it was a dry, blistering tempest—a scorching simoon of the desert. When she wrung her hands it seemed as if she would twist her fingers from their sockets; when she seized her hair it seemed as if she had, in wild terror, grasped a coiling serpent with her right hand. No tears! Comrades of the little one came in and wept over the coffin; neighbors came in and the moment they saw the still face of the child the shower broke. No tears for her. God gives tears as the summer rain to the parched soul, but in all the universe the driest and hottest, the most scorching and consuming thing is a mother's heart if she has neglected her child when once it is dead. God may forgive her, but she will never forgive herself. The memory will sink the eyes deeper into the sockets and pinch the face, and whiten the hair, and eat up the heart with vultures that will not be satisfied, forever plunging deeper their iron beaks. Oh, you wanderers from home, go back to your duty! The brightest flowers in all the earth are those which grow in the garden of a Christian household, clambering over the porch of a Christian home.

I advise you also to cultivate sympathy of occupation. Sir James McIntosh, one of the most eminent and elegant men that ever lived, while standing at the very height of his eminence, said to a great company of scholars, "My wife made me."

The wife ought to be the advising partner in every firm. She ought to be interested in all losses and gains of shop and store. She ought to have a right—she has a right—to know everything. If a man goes into a business transaction that he dares not tell his wife of, you may depend that he is on the way either to bankruptcy or moral ruin. There may be some things which he does not wish to trouble his wife with, but if he dare not tell her he is on the road to discomfiture. It is no easy thing to keep house. Many a woman who could have endured martyrdom as well as Margaret, the Scotch girl, has actually been worn out by house management. There are a thousand martyrs of the kitchen. It is very annoying, after the vexations of the day around the stove or the register or the table, or in the nursery or parlor, to have the husband say: "You know nothing about trouble; you ought to be in the store half an hour." Sympathy of occupation! If the husband's work cover him with the soot of the furnace, or the odors of leather or soap factories, let not the wife be easily disgusted at the begrimed hands or unsavory aroma. Your gains are one; your interests are one; your losses are one. Lay hold of the work of life with both hands. Four hands to fight the battles; four eyes to watch for the danger; four shoulders on which to carry the trials. It is a very sad thing when the painter has a wife who does not like pictures. It is very sad thing for a pianist when she has a husband who does not like music. It is a very sad thing when a wife is not suited unless her husband has what is called a "genteel business." So far as I understand a "genteel business," it is something to which a man goes at 10 o'clock in the morning, and from which he comes home at 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and gets a large amount of money for doing nothing.

I have one more word of advice to give to those who would have a happy home, and that is, let love preside in it. When your behavior in the domestic circle becomes a mere matter of calculation: when the caress you give is merely the result of deliberate study of the position you occupy, happiness lies stark dead on the heartstone. When the husband's position as head of the household is maintained by loudness of voice, by strength of arm, by fire of temper, the republic of domestic bliss has become a depotism that neither God nor man will abide. Oh, ye who promised to love each other at the altar! How dare you commit perjury! Let no shadow of suspicion come on your affection. It is easier to kill that flower than it is to make it live again. The blast from hell that puts out that light leaves you in the blackness of darkness forever.

Here are a man and wife; they agree in nothing else, but they agree they will have a home. They will have a splendid house, and they think that if they have a house they will have a home. Architects make the plan, and the mechanics execute it; the house to cost $100,000. It is done. The carpets are spread; lights are hoisted; curtains are hung; cards of invitation sent out. The horses, in gold-plated harness, prance at the gate; guests come in and take their places; the flute sounds; the dancers go up and down, and with one grand whirl the wealth and the fashion and the mirth of the great town wheel amid the pictured walls. Ha! this is happiness. Float it on the smoking viands; sound it in the music; whirl in the dance; cast it in the snow of sculpture; sound it up the brilliant stairway; flash it in the chandeliers! Happiness, indeed! Let us build on the center of the parlor floor a throne to Happiness; let all the guests, when come in, bring their flowers and pearls and diamonds and throw them on this pyramid, and let it be a throne; and then let Happiness, the queen, mount the throne, and we will stand around, and, all chalices lifted, we will say, "Drink, O queen! live forever!" But the guests depart, the flutes are breathless, the last clash of the impatient hoofs is heard in the distance, and the twain of the houschold come back to see the Queen of Happiness on the throne amidst the parlor floor. But alas! as they come back the flowers have faded, the sweet odors have become the smell of a charnel house, and instead of the Queen of Happiness there sits the gaunt form of Anguish, with bitten lip and sunken eye, and ashes in her hair. The romp of the dancers who have left seems rumbling yet, like jarring thunders that quake the floor and rattle the glasses of the feast rim to rim. The spilled wine on the floor turns into blood. The wreaths of plush have become wriggling reptiles. Terrors catch tangled in the canopy that overhangs the couch. A strong gust of wind comes through the hall and drawing room and the bed chamber, in which all the lights go out. And from the lips of the wine breakers come the words, "happiness is not in us!" And the arches respond, "it is not in us!" And the silenced instruments of music, thrummed on by invisible fingers, answer "happiness is not in us!" And the frozen lips of anguish break open and seated on the throne of wilted flowers, she strikes her bony hands together and groans, "it is not in me!"

HOW TO CURE HANNAISM.

A Cleansing Flood of Democracy Will Carry Off the Rotten Scum of Republicanism.

Senators Hanna, Quay and Platt, the three most conspicuous contemporary republicans in the United States, represent modern republicanism in its most aggressive, efficient form. They and their like frame its policies and express its spirit.

Can any honest man say, party bias aside, that it pleases him to see a great party so dominated?

Do Hanna and Platt and Quay stand for anything which the patriot desires for the republic? Are they clean? Are they concerned for public as against private interests? Is their sway advantageous to the masses of the people or to the kind of men who make fortunes by exploiting the masses—men who are licensed by republican legislation to levy taxes for their private benefit upon the public? Do Hanna and Quay and Platt represent government by popular vote or government by check book? Do their names give inspiration to the citizen who loves his country, or to the gentlemen of the trusts who care nothing for their country, but everything for their bank accounts?

The reign of a sordid cynicism is typified by these republican leaders. They and their kind are in undisputed possession of the republican party. Their life work, as the mocking writer puts it, is to "keep the government out of the hands of the people." In this they have had the success of the genius "which consists of an infinite capacity for taking things." Theirs is the republicanism which gives us Hannaism in peace and Algerism in war. They are the champions of privilige, of the rule of the people by the clever and conscienceless whose one aim is financial gain.

Hanna, Quay and Platt are not responsible for their own existence. Behind every effect is a cause, and the successful speculator in politics could not flourish were it not for the conditions that make him the fittest to survive. The fittest are often the worst. Rattlesnakes are the product of the Arizona desert the fittest to survive where, in the same sense in which the Hannas and Quays and Platts are the fittest to survive in the political environment which republicanism has created.

Hannas and Quays and Platts will continue to rob and rot the country until its citizens go to the polls and end the system of which they are the fruit. There is only one cure for them, and that is democracy. The cleansing wave of democracy came up against Hannaism in 1896. It rose high, but not quite high enough. Thoughtful men, who can look deeper than surface professions, hope that two years hence the rogues who juggle with phrases about the national honor to divert notice from their own dishonor will be swept away on a Johnstown flood of plain American honesty. Hannaism must be destroyed if government by the people is to be restored.—N. Y. Journal.

GOLD AND INTEREST.

Lower Rates Indicate Diminution of Business and Decrease in Industry.

The agreement to pay interest does not contemplate the purchase of money, but the return of the same thing borrowed. The value of money is to be determined by its purchasing power, not by its interest-getting power. The demand for the purchase of money is founded upon entirely different conditions from the demand for the loan of money. In fact, when the purchasing power is greatest the lending power is least. The increasing of the purchasing power of money is "falling prices" of everything else. Falling prices work ruin and disaster to industries and business. Men do not increase their industries or start new enterprises when everyone is losing money in their line. Industries and business are operated largely upon borrowed money. The demand for the loan of money is created by the activity of industries and business. Therefore interest is highest when industries and business are most thriving and lowest when they are diminished by falling prices. Consequently lower rates of interest, instead of proving that money has not appreciated in value, demonstrate the contrary. In other words, the appreciation of money, which is falling prices, has produced diminution of business, and therefore less demands for credits and lower interests.

Let the People Answer.

I saw a statement in a gold standard newspeper recently to the effect that we are now prosperous, had about everything we needed and ought to thank the Lord that we are as well off as we are. Now, I have no argument to make in answer to such wild statements as that. I simply leave it for every laborer, for every manufacturer, for every business, yea, for every railroad man and every banker to answer. We have unlimited resources, have the most productive country in the world, we have every kind and character of industry, and the ingenuity, enterprise, push and intelligence of our people are unsurpassed anywhere; therefore we should be prosperous and happy.—John P. Altgeld.

—Republican orators have settled down to the work of defending the administration. It is not so much a campaign of apology for the corruption and favoritism of the administration as it is one of justification, but which needs an immense amount of explaining and defending. This means that the policy of the administration is not to be changed in any way, but the people are to be made to believe that the administration knows better than they what is good for the country.—Kansas City Times.

HANNA'S IMPERIALISM.

The Republican Boss Is Afraid of Overconfidence in His Party.

Hon. Mark Hanna opposed the war policy to the last day, in the afternoon, but seems now to be more imperialistic than the czar of Russia. Yet we discern in his outgivings the note of alarm lest the country should not come up to the scratch. In an interview at Cleveland he says that the republicans are indulging in overconfidence respecting the fall elections. He (Hanna) is not an optimist. He does not put any credence in the figures given out by the congressional committee at Washington that the republicans are sure of 16 majority in the next house. "We are not sure of anything," he declares. "The thing to do is not to predict, but go to work." All very good advice and all very true, except the statement that the republican party is suffering from overconfidence. The party has no such ailment. The trouble is not overconfidence, but lethargy. The party sees the danger ahead as plainly as Mr. Hanna does, but it is incapable of rousing itself, and the reason is that it is divided in its own mind respecting the very policy of imperialism and expansion and foreign possessions that Mr. Hanna has helped to push upon it. It is troubled by the pledge solemnly given that the war was not a war of conquest and of gain, and that after delivering Cuba from oppression we would come home and leave her free and independent. Here is Senator Foraker's chance to put his knife under the fifth ribs of McKinley and Hanna. He, too, has had himself interviewed. He says that we have no more right to keep a military force in Cuba after the Spaniards evacuate than to put such a force in any other foreign country with which we are at peace. All this talk about throwing 50 000 soldiers into Cuba after the Spaniards withdraw is without authority so far as congress is concerned, and will not be sanctioned by the senate, in Foraker's opinion. He would withdraw all our troops as soon as the Spaniards are cleared out and then await events. At the same time he is just as fierce for grabbing the Phillippines as Hanna himself. He thinks that the peace commission at Paris ought never to have been appointed. We ought to have made a treaty instead of a protocol at the end of the war. All of this talk tends to disorganize the party and to give Mr. Hanna fresh cause for doubting the predictions of the congressional committee at Washington.—N. Y. Post.

WAGES JUGGLED.

Manipulators of Figures Employed by Goldbugs to Fool the People.

Attempts have lately been made by men holding positions under the federal administration and by men who have been hired to work for a gold standard to show that wages have not fallen. This is simply a dishonest juggling with figures. Every mechanic and laboring man in the United States knows that it is not true, and thorough investigation by congress shows that just the opposite is the case. In 1891 a committee of the United States senate made a thorough investigation of the entire subject of wages. John G. Carlisle was a member of this committee. It made an exhaustive report, and showed that from 1840 to 1873 wages had nearly doubled, but, in the language of the committee, "after 1873 there was a marked falling off." The committee then shows that while there was a slight rise about 1880 in wages, it never reached the point occupied before, and that afterwards there was a continuous decline. One method of juggling with figures which is sometimes resorted to is the following: The salaries of higher officials of a corporation, which as a rule have not been reduced, are added to the sum paid the workmen; in this way they get a high average. For example, take a corporation which formerly employed 100 men and gave each on an average $600 a year, making $60,000 for 100; at the same time it paid one high official $10,000 a year; by adding this to the $60,000 would make the pay roll $70,000, then dividing this sum by 101, being the number of employes, including the high official, it makes nearly $700 as the average. The same corporation may to-day employ only 50 men and give each on an average only $500, making $25,000; it pays the present high official $10,000, which, added to the $25,000, makes the present pay roll $35,000; dividing that sum by 51 makes nearly $700 as the average, although formerly twice as many men were employed as now and each man got one-fifth more than he gets now. This illustrates the adage that while figures don't lie, liars can figure.

—Duties make a difference in prices, but not in competition, whether there is a tariff or not. The simple fact is that protection has at last run its course and must be abandoned even in this country. The highest protection ever accorded to home manufactures has proved a loss of revenue and hampered production to the utmost limit, and manufacturers are beginning to see that if their product is to be sold abroad at all they must be relieved of the burden of protection. The same is true of our commercial marine.—Milwaukee Journal.

—If we were to believe all the testimony before the commission of inquiry regarding the excellence of the arrangements made for the comfort of the soldiers in the field and in the camps, we should have to turn round and hold mass meetings to sing the praises of Secretary Alger and denounce the thousands of soldiers who persisted in dying from diseases and starvation as ungrateful mischief makers.—Providence Journal.

CONFRONTED BY DEFEAT.

Advices from the national capital are in effect that, viewed from Washington, the political outlook is not promising for the republican party. Democratic success at the fall elections, it is said, will not come as a surprise to the republican campaign managers there. The latter, while wearing a forced air of calmness and confidence, are convinced that the congressional elections will show a democratic victory. There is no dodging the fact, say the Washington advices, that the war department methods have proved a burden. The republican managers profess to fear that the stay-at-home vote will cost the party many districts, but general popular disgust will manifest itself in both the vote that is cast and the vote that is not cast.

There is no reason to doubt that the result of the forthcoming elections will be found to be a sweeping repudiation of the republican party and its policies and acts in state and nation. It is hard to understand how it could be otherwise in the light of recent records. The administration's absolute surrender to partisan political interests in war—to the lasting and often fatal injury of the soldiers, to the provocation of the people and to the nation's disgrace—must necessarily invite public condemnation. The one burning issue, whose influence is felt in all electoral fields, is the issue of the camps, depopulated by disease and starvation, brought on by incompetency and neglect. This is the national issue that forces itself into every contest and which will affect every result.

There is no earthly reason why the republican managers should not be dismayed in contemplation of the outlook, for the prospect as it spreads out before the intelligent public gaze discloses the utter rout of a party that deserves to be routed. Republican government is offensive to every man who is not a hide-bound devotee at the shrine of the g. o. p.—Binghamton Leader.

—Do the farmers want the present condition of things to continue indefinitely? Irrespective of political considerations, can they as a class afford to have present conditions exist? The value of farm lands has depreciated on an average about one-half. New offices are created at each session of the legislature, to be filled at the expense of the taxpayer, making taxes higher instead of lower, as should be if the equity of the case should be taken into consideration. Prices of farm products are barely high enough to cover the cost of production, and yet the "tax eaters" are insisting that "farmers are prosperous."

COVERED BARNYARD.

A Very Important Factor in the Management of a Successful General Farm.

If appearances are facts, seldom indeed is there a farmer who appreciates the real worth of a covered barnyard. At any rate, those seen by the writer in his travels over and about the country have been exceedingly few and far between. A covered barnyard, just the name, is a very important factor in farm management, it not only being possible with it to keep manure from leaching, even in the slightest degree, but preserved to a certainty from that hateful consumer of the majority of manure heaps, "fire-fanging."

With a covered barnyard one should simply wheel out the manure daily and throw some litter over it. Thus dealt with, the cattle will run over it, and keep it so closely packed that too rapid heating is an impossibility. A covered barnyard also affords stock a chance to exercise and secure fresh air without exposure to storms and cold winds, no matter what the period of the year may be; and for sheep that lamb in the spring it is just the place in which they can with safety, the opinion of many being that sheep clothed with a thick fleece of wool, as they are, thrive better on an average when they have a cool situation. To justify this, however, it is imperative that the barnyard be enclosed all around except that part facing to the south, with feed racks for the animals arranged at the sides. Sheep can be wintered in this manner with but very little trouble.

Have you a barn something like the upright shown in the accompanying illustration? If so, attach on the sunny side of it the addition that is represented, which is in the virtual sense two wings with a roof spanning both, the roof space to be used as storage for hay, grain or other crops, it opening directly onto the second floor of the barn. The wings may be best utilized for the housing of any kind of stock, pigs, poultry, calves, colts or sheep. This simplifies the work, other conditions being equal. Since all the farm stock is gathered into one place, and practically under one roof, the whole arrangement becomes a labor-saving machine, so to speak, of the highest order, the covered yard thus secured being adjacent to all the stock quarters, and so at once accessible to all the stock.

At the front a board fence should be erected—if a tight one it will further protect the yard from the wind—having at either extremity a gate, so that a farm team may be driven in on one side, the wagon loaded with dung, and then driven out on the other side, thus giving an easy turn; or, if one of the wings is but half the length of the opposite one, only one gate in front is required, the covered space intervening between the upright and this wing then affording a passage in and out of the yard, and also more room as well as more light in case the wings are quite long. This arrangement, furthermore, secures constant circulation of air through the yard, removing all undesirable fumes arising, and keeping the whole pure and sweet, and this, in my judgment, is the proper construction, for while it makes the yard colder, it will be rendered unfit for use only during a few days of the winter, and then a temporary obstruction to the cold may be put up at the open space between wing and barn. If it faces to the south, the yard will thus be made practically impregnable to the frost king.—Fred O. Sibley, in Ohio Farmer.

Green Food for Winter.

The value of green food for poultry during the winter months is recognized by all well-informed poultry keepers. How best to supply this is more of a question, particularly in the northern states. In Missouri and states south an almost or quite continuous source of green food for the chickens can be provided by sowing a small patch of wheat or rye near the poultry house. This should be sown early, and on rich, well-prepared soil so as to secure a good growth before freezing weather sets in and the fowls should be kept from it until other sources of supply are cut off by frost. Even in sections of severe winters a wheat patch for the chickens to work on in late fall and early spring will be a source of health and delight to the fowls, and profit to their owners.—Rural World.

Feeding Oats in Straw.

Though it saves labor, we doubt whether there is any advantage in feeding oats in the straw to ordinary stock. Unless the grain can be ground much of it will pass through the stock whole and will be voided in the excrement. But there is an exception to this in the case of sheep, especially if fed in the straw in winter. The sheep masticate the grain so thoroughly that after it has come up and is rechewed in the cud there is scarcely any loss of nutriment. It is best to feed the oats in the straw before any hay is given, and require it to all be eaten. This will prevent waste.—American Cultivator.

Corn is a fattening food, but can nearly always be given at night to good advantage.

PREPARING THE SOIL.

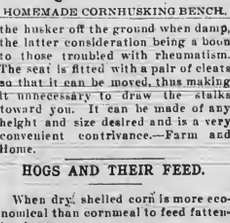
Unless It Be Done Carefully the Winter Wheat Crop Will Not Be Satisfactory.

A good deal of success or failure in the production of winter wheat lies in the preparation of the soil.

It is to be regretted that so many fields are put in in a slipshod manner. Farmers adopting this method will growl because they do not make a success of winter wheat, and will forever after let the other fellow grow wheat while they stick to something they know will respond to little labor and thought.

The old-time method of summer fallow has about passed out of use, but it is modified to a certain degree by plowing the land intended for wheat as early as possible. In this way much of the summer fallow result is secured. The soil needs exposure to the air in order to promote chemical changes that result in an increase of available food for the plants. It needs time for such tillage, that the particles of soil may be well mixed, and their positions towards each other changed. It requires time to become solid beneath the surface as a result of fall rains.

An old rule in English agriculture is to the effect that "land that is to bear wheat cannot be too old or too solid, provided that it is fertile and free from weeds, and that there is enough loose loam at the surface to cover the seed." These successful wheat growers hold that "firm standing" is required for the healthy development and proper ripening of wheat. In proof of this we have often observed that the best wheat is found at the ends where there has been the most tramping done by men and teams. The best bed is one that is prepared early and pulverized well, and which receives surface workings regularly until the time of seeding comes.



We have in mind a very successful grower of winter wheat who will not grow wheat if he cannot have the condition necessary for a good seed bed. The best ground for wheat is a field which has been to oats the previous year. As soon as the oats are removed the ground is plowed comparatively shallow, in fact it is plowed about as shallow as can be done to turn under the growth of stubble and weeds. As soon as plowed it is disked and harrowed, and about once per week until seeding time the land should be harrowed. The harrowing and the tramping of the teams on the field, together with the rains, if there are any, will fit the ground well for wheat. For selection of ground, the level land is considered best, and it may be either valley land or upland. The next best land is a southenst slope.

Preparing ground for wheat in growing corn or after the corn has been removed, is not carried on with that success required by the most practical wheat growers. Good and effectual work cannot be done in the growing corn, even if the wheat grower has a flue hoe or drill for the purpose of drilling. To get the corn off the field means a great deal of labor that the average westerv wheat grower does not care to undertake, and it makes the time of seeding rather late for best results. If it is not possible to cut the corn and haul it off the field, it may be well to make the shock rows far apart and prepare the ground between the rows for wheat. The best tool for preparing this kind of ground for wheat is found in the disc harrow, followed thoroughly with a smoothing harrow. The limited time will not permit as much work as in the stubble ground.—Iowa Homestead.

the husker off the ground when damp, the latter consideration being a boon to those troubled with rheumatism. The seat is fitted with a pair of cleats so that it can be moved, thus making it unnecessary to draw the stalks toward you. It can be made of any height and size desired and is a very convenient contrivance.—Farm and Home.

HOGS AND THEIR FEED.

When dry shelled corn is more economical than cornmeal to feed fattening hogs.

One bushel of cornmeal is worth nearly three bushels of oats as food for fattening hogs.

Corn-fed pigs gained 1½ pounds per week and ate about 21 pounds of corn per 100 pounds of live weight.

Skim milk could not be economically fed to fattening hogs unless it was a product which could not be otherwise utilized.

Pork was produced during the cold weather, with corn at 28 cents per bushel, for less than three cents per pound.

It required 7½ pounds, or one bushel of ground oats, to produce one pound of pork when fed with equal parts by weight of cornmeal.

WOES OF YANKEES IN CUBA.

They Say They Are Robbed at the Havana Custom House and on the Railroads.

The American commercial agents who went down there after the blockade was raised complain of unjust Spanish taxation and other charges. The fact is that the Spaniard is still in power, and he is having his last day with a vengeance. Like Bill Nye's landlord, he admits his charges to be unjust, and argues merely that "he needs the money."

The chief source of complaint is the customhouse. R. S. Cottrell, the agent of a New York provision syndicate, says that he had absolutely nothing with him on arriving there that was dutiable; nevertheless the customs official said he would have to pay $25 to get his baggage through. Cottrell asked him for what, but that official vouchsafed no explanation, and merely said that was what he must pay. After some palaver the official came down in price, and Cottrell paid him $10.

Another instance of the injustice of the customs officials is the case of Mr. Carlos Bradford, of Brooklyn.

Mr. Bradford brought with him some samples, worth about $80. The customs authorities wanted to charge Mr. Bradford $250. He contended that this was preposterous, and offered to mutilate everything he carried so far as to destroy their market value. The Spanish authorities would not agree to this at first, but finally assented, and proposed a degree of mutilation that would have destroyed every semblance of their original appearance and made them valueless even as samples.

Mr. Brndford then proposed to return them intact to the United States. After some demur the authorities said they would permit this, but Mr. Bradford would have to pay $60 costs before they could leave the country. So at present they are still in the customs storehouse and Mr. Bradford is hoping against hope that when the commission arrives he may be able to have matters straightened out.

At Santiago the minimum Spanish tariff is charged. At Havana, the metropolis of the island, the maximum duty is imposed, with an added 20 per cent., which prohibitive tariff makes the importation of goods from the United States next to impossible.

Another institution that is coming in for its share of Yankee denunciation is the railroad. It charges for "first-class" passage, which means a roach seat with a back to it, at the rate of ten cents a mile. If one travels third class, the charges assume reasonable proportions, but the third class seat is merely a hard bench without any back to it, and as the Cuban roadbeds are far more exercising than wild horseback riding, a ride of several hours is more exciting than interesting.

In regard to freight charges, I cite Mr. Cottrell:

"I brought with me from New York and carried as baggage four small boxes weighing altogether about 140 pounds. They contained some provisions and delicacies for personal consumption and distribution among the very poor along the road. Their actual cost in New York, where I bought them, was $12.83. From Havana to Caibarien, a matter of about 250 miles, I had to pay $35 freight charges. I protested, but to no avail, and the only thing to do was to pay the charges."—N. Y. Sun.

POOR PAY FOR HARD TOIL.

Statistics Tell Why Coal Miners Try Desperately to Better Their Lot.

The masses of statistics in the report of state officials are not inviting to the general leader, but some of the figures in the report of the state mine inspector just published are suggestive.

From the returns made to the office it is gathered that the average time worked in 1897 was 150½ days, or less than half the number of working days in the year. The average daily wages during the time worked was $1.27, but taking the year through the average amount actually received was but $16 per month, which was nearly $2.50 per month less than was received in either of the two preceding years.

The lower average in 1897 was due to the long strike caused by the endeavor of the miners to get better pay. While there was a partial advantage gained in the rate of pay, there was an actual loss in the amount received.

Taking the rate of the two years preceding, when the average monthly earning was $18.47, it will be seen that the return to the working miner for his hard toil was miserably poor and it is not to be wondered at that he should make desperate efforts to better his lot. But the Ohio miner is, as a rule, in better condition than his Pennsylvania fellow laborer in the coal mines.

Competition among the operators sometimes forces the price of coal down and every person naturally wants to get his fuel at the lowest possible rates, but the shave in prices to the consumer cuts off a slice from the none too large loaf of bread on the scantily furnished table of the miner. The consumer gains at the cost of the producer; and it is a serious question whether the community at large is benefited or injured in the end.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE WEST HAS MOVED.

Montana Man in New York Objects to Former Geographical Classification.

"We of the east," said a New York man, "do not appreciate how the country has spread, as a result of the war with Spain, as our fellow-citizens in the west appreciate it. I was in the office of my hotel, near the counter, when a new arrival wrote his name and town and said he wanted a front room with a private bath. My business keeps me on the alert for people who live beyond the Mississippi, and as soon as I could do so with propriety I looked at the register and saw that the new arrival was from Helena, Mont. Then I made my advances by asking him how business was in the west. At that he flared and asked:

"'How do you know where I am from—what makes you think I am from the west?'

"I explained that I had looked at the register, and in order to appease any suspicion on his part that I had a gold brick to dispose of I handed him my card and apologized, for when you have done that to a western man he is youra.

"'But I am not from the west,' he protested.

"'You are from Montana?' I asked.

"'That's what; but you don't call Montana the west, I reckon,' he replied, with a combination of southern and western accent.

"I said as mildly as I could that it was so classified in the geography I knew and so regarded by people in the east.

"'Not since the war,' he replied.

"For a moment I did not know where I was 'at.' But he came to my relief:

"'I reckon you know we've recently took the Sandwich islands in out of the wet?'

"I acquiesced with proper American pride.

"'I reckon you know about that other island, Luzon, or whatever they call it? That's just as good as ours as long as Dewey's there.'

"I followed him in his enthusiasm, for it was infectious, and I assented.

"'Well, then,' he asserted as a clincher, 'if you want to know how business is in the west, you had better call up Honolulu or Manila. Strikes me, if there was no mistake made by Dewey—and I don't think there was—that Helena, Mont., comes pretty nigh being in the middle of the United States as they lay at the present writing.'"—N. THE TRUE TO HIS LAST.

A Good Shoemaker May Not Know Much Besides Making Shoes, But—

Two men were talking.

"What I admire among our artisan class," said one with the air of a superior person, "is a little broader knowledge than is defined by the mere walls of his shop. Now, I have in mind two shoemakers whom I see occasionally, as they are both tenants of mine. Both of them are prompt, industrious, honest men, but one is as ignorant as he can be even about the details of his own trade. Why, I asked him the other day where shoe pegs were made, and of what wood and he hasn't the least idea, and I had to tell him. On the contrary, the other one, not only knew that much, but was up on the history of shoes and their material and manufacture, and he interested me for half an hour by a most instructive talk on his occupation. There is a vast difference, I think, between two men situated as those two are, and it is greatly to the credit of one that he acquires knowledge, not because it is absolutely necessary, but because of his desire to broaden and see something more than that may dangle at a waxend or spread itself over a side of sole leather. Don't you think as I do?"

"Um-er," hesitated the other man, "I know your two shoemakers and have had work done by both of them, and I notice another difference that you probably overlooked."

"What's that?" responded the first man, rubbing his hands with pleasure.

"Yes," continued the other, "the man who only knows how to make shoes can make shoes and the other chap can't. There is something in that, you know, to the man who must wear them."—Washington Star.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is often ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. "I guess you don't know me," said the caller, with a commendable desire to be pleasant.

MRS. PINKHAM TALKS ABOUT OVARITIS.

Letter from Mrs. Carrie F. Tremper that all Suffering Women Should Read.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation with all its terrors may easily result from neglect.

The fullest counsel on this subject can be secured without cost by writing to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and asking for her advice. Your letter will be confidential and seen by women only.

Mrs. Carrie F. Tremper, Lake, Ind., whose letter we print, is only one of many that have been cured of ovarian troubles by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I was suffering from congestion of the ovaries, misplacement of the womb, irregular, scanty, and painful menstruation, also kidney trouble. I had let it go on until I could not sit up, and could not straighten my left leg. My physician gave me relief, but failed to cure me. Reading the testimonials of different women, telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for them, I decided to give it a trial. I had almost given up hopes, as I had suffered untold agony. The first dose helped me. And now, after using eight bottles of Vegetable Compound, one bottle of Blood Purifier, one box of Liver Pills, I am proud to say I am as well as I ever was. I might have saved a large doctor's bill and much suffering, had I tried your precious medicine in the beginning of my sickness. All in the village know I was not expected to live, when I had the first and second attacks. In fact, I had no hope until I began taking your Vegetable Compound. It has saved my life."

Bedinger, of Richwood, was unanimously chosen and the meeting was over in less than five minutes after it was called to order by Esq. J. C. Byland. It was a very enthusiastic and remarkably determined gathering. Yes the Democrats are more determined about the election than I have ever seen them.

The men who were injured by the collision of the painters' and section men's hand cars on the L. & N. Railroad opposite the Mayhew Co's planing Mill some days ago, have all recovered and are on duty except Richard Staton and Omer Sanders, who were seriously hurt. The scars on handsome little Berry Noel's face have healed over nicely. Both cars were out late and it was pitch dark. Neither of the foremen was aware of there being another hand car on the track.

Col. Fred Shafer disrobing the loose-jointed manner in which the sidewalks have been put down, concluded to show how they should be done. It may be that this conclusion was not reached before council sent out notifications that if the sidewalks were not put in good order within 15 days the council would have it done at the property owner's expense. Anyhow Shafer, in person, has made with his own hands a greater improvement than has been seen here in the last decade.

Bullittsville.

Oct. 20.—Today the matrimonial fever which has played such havoc in our social circle this season, made itself manifest where it was least expected, to exist. Mr. William H. Moore, a wealthy bachelor who for three score and thirteen years, has withstood the fatal attack of this disease, today yielded and was transformed from the miserable state of a bachelor into the new and blissful condition of a "benedict." This wonderful transformation was brought about through the charming manners and sterling qualities of Miss Mary Swearinger, who for two score and ten years has battled with the same disease. Several years ago she was a governess in the family of Mr. James Moore, deceased, an elder brother to the groom. Since then she has made her home with the Moores, spending most of her time in the old family mansion occupied by the groom and his sister, Miss Mary. Hence love has been a long time weaving the threads that bound these two hearts as one. At 2:30 this afternoon Rev. G. W. Watkins tied the Gordian-knot, which binds their lives, so artfully that it formed an inextricable deadlock that it will require the sword of the great destroyer to cut the knot.

In view of the fact that the groom has been confined to his bed the greater portion of his life, his room had been beautifully and artistically decorated for the occasion. A beautiful wedding bell composed of bride's roses, goldenrods, carnations and a variety of cut-flowers, artfully wedded together, was suspended from the ceiling in such a manner that the groom, sitting in his bed and his bride standing at his side, could be immediately under it. In this position the lovers' vows were given and they were united in wedlock with a beautiful and impressive ceremony by the youthful minister.

The groom, Mr. Wm. H. Moore, is a very remarkable man. About 57 years ago, when but 16 years of age, he received an injury in play at school that has confined him to his bed ever since. Though prevented, on account of this, from leading an active business life, few men have accomplished more than he has. Having been blessed with a strong constitution, a broad, comprehensive mind and a very remarkable taste for literature, he has been permitted to pass his time very profitably. He is fond of reading, and through this source has gathered many rich treasures and stored them away in his mental garner. For years he was his father's private secretary, and since his death has been the business manager of the large estate he left. His father's wonderful success in business was attributable, in a great measure, to his remarkable apprehension with soundness of judgment.

May the wedded life of this remarkable couple, though entered upon after the noon-tide, be spent upon a bed of roses, and may sweet scented flowers be strewn in their pathway of life. The guests were confined to members of the family with the exception of Dr. Brauer and Mr. John Stephens, who accompanied the minister.

It may be my privilege and pleasure in my next communication to write up another notable event, judging from the activity in dressmaking in a certain quarter.

Our old friend and neighbor, Wm. Ackemyer, informed us during a call a few days ago, that he had canned, or, in other words, put up 400 gallons of fruit this season; also a barrel of kraut and two bushels of mangole pickles. All of this is to be devoted to home consumption. We made application for boarding at once. Uncle Bill had a few moments before joined Dr. Clore and myself in sampling some of his 14-year old Bourbon.

Sam Hicks has a horse that is a dandy to drive. It is just as liable to go in one direction as another, and is not liable to go in any direction unless it takes a notion.

"Fatty" Hampton, of Florence, will not pass a suffering man as he lays by the road side, but will climb right out of that beer wagon and give him a helping hand. It's so.

J. W. Kennedy attended the reunion of Confederate veterans held at Owenton, last week. The occasion was one of unusual interest. The veterans were all fine looking, substantial men. Gen. Duke was radiant with joy to see the comrades who had bravely answered to his commands and had faced death in all its hideous forms to sustain a cause so just. Comrades met that had not seen each other for 32 long years. Col. Brown, of Kenton City, gave a history of the 4th from organization to day of discharge; number of battles engaged in; number killed and mi[illegible] amounting to 60 per cent.; one man deserted and no man was ever arrested for misdemeanor.

Constance is coming to the front again after a protracted period of quiet, and warrants have been especially in demand in that part of the county. The shooting of Joel Peno's cow stirred up the trouble. Joel charged his brother, John, with doing the shooting, but John claims that he did not shoot the cow. The next "brigaze" occurred at Duly Peno's. Mr. North claims that Duly and his wife, whose daughter he married, gave him a flogging, and invoked the Commonwealth to punish his pugnacious father-in-law and mother-in-law.

The commissioners completed the division of the lands of the late Yancy Clore among his heirs, last Saturday. For her dower the widow gets 85 acres and the improvements; J. H. Clore, 113.17 acres on Gunpowder creek below Weaver's mill, known as the Crisler tract; L. E. Clore's daughter, 90 acres, known as the Llewellyn Tanner farm; Mrs. W. T. Davis, 52.35 at the forks of Guupowder creek, 20.15 acres on the public road opposite the Weaver homestead, and Mrs. W. H. Rouse, 54.70 acres between the Weaver land and the dower.

The criminal division of the Boone County court was in session, yesterday, Judge C. C. Roberts, presiding.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. Duly Peno and wife, charged with a breach of the peace, committed by administering a flogging to their son-in-law, North, the court adhered strictly to the Common Law doctrine, and held that a mother-in-law has a right to correct and chastise her son-in-law in a reasonable manner; however she must not inflict great bodily harm or break any bones. The court was clear on this point, and ruled that it has been the law of the land so long that the "memory of man runneth not to the contrary." The accused were dismissed.

This decision of the court is of grave importance to son-in laws and those who are contemplating moving in that sphere.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. John Peno, charged with shooting another's cow, the defendant waived examination, and gave bail in the sum of $50, for his appearance at the December term of the circuit court.

Resolved, That in his death we lose a companion and friend who was beloved by us all; his sterling qualities of mind and heart endeared him to everyone. ANOTHER American woman is to marry into the nobility of England. It has been announced by cable that Mrs. Samuel J. Colgate, of New York, will soon wed the earl of Strafford. Mrs. Colgate is a handsome young widow with a fortune of $10,000,000, which she received by the will of her late husband.

PARIS is suffering from the ice famine, and London's stock is very low owing to the prolonged heated term of the past summer. A few weeks ago the daily consumption in London was about 2,000 tons, or double the usual quantity. There is little hope of the supply being increased, the ice houses of Norway and Sweden having been practically emptied of their stores.

ACCORDING to a correspondent of a London paper there is as much whipping in the girls' schools as in the boys' schools, but the girls make no fuss about it. Says the correspondent: "They know they deserve their punishment, so they take it with a good grace, dry their eyes and smooth their curls and don't let any one know, not even their parents, that they have had a taste of the rod."

THE army officers in Cuba are discussing a novel proposition for a garrison. The plan is to provide by a special act of congress for an army of 75,000 or 100,000 Spanish soldiers, officered by Americans, to serve until a stable government is established, then to be returned to Spain or to remain as citizens. This, it is believed, would serve all purposes, besides supplying a needed white immigration for Cuba.

OWING to a low and declining birth rate, which has reached a point where it means an annual loss of some 20,000 of population a year, France has resolved to take care of what babies she has. A law has therefore been passed forbidding anyone to give solid food of any kind to infants under one year without the written authority of a qualified physician. Also the use of long rubber tubes to feeding bottles is prohibited, because of the difficulty of keeping them sterilized.

WESTERN Australia is becoming a prominent gold-producer. In 1897 her production of gold was 674,993 ounces, or two and a half times the product of 1896. But in the first seven months of 1898 the production has been 547,071 ounces, indicating a progressive increase. There is no commodity the production of which has a brighter prospect of increase than gold. In the United States, Canada, South Africa, Australia, Russia, India and China the output is continually increasing.

By the census of 1890 the population was 431. C. P. Huntington, the railway king, is a native of Harwinton, in the Litchfield hills, and "Old Hutch," the Chicago operator, was born in Coventry.

THE private jewels of the empress of Austria were valued some years ago, when an inventory was made of them covering forty sheets of parchment, at $7,000,000, one of the most magnificent pieces of the collection being a superb pearl necklace presented to her by the emperor on the occasion of the christening of their only son, the late Crown Prince Rudolph. The necklace is especially mentioned in the will of the empress as destined for her granddaughter, the little Archduchess Elizabeth.

A RACE WAR ON.

White Deputy Dead, Three Wounded, and Nine Negroes Reported Killed.

Gov. McLaurin Arrives on the Scene—The Governor Was Accompanied By a Posse of 30 Armed Men—Another Battle Expected.

FOREST, Miss., Oct. 24.—As the result of an attempt to arrest a Negro near Harpersville, Scott county, in the eastern part of the state, one white deputy is killed, three wounded and according to the latest report nine Negroes have been killed by the citizens of the Harpersville neighborhood and the sheriff's posse combined. The pursuit of about 50 Negroes which had joined the original offender with the avowed determination to prevent his arrest and capture and which ambushed the party attempting the arrest continues and by morning the number of fatalities will undoubtedly have assumed larger proportions. The whole country is terrible aroused and the sheriff's posse has been reinforced with men from all the neighboring towns. Gov. McLaurin has gone to the scene, which is about ten miles north of Forest, the nearest railroad point. The trouble originated last Friday when a Negro named Bill Burke had an altercation with his employer, Charles Freeman, a white man, in which the Negro got the best of the difficulty. The next night a crowd of white men headed by Wallace Sibley, who was deputized to arrest the man, went to Burke's house, which is about a mile from Harpersville.

When they arrived upon the scene and called for Burke they were greeted by a fusillade from the Negroes concealed in ambush in the bushes surrounding the house and in the house itself. Wallace Sibley, the leader, fell dead at the first volley, and three more white members of the crowd, James Johnson, James Hamilton and James Wells were wounded. The whites returned the fire, but were unable to do any execution as their assailants were all concealed. There were not more than eight men in the white crowd, and finding it impossible to resist effectively, they dispersed towards Harperville. It was not known at that time that Sibley was injured, but upon a return to the scene Sunday morning he was found dead in the yard. The wounded deputies were able to get back to town with the assistance of their comrades. This occurrence took place early in the night. When the crowd returned to Harpersville the news spread like wildfire. During the night a large crowd gathered in the neighborhood. They immediately went to Burke's house and got from his mother the names of all parties in the crowd which had ambushed the men the night before. In all there were about forty Negroes who had gathered to prevent the arrest of Burke, and a list was made up at her dictation. All of them had fled. Then the pursuit and search for each of the proscribed darkies began. According to the statement of reliable citizens, six Negroes were found and killed by the crowd of armed and determined citizens before the sheriff arrived.

Sunday morning Sheriff J. M. Stevenson was wired from Harpersville of the threatening condition of affairs and he was asked to get together a posse and come at once to Harpersville. The sheriff lives at Morton, ten miles from the scene. Gathering together a posse of citizens the sheriff started at once for the place. When he arrived in the afternoon he was joined by crowds of citizens until a conservative estimate places the number in the posse as over 300 men. Immediately after leaving the house where the first tragedy was committed the Negroes scattered through the surrounding country. The sheriff's pursuit has resolved itself into a chase of the Negroes implicated and not of a mob which is keeping together as was first reported. A reliable telephone message received at a late hour Sunday night states that three more Negroes have been found and killed, making a total of nine to date with about forty more to be heard from. Sheriff Stevenson realizing the danger apprehended immediately wired Gov. McLaurin for aid in quelling a probable widespread disturbance. Upon receipt of his telegram the governor wired Adjt. Gen. Henry, at Jackson, to get together a company of the national guard and proceed to the scene upon the first train. Gen. Henry immediately responded that there was no national guard company obtainable, but that he would get together a company of armed men and render necessary assistance.

In the meantime the governor procured a special train at Brandon and accompanied by a posse of 30 men armed with shotguns proceeded to Forest.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Oct. 22.—Gen. Leonard Wood, military governor pro tem of the department of Santiago, Friday issued a proclamation in ten sections, which is a sort of provisional declaration of independence.

The first article guarantees to the people the right of assembly for the common good and to apply to those in power by petition or remonstrance for the redress of grievances.

The second section guarantees the right to worship God according to individual conscience, provided there is no interference with any existing form of worship.

The third section directs that courts of justice shall be open to all and that no private property shall be taken by the government without compensation.

The fourth section, dealing with criminal trials, invests the accused with the right to be heard himself or by counsel and to have compulsory process to secure the attendance of a witness in his behalf.

The fifth section says no person accused of crime shall be compelled to give evidence against himself.

The sixth section declares that no such person, who is once acquitted of the charge brought against him, shall be tried again for the same offense.

The seventh section provides that all persons charged with crime shall be entitled to bail, except in cases of capital offense, and that the writ of habeas corpus may not be suspended except the commanding general of the department deems it advisable.

The eighth section says that excessive bail shall not be required and that no excessive fine nor cruel or unusual punishment shall be inflicted.

The ninth section provides that in order to secure the people against unreasonable search, there shall first be established under oath a presumption of guilt.

The tenth section guarantees to all the right to write or print freely on any matter, subject to responsibility for abuse of the right.

The municipal laws are to be administered in accordance with these declarations of rights, subject to modification which, in the judgment of the commanding general, would be beneficent and promote the principles of enlightened civilization.

THE EVACUATION OF CUBA.

It Must Necessarily Be Delayed Beyond the Period Fixed By The Administration Owing to Lack of Transportation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—It is now certain that the complete evacuation of Cuba will be delayed beyond the period originally fixed by the administration. This will follow entirely without reference to anything that has occurred in Paris before the peace commission. The war department has about satisfied itself that the task imposed upon the Spanish authorities, namely, the removal and transportation to a great distance by sea of about 120,000 soldiers, sick and well, with their accouterments, was beyond the ability of the Spaniards. The magnitude of the task is shown by the fact that the great trans-Atlantic steam lines crossing the Atlantic from New York, all combined, in prosperous seasons, transport only about 50,000 persons in one year—less than half the number that the Spanish officials, with their poor facilities, were expected to transport in about ten weeks. Delay in the evacuation of Cuba will cause a delay in the relinquishment of sovereignty by the Spaniards over the entire island, which was set for December 1.

SHE HAS AN ALLY

It Is Asserted Russia Will Support France in the Threatened Struggle.

Every English War Vessel Ordered to Have Its Crew Made Up to the Full—Officers on Leave of Absence to Hold Themselves in Readiness.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 24.—Commenting on the recent speech of the British chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the Novoe Vremya charges the chancellor with making a violent attack upon the French government and says that he failed to bear in mind that Fraiice has, in Russia, "an ally resolved to support her in the Fashoda question, in view of the full solidarity of their interests."

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The British Admiralty has ordered every sea going warship to have its crew made up to the full complement as ordered in case of mobilization.

The order of the British admiralty practically means the complete telling off prospectively of every ship company in detail. Four torpedo boat destroyers, which were about to be fitted with new water tube boilers, have had their orders countermanded and have been instructed to reduce their stores.

Officers on leave of absence or unemployed have been notified to hold themselves in readiness to commission the reserve ships if required.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—M. De Blowitz, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, in a letter on the Fashoda situation to the Matin, explains the intense feeling in the matter of reconquering the Soudan as based upon the English thirst to avenge Gordon.

"Maj. Marchand's presence in the midst of their exultation," he says, "is like a cut with a horsewhip. England does not aim to mortify Marchand, but she resents an oblique blow aimed sta campaign which has been openly conducted. France is ready to march at the drum call, but I am convinced that the call will not sound. What is Fashoda to France, compared with its value to England? In case of war, we should be fighting to keep Marchand in Fashoda when in truth he had already departed."

The Temps has created interest by its telegram from Nantes, saying the four battalions of the infantry regiments comprising the 21st division, with headquarters at Nantes, have completed their war equipment.

Extra rounds of ammunition have been issued to men and officers alike.

Everything portends rapid moving.

In Paris excitement runs high and the public voice is all for war.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The British cabinet has been summoned to meet early next week for the purpose of discusing the Fashoda question. It is understood that the government proposes to take the steps necessary to insist upon an early and definite statement on the subject from France.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—While the gravity of the Fashoda question is fully appreciated, there is an underlying feeling on the stock exchange that a peaceful solution will be found. This is evidenced by the recovery in prices, in spite of the absence of reassuring news. On the whole, prices were wonderfully well maintained last week, holders showing little disposition to realize.

France Cooling Down.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—A semi-official note, issued Sunday evening says: "There is no foundation for the alarmist rumors regarding the relations between France and Great Britain. It is equally incorrect to say that extraordinary measures have been taken at any of our naval ports."

THE PEACE CROSS UNVEILED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—A most impressive ceremony in this city Sunday was the unveiling of the peace cross on the summit of Mount Saint Albans, the site for the new Episcopal cathedral. This ceremony was in lieu of that at the laying of the corner stone of the edifice which will be known as the cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul. President McKinley was present and delivered a brief address. Many other distinguished men were present and 300 bishops and other high dignitaries of the church, which has been holding its convention in Washington.

Daly's Latest Success.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The great success of Mr. Daly's production of "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Miss Rehan as Roxane, has precluded the repertoire, and though "Taming the Shrew" and "School for Scandal" were announced in Philadelphia and Baltimore, both were withdrawn for "Cyrano."

Russia Sounds a Warning Note.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 24.—The Novoe Vremya, commenting on Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's speech, accuses him of making a violent attack upon France, forgetting that Russia is firmly resolved to support France in the Fashoda question.

Escaped Jail.

KOKOMO, Ind., Oct. 24.—Prof. Bert Lewis, the ex-artilleryman and balloonist, arrested a few days ago for burglarizing a store, escaped jail and is now a fugitive from justice.

Wheat $2 a Bushel.

Some farmers are holding their wheat because they think the price will go to $2 a bushel. The price, however, may go down instead of up, and thus great losses will follow delay in selling. In all matters delays are dangerous, particularly so in sickness. At the first sign of biliousness, dyspepsia, indigestion or constipation cure yourself with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Don't wait for your condition to improve itself, for it is apt to get worse still.

Then She Sat Down.

"In Hawaii," said the man who was occupying the greater part of two seats, "the women have hogs for pets."

"In the United States," said the woman who was hanging on to a strap, apparently speaking to the woman next to her, "the women often marry hogs."

Immediately thereafter three men got up and made believe that they really preferred to stand.—Chicago Post.

JUBILEE WEEK.

Many Exciting Events in Honor of Peace at Chicago.

THIRTY THOUSAND MEN PARADE.

Grand Benefit Ball, Proceeds of Which Go to Sick Soldiers—Banquet Wednesday Night at Which the President and Many Other Distinguished Persons Were Present.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Eight thousand people packed within the walls of the Auditorium building Tuesday, witnessed the formal opening exercises of the National Peace Jubilee. All that had preceded Tuesday's great meeting was merely preliminary in its nature and most of it in honor of the president personally. Tuesday, however, the actual jubilee began.

The exercises opened with a short address by Chairman Charles Truax, of the jubilee committee, at the conclusion of which he introduced the presiding officer, George R. Peck.

Mr. Peck's address was greeted with great applause.

After Mr. Peck had terminated his address he introduced Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, who delivered the formal address of welcome to President McKinley and the strangers who had come to Chicago to witness the ceremonies of jubilee week. The president, who received a most enthusiastic welcome as he entered the building, made no formal reply to the addresses of welcome, notwithstanding the large calls that were made upon him for a speech. Following the address of Mayor Harrison came Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul.

During the afternoon five meetings were held in different parts of the city.

The public schools, all which were properly decorated, devoted the day to jubilee exercises and to hearing addresses by prominent educators and orators.

The great benefit ball of Tuesday night was the climax of Tuesday's jubilee events. Society danced with patriotic fervor at the ball given at the Auditorium for the benefit of invalid soldiers and sailors, and the destitute families of those who fell in the war with Spain.

It was the event of the day. Every dollar received will be applied to a fund for the relief of sick and wounded heroes of the army and navy and their dependents. Its financial success is assured.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Wednesday came the spectacular and crowning glory of the week of jubilee, the great street parade. It started from the corner of Michigan avenue and Congress street promptly at the time scheduled, and for four hours it moved swiftly and with scarcely a single halt through the principal streets in the business portion of the city.

President McKinley reviewed the parade from the grand stand erected in front of the Union League Club on Jackson street. On the stand with him were Gen. Miles, Gen. Shafter, Gen. Chaffee, Secretary Wilson, Judge Emory Speer, the Chinese and Corean ministers and a host of lesser dignitaries.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—For the third time since their commencement the jubilee festivities were shifted to the interior of the Auditorium, and the third and last scene to be enacted within the great hall was the most brilliant, beautiful and successful of them all. It was the great national peace jubilee banquet tendered to the president of the United States and distinguished guests by the citizens of Chicago. No similar event ever held within the Auditorium surpassed in brilliancy and simple elegance the banquet of Wednesday night. No similar event ever held there was more successfully managed or brought to a more triumphant conclusion. The managers of the great ball of Wednesday night made practically no attempt to beautify the hall. The funds derived were to be devoted to the relief of the suffering soldiers and sailors of the late Spanish-American conflict, and that these funds might be as large as possible, the managers of the ball made no expenditures beyond those necessary to assure the social and financial success of their undertaking. Wednesday night, however, this consideration was no longer present. It was Chicago's tribute to the president, the members of his cabinet, the commanders of the victorious armies that invaded Cuba and Porto Rico, to other distinguished officers of the army and navy, and to other guests of note who had come to witness the celebration of the coming return of peace.

Murdered and His Body Burned.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., Oct. 22.—A coroner's inquest was held over the charred remains of C. Roach, the aged tailor who perished in the flames of his burning dwelling near Trenton. Everything brought to light confirms the theory that he was murdered and his body cast into the fire to conceal the crime. The skull of the corpse was crushed in, and clothes he was working on were scattered around the house. The people of Trenton are greatly excited and are raising funds to employ detectives to investigate the matter.

GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

The Fashoda Incident Not Closed and Both Countries Seem to Be Preparing for a Conflict.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Maj. Marchand has been heard from. His report, upon which much depends, reached Cairo Thursday and has been forwarded to Paris by telegraph in cipher, and the work of deciphering began Friday morning. It is asserted that the report makes no mention of the visit of Gen. Kitchener to Fashoda.

It gives, it is said, only an account of the march of the expedition, with mention of the places occupied, and an encounter with Dervishes.

It is believed in some quarters that Capt. Maratier is the bearer of a report which the French are not willing to trust upon British telegraph lines.

Not a man was lost by Marchand in his march.

The Radical says it is informed that Premier Brisson has no intention of resigning.

Preparations for war by France and England continue to agitate press and public. It was thought some days ago that the Fashoda incident was practically settled, and a semi-official announcement to that effect was promulgated. But a snag seems to have loomed up somewhere, and talk of war and preparation for such an event occupy public attention.

The French press is in no manner harsh in its comment. Their underlying tone indicates a belief that the negotiations will reach an amicable conclusion.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—A remarkable change has come over French opinion on the Fashoda question during the last 48 hours. The attitude of the public is more inflamed and more defiant. This is partly due to the tone of the British press, but more to the threatening speech of the British chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks Beach, which the Autorite calls "A provocation that is almost a threat of war."

The municipal council of Paris is accused on all sides of exhorting the government to avert war. In government circles the disposition seems to be to resist the British demands.

It is reported that the policy of France, as definitely stated to Great Britain, includes the retention of Fashoda. Rumors that the foreign minister, Count Muravieff, has assured M. Del Cassee, the French foreign minister, of Russia's support in the controversy, tend to stiffen the backs of the higher officials, although these continue to maintain a conciliatory tone and declare that France is prepared to carry amiability to the utmost limits consistent with her rights and dignity.

WITHOUT RESULTS AS YET.

After Seven Joint Sessions of the Peace Commission, Covering a Period of Two Weeks, Nothing Done.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The joint session Friday lasted from 2 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. During this time the commissioners discussed the second series of written arguments put forward by the Spaniards for the purpose of prevailing upon the American commissioners to assume the Cuban debt. No definite conclusion was reached, and the commissioners adjourned until Monday, when the Cuban question will again be discussed. It is probable that this feature of the negotiations will be disposed of next week.

Thus far there have been seven joint sessions, four of which have been devoted to the discussion of the first article of the protocol. In this manner two weeks have passed and no result has been reached. The American commissioners have listened to all the arguments of the Spaniards, but they have not changed the position which they first assumed, in refusing to talk over the Cuban debt.

Mine on Fire at Virden.

VIRDEN, Ill., Oct. 22.—A serious fire is raging in the shaft of the Chicago-Virden Coal Co. It was discovered early Friday morning, and is burning fiercely. The guards and the few Negro miners in the stockade are fighting the fire desperately, but are not sufficient in number to cope with it successfully. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed to have been accidental. No casualties have so far been reported.

Gen. Wheeler's Orders.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Oct. 22.—Gen. Wheeler has issued an order directing Brig. Gen. R. H. Hall to organize the first division of the 4th army corps and await the arrival of Maj. Gen. A. R. Chaffee. The senior officer of the 2d, 6th and 10th cavalry has been directed to organize and command a new cavalry brigade of those regiments until a permanent officer can be assigned. Maj. W. N. McCammon, the new adjutant general, has arrived.

Her parents objected to him and locked the girl up, but she kicked the door down and with her lover drove to this city. Trissell hails from Dixon, Ill.

HER FATAL TRIP.

Seven Men Killed in an Accident on the Torpedo Boat Davis.

The Davis Was One of the Two Torpedo Boats Built by Wolff & Zwicker, of Portland, and Was Soon to Have Gone Into Commission.

ASTORIA, Ore., Oct. 21.—The torpedo boat Davis, which started on its official trial trip Thursday, was disabled by the bursting of a number of boiler tubes. Eight of the crew were badly scalded and three of them died soon after reaching here.

Late Thursday night four of the injured men died, making the total dead seven.

Luithlie, one of the dead, was a coal passer and Woods is superintendent of the boiler room. The others were firemen.

The accident occured in the Columbia river about 20 miles above this city. The nature of the explosion has not yet been made known as an examination of the boilers will be required to determine exactly what portion of the boilers burst.

The best theory obtainable is that some of the tubes in the forward boiler exploded owing to a derangement of the automatic water gauge which permitted the water to get too low. Excepting for the havoc naturally wrought in the boiler room the boat is uninjured.

One of the men on the Davis said: "It is impossible to tell whether the tubes in the boiler or a steam pipe burst. All we know is that an explosion occurred. The boiler room was filled with boiling water and steam and the men in the room were scalded to death."

The Davis was towed here by a river steamer. The Davis carried 41 men all told. She was one of two torpedo boats recently built by Wolff and Zwicker at Portland, and was soon to have gone into commission. At the time of the accident the boat was in charge of the official trial board. The officers declined to make any statement as to the cause of the accident.

BAD TYPHOONS AND FLOODS.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 21.—Disastrous typhoons and storms and floods have caused a fearful loss of life and property in the Orient. In the district watered by the River Feug in Japan hundreds of villages have been swept away and 2,000 people have been drowned. Another report says 250 towns are under water. Thousands of refugees are flocking to the cities. The Ishikari river has also overflowed, drowning over 1,000 people. Seven prefectures were destroyed. In a terrible typhoon off Formosa, happening the same time as the floods, great damage to shipping was done.

At Temauia eight junks were wrecked and a hundred lives lost. The junks were driven to sea and lost. The steamer Rensi Maru was piled up on shore. Among the ships wrecked was the American bark Comel. The ship was abandoned and the crew saved. The steamer Cowrie is partially wrecked. The French steamer Hoihow is wrecked on the beach near Amry. The German steamer Trinidad, formerly of the Cunard line, was a bandoned in the open sea. Homeward bound passengers state they passed through 20 miles of abandoned wrecks, chiefly Chinese junks. The loss of life must have been enormous.

Police Force Reinstated.

PANA, Ill., Oct. 21.—The city council Thursday night, by a vote of 7 to 2, reinstated the old police force whom Mayor Warren Penwell, son of Operator George V. Penwell, removed from office October 11, on account of their alleged sympathy with union miners.

FIVE PEOPLE SUFFOCATED.

Fire in a California Hotel Destroys Life—The Other Inmates of the Building Make Their Escape.

SUSANVILLE, Cal., Oct. 23.—News just received here from Clairville, a new town in Pumas county, California, reports the burning of a hotel, and the loss of five lives.

Dead—P. Pedrina, Carson Barney, Mrs. Cornado, Florence Roberts, seven years old, and a woman whose name has not yet been ascertained.

The fire broke out at 4 o'clock Friday morning in Chat Roberts' hotel. Mr. Roberts awoke in time to escape by jumping from the second-story window, in doing which he sustained severe injuries.

The other occupants of the building, with the exception of those above named, escaped unhurt, but lost everything but the clothes they wore. The five unfortunate people were suffocated while they slept. The origin of the fire has not been determined, but is supposed to have been caused by a defective chimney. The property loss is not great.

DEATH OF JULIUS DEXTER.

The Prominent Cincinnati Business Man Carried Off by Heart Disease—Died Suddenly at a Friend's Home.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 22.—Julius Dexter died suddenly of heart disease at 8:45 o'clock Friday night.

Mr. Dexter passed away at the home of his friend, Mr. E. W. Kittredge, Gholson and Wallace avennes, Avondale, with whom he dined Friday evening and where his nieces, the Misses Alice and Mary Dexter, of 3734 Hackberry street, Walnut Hills, arrived after he had breathed his last, although they were summoned as soon as it was kuown that their uncle's condition was serious.

Responding to an invitation to dine, Mr. Dexter went to the home of his friend early in the evening. On his way there he was taken ill, but he thought it only a passing indisposition that would leave him as suddenly as it came. As the evening deepened his conditioned became serious, and taking alarm, his host summoned Dr. Edwin Mitchell, of Reading road. Dr. Mitchell arrived at 7:45 o'clock, and his untiring efforts only served to prolong life for an hour.

The public life of Julius Dexter was absolutely without spot or stain; his bitterest enemies—and enemies he had, as all men have who are positive in their integrity—never imputed to him any but the one motive which should actuate the public servant.

Mr. Dexter served one term in the state senate and was conuected with almost every public enterprise in this city, and at one time was president of the C., H. & D. railroad; was also a trustee of the Cincinnati Southern road.

The Insurgents are Angry.

MANILA, Oct. 22.—Chinese native thieves are legion in number hereabouts. Officers of the American army and civilians are frequently robbed. Adm. Dewey has seized all of the steamers of Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader. The natives are very indignant. Their attitude is threatening.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

MANILA QUIET.

Gen. Otis Cables to the War Department the Situation in Luzon.

They Believe the Islands Will Be Returned to Spain—There is Little Danger of Trouble Between the Natives and Americans—Situation Peaceful.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The war department Thursday posted the following bulletin:

Under date of yesterday Gen. Otis cabled the war department the "situation in Luzon somewhat improved. Influence of Philippinos of education and property not desiring independent government, but hostile. Spain gaining ascendancy in revolutionary councils. Promising nothing, but enforcing the law. Complications seriously affect inter-island commerce and diminish revenue.

Affairs are progressing favorably, though sick report is increasing, owing mostly to carelessness of enlisted men. Health of officers good. Condition of cities and facilities for quarteriug troops improving. Fever decreasing. Intestinal troubles about the same. Many slight ailments; smallpox apparently arrested. During the month 28 deaths, 8 smallpox, 8 typhoid fever, 5 malarial and intestinal complaints, 3 accidental.

Gen. Otis cabled considerable more than the above, but the department does not deem it advisable to make the other portions of the dispatch public, because of its bearing upon the peace negotiations. It contains suggestions by Gen. Otis regarding the disposition of the Philippines, and also information about the insurgents.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Maj. Gen. Otis has cabled to the war department a review of the situation in the Philippines, showing that Aguinaldo's influence is on the wane. Gen. Otis stated that Aguinaldo's forces are being rapidly depleted. Many of the deserters are joining the Spanish party, apparently because of the belief in the possibility that the islands may be returned to Spain. The situation is peaceful and there is little danger of trouble between the natives and Americans, and Gen. Otis expressed confidence in his ability to fully cope with any developments.

Secretary Alger sent a copy of the dispatch to the state department, and it is expected that it will be cabled to the American commissioners in Paris. Adjt. Gen. Simpkins, who has just returned to Washington, brought with him from Manila all of the correspondence which has passed between Rr. Adm. Dewey and Maj. Gen. Merritt and Aguinaldo.

This correspondence shows conclusively that the American officers entered into no alliance, implied or direct, with Aguinaldo, and that the hands of this government are tied in no way as a result of the co-operation of the insurgents. Some of the more important passages of the correspondence have been cabled to Paris, and complete copies were forwarded to the commissioners by mail Thursday.

Aguinaldo has ordered the release of Spanish civilian prisoners taken at Iloilo. Steamers under the American flag are forbidden to load by the native authorities unless they pay a tax of five per cent. ad valorem on the cargo and 20 per cent on their freight to the local governor. A large stock of tobacco was seized at Cagayan from the Compania Generale and from insurance factories. Aguinaldo refused to return the prize, as he requires funds. He is preparing for the possible return of the islands to Spanish rule, and will entertain no proposals from Spain. Every native is sworn in to join his ranks in such an event. Of the Southern islands, Mindanao would combine against Spain.

AMERICAN ARMY IN MANILA.

In a Private Letter an Officer Gives Some Features of Their Condition—About Six Hundred in the Hospitals.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—A private letter has been received from an officer in Manila by another officer in the war department giving some features of the condition of the army in Manila. It was written some time ago, when there were 17,000 troops in Manila. At that time there were about 600 sick in hospital. The climate makes exertion very difficult and everything slow. The troops are scattered about the city in companies, and hold all the streets to keep ont the insurgents.

"This is a beautiful country," he said, "and never should be returned to Spain—brutal, old medieval country—who has butchered these docile people wholesale for ages."

Since the rain ceased warm weather has been very oppressive and sickness has increased. Typhoid, dysentery and malaria have prevailed, but not more so than one should expect in the tropics. The letter says that Gen. Otis works too hard, and looks into every detail of the army under his command.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1898. NO. 2.

Go to the polls next Tuesday and vote.

THE next holiday on the calendar is Thanksgiving.

IT is reported that Great Britian will declare a protectorate over Egypt.

JESSE JAMES, JR., will be tried at Kansas City, Mo., on a charge of train robbery.

THERE have been six hundred claims for pensions filed to date as a result of the war with Spain.

SPAIN could not convince this country that there was any justice in its assuming the Cuban debt that was not a Cuban debt.

DEMOCRATS remember that a Congressman is to be elected next Tuesday. Turnout and give Col. Berry a big vote. Your Republican neighbors will all be on hand.

AT the last Congressional election Boone gave Berry 2,265 votes, and she can repeat that performance next Tuesday if the Democrats will turnout and vote. That would be a magnificent vote in an off year.

THE first number of the Youth's Friend, professor A. C. Collins, editor, appeared last week. It is printed by the Globe Printing Co., at Erlanger, and is a neat, spicy little sheet of four pages, two columns to the page.

EDITOR KNOTT, of the Louisville Evening Post, was indicted last week, being charged with libel. He is accused of printing a slanderous article concerning street construction, the Board of Public Works and Mayor Weaver.

The New York Democrats are quite sanguine that they will elect their candidate for Governor, next Tuesday, and the Republicans claim their is no doubt of Roosevelt's election. Each party is doing its best work to achieve a victory.

WITH the same local question to be voted on in this county next Tuesday, as will that day be submitted to the voters of Grant, Carroll and Trimble counties, Boone would poll 4,000 votes. A tax question is a success as a bush shaker.

THIRTY-SEVEN Governors will be elected next Tuesday, besides numerous legislatures and the lower House of the national Congress. With an army of as many volunteers as there have been candidates in this country for the last few months this country could whip the world.

THE last issue of the Warsaw Independent contains a picture of Mr. Donaldson. the Republican candidate for Congress in this district. The picture shows Mr. Donaldson to be a man of pleasing countenance, and a person of great firmness, just such a person as makes a success of business affairs.

THE Cuban insurgents are not satisfied with the slowness with which the Spanish forces are leaving the island. They are growing impatient for the stable government which the United States set out to assist them to establish, and which they think it is time should be showing some signs of approach.

GRANT and Carroll counties will poll a large vote next Tuesday, as in these counties there is considerable interest manifested in the free turnpike proposition on which they both vote that day. There is nothing of that kind to bring out the vote in this county, and the indications are that a light vote will be polled in the race for Congressman. Boone ought to roll up her usual majority, and show the remainder of the district what she can do without any hurrah for weeks previous to an election.

OVER 118,137 tons of brimstone were imported into the United States from Sicily last year. It is shipped in bulk like coal and looks in its raw condition, like pieces of broken stone about the size of those which are used on macadam roads. It is a dull gray, and from that a bright yellow, according to its quality; the higher the grade, the yellower the stone. It is handled by large importers in its crude form only, and these dispose of it to the manufacturers, by whom it is subjected to processes which eliminate the dross and bring to the surface its valuable properties. It is used by the manufacturers of fertilizer materials and sulphuric acid, and large quantities are consumed by the manufacturers of wood pulp and paper.

ELDER ROBERT EDWARDS KIRTLEY.

Born, February 7th, 1820; Died, August 31st, 1898.

This veteran of the cross received his discharge from this war on August 31st, 1898, and entered into that "rest that remains to the people of God." His last illness extended through some eighteen months, and several of those preceding his departure were marked by great suffering, but he bore it most patiently and "endured as seeing Him who is invisible." The end was peaceful and triumphant.

Bro. Kirtley was born of religious parents on February 7th, 1820, in Boone county, Ky. In early youth he acquired a fair English education, with some knowledge of Latin, at a good country academy, conducted by competent teachers. To this he added a year of close application and painstaking study at Hanover College, Indiana, where he made especial proficiency in mathematics, in which was evinced the analytical turn of mind, which was so marked a feature of his future studies and teaching of the Bible. His mind was keenly analytical, he loved truth, and it was his delight to explore profound and abstruse subjects.

He was converted in October, 1839, and was baptized by his father, Elder Robert Kirtley, into the fellowship of Bullittsburg church, Boone county, Kentucky, the first Lord's day in November, 1839. His Christian life at once became marked by a great change in his spirit, modes of thought and habit of life. He accepted from the beginning the governing thought that he was the Lord's, that he owed supreme allegiance to Him, and henceforth coveted, as his highest aim, to be an humble, obedient and faithful servant of the Lord, in whatever sphere of life and labor he might be called.

For a few years he was usefully employed as an active private member of several churches. Having married in 1849, he moved to St. Mary's, Illinois, and not long after he moved to Missouri, where he united in the organization of the Union church, near his residence, and in this church he was ordained to the full work of the Gospel ministry in 1863. The presbytery was composed of Elders A. P. Williams, Luther and Bell. He exercised his ministerial gifts most acceptably for a short time in Saline Association. He returned to Kentucky in 1864, and took up the work in North Bend Association, preaching at Middle Creek, East Bend and Sand Run churches, having served the latter as long as he was able to preach, which was about a year and a half before his departure. "Uncle Robert," as he was familiarly called, was truly a great man in heart, in thought, in life, and in the hearts and lives of his brethren. He was a wise counsellor, a loving friend and a willing helper. He was a grand man; grand in stature, grand in his noble Christian character, grand in his influence with his brethren. He will be greatly missed by the North Bend Association.

Elders J. S. Kirtley, C. G. Jones, T. L. Utz, M. J. Hoover, O. M. Huey and B. F. Swindler acted as pall-bearers and made remarks at the Memorial Service September 2nd, at Bullittsburg church. Bro. James A. Kirtley, his brother, closed with some recital of facts concerning his conversion and early life as a minister. As he was concluding, he said: "I stood here by the remains of my father (Elder Robert Kirtley); I stood here by the remains of my son (Elder Eusebius Kirtley); now I stand by the remains of my brother; and I say, I am grateful to God for such a father, and for such a son, and for such a brother." These words were happily appropriate and becoming. They came from a full heart in recognition of the goodness of God.

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ:
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

THE better the Goebel election law is understood the more friends it finds among those who have heretofore opposed it. The claim that it puts the political machinery into the hands of a few men, from whose edict there is no appeal, is erroneous. The law is an amendatory act, and the general election law, with all its penalties denounced against the violations of its provisions, remains in force, and a defeated candidate's right to appeal from what he considers a wrong committed against him is retained, and his resort to the courts for redress is pursued in the same manner as previous to the existence of the Goebel law. Some are trying to make the impression that the Goebel law divorces courts of justice and elections entirely, which is not true, and on this ground they seek to educate popular opinion against it. The law is entitled to a fair trial and if it proves to be a bad law its repeal will soon follow, but if on the other hand it proves a safe guard against the abuses at which it is aimed its repeal will never be attempted. The opposition to the law has adduced no arguments in opposition to it, its entire tirade being abuse of "Bill" Goebel, much of which is prompted by political jealousy.

A REPORT comes from Washington that Presidential edict removing a large number of Government offices from the civil service probably will be promulgated shortly before Thanksgiving Day. The order is one which has been in contemplation many months, having been deferred from time to time, owing to pressure of war and business. As at present determined upon, the order will affect upwards of six thousand places. It will include Deputy Collectors of Internal Revenue who are authorized to become acting collectors, actually serving in that capacity. There are about 2,000 of these deputies. The class affected is the corps of examining surgeons of the Pension Bureau, of whom there are in all over 4,100.

The annual reunion of the Fourth Kentucky Confederate Cavalry, which took place in Owenton last Thursday, was a decided success. A kind Providence sandwiched a lovely autumn day in a week of rain and chilly weather, for the benefit of the old soldiers so it seemed. There were less than 200 in the parade, but the ex-Confederates in attendence probably numbered 300. Only 98 members of the gallant old Fourth Kentucky registered, but the attendance must have been something like 150, or one-half of the soldiers present.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Heaven Improves in Grandeur as the Ages Pass By.

The Departed Do Not Go Into a Region of Dullness, But Into a Stirring, Picturesque, Radiant Scene—Things Seen From a Novel Standpoint.

All out of the usual line of sermonizing is this story of Dr. Talmage concerning the next world, and it may do good to see things from a novel standpoint. The text is Revelation xxi, 1: "And I saw a new Heaven."

The stereotyped heaven does not make adequate impression upon us. We need the old story told in new style in order to arouse our appreciation. I do not suppose that we are compelled to the old phraseology. King James' translators did not exhaust all the good and graphic words in the English dictionary. I suppose if we should take the idea of Heaven, and translate it into modern phrase, we would find that its atmosphere is a combination of the early June and of the Indian summer in October—a place combining the advantages of city and country, the streets standing for the one, and the twelve manner of fruits for the other; a place of musical entertainments—harpers, pipers, trumpeters, doxologies; a place of wonderful architecture—behold the temples! a place where there may be the higher forms of animal life—the beasts which were on earth beaten, lash-whipped and galled and unblanketed, and worked to death, turned out among the white horses which the Book of Revelation describes as being in Heaven; a place of stupendous literature—the books open; a place of aristocratic and democratic attractiveness—the kings standing for the one, all nations for the other; all botanical, pomological, ornithological, arboreseent, worshipful beauty and grandeur.

But my idea now is to speak chiefly of the improved Heaven. People sometimes talk of Heaven as though it were an old city, finished centuries ago, when I have to tell you that no city on earth during the last 50 years has had such changes as Heaven. It is not the same place as when Job, and David, and Paul wrote of it. For hundreds and hundreds of years it has been going through peaceful revolution, and year by year, and month by month, and hour by hour, and moment by moment it is changing, and changing for something better.

Away back there was only one residence in the universe—the residence of the Almighty. Heaven had not yet been started. Immensity was the park all around about this great residence; but God's sympathetic heart after a while overflowed in other creations, and there came, all through this vast country of immensity, inhabited villages, which grew and enlarged until they joined each other, and became one great central metropolis of the universe, streeted, gated, templed, watered, inhabited. One angel went forth with a reed, we are told, and he measured Heaven on one side, and then he went forth and measured Heaven on the other side, and then St. John tried to take the census of that city, and he became so bewildered that he gave it up.

That brings me to the first thought of my theme—that Heaven is vastly improved in numbers. Nothing little under this head about the multitude of adults who have gone into glory during the last hundred, or five hundred, or thousand years, I remember there are 1,600,000,000 people in the world, and that the vast majority of people die in infancy. How many children must have gone into Heaven during the last five hundred or thousand years! If New York could gather in one generation 1,000,000 population, if London should gather in one generation 4,000,000 population, what a vast increase! But what a mere nothing as compared with the 508,000,000, the 2,000,000,000. The "multitude that no man can number," that have gone into that city!

Of course, all this takes for granted that every child that dies goes as straight into Heaven as ever the light sped from a star; and that is one reason why Heaven will always be fresh and beautiful—the great multitude of children in it. Put 500,000,000 children in a country, it will be a blessed and lively country.

But add to this, if you will, the great multitude of adults who have gone into glory, and how the census of Heaven must run up! Many years ago a clergyman stood in a New England pulpit and said that he believed that the vast majority of the race would finally be destroyed, and that not more than one person out of two thousand persons would be finally saved.

There happened to be about 2,000 people in the village where he preached. Next Sabbath two persons were heard discussing the subject and wondering which one of the 2,000 people in the village would finally reach Heaven, and one thought it would be the minister, and the other thought it would be the deacon. Now, I have not much admiration for a life boat which will go out to a ship sinking with 2,000 passengers and get one off in safety and let 1,999 go to the bottom. Why, Heaven must have been a village when Abel, the first soul from earth, entered it, as compared with the present population of that great city!

Again, I remark that Heaven is vastly improved in knowledge. Give a man 40 or 50 years to study one science, or all sciences, with all the advantages of laboratories and observatories and philosophic apparatus, he will be a marvel of information. Now, into what intelligence must Heaven mount, angelhood and sainthood, not after studying for 40 or 50 years, but for thousands of years studying God and the soul and immortality and the universe. Now the intelligence of that world must keep on and on, with eyesight farther reaching than telescope, with power of calculation mightier than all human mathematics, with powers of analysis surpassing the chemical laboratory, with speed swifter than telegraphy! What must Heaven learn, with all these advantages, in a month, in a year, in a century, in a millenium? The difference between the highest university on earth and the smallest class in a primary school can not be a greater difference than Heaven as it now is and Heaven as it once was. Do you not suppose that when Dr. James Simpson went up from the hospitals in Edinburgh into Heaven he knew more than ever the science of health; and that Joseph Henry, gradnating from the Smithsonian institution into Heaven, awoke into other realms of philosophy; and that Sir William Hamilton, lifted to loftier sphere, understood better the construction of the human intellect; and that John Milton took a higher poetry in the actual presence of things that on earth he had tried to describe? When the first saints entered Heaven they must have studied only the A B C of the full literature of wisdom with much they are now acquainted.

Again, Heaven is vastly improved in its society. During your memory how many exquisite spirits have gone into it! If you should try to make a list of all the genial, gracious, blessed souls that you have known, it would be a very long list—souls that have gone into glory. Now do you not suppose that they have entered society? Have they not improved then? You tell of what Heaven did for you. Have they done nothing for Heaven? Of all the gracious souls that have gone on to your companionship, and add to them all the gracious and beautiful souls that for 500 or 1,000 years have gone out to all the cities and all the villages and all the countries of this earth into glory, and of the society of Heaven and earth must have been improved! Suppose Paul, the apostle, were introduced into your social circle on earth; but Heaven has added all the apostles. Suppose Hannah Moore Charlotte Elizabeth were introduced into your social circle on earth; but Heaven has taken all the blessed and the gracious and the holy women of the past ages. Suppose that Robert McCheyne and John Summerfield should be added to your social circle; but Heaven has gathered up all the faithful and earnest ministry of the past. There is not a town or a city or a village that has not improved in society in the last 100 years and Heaven has improved.

I speak now of attractions outside of Heaven, and I have to tell you that no place on earth has improved in society as Heaven has within the last 70 years; for the most of you within 40 years, within 20 years, within five years within one year, in other words, by the accession from your own household. If Heaven were placed in groups—an apostolic group, a patriarchal group, a prophetic group, group of martyrs, group of angels, and then a group of your own glorified kindred—which group would you choose?

You might look around and make comparison, but it would not take you long to choose. You would say, "Give me back those whom I loved on earth; let me enter into their society—my parents, my children, my brothers, my sisters. We lived together on earth, let us live together in Heaven." Oh, is it not a blessed thought that Heaven has been improved by its society—that its colonization from earth to Heaven?

Again: I remark that Heaven has greatly improved in the good cheer of announced victories. Where Heaven rejoiced over one soul it now reiolces over a hundred or a thousand. In the olden times, when the events of human life were scattered over four or five centuries of longevity, and the world moved slowly, there were not so many stirring events to be reported in Heaven; but now, I suppose, all the great events of earth are reported in Heaven. If there is any truth plainly taught in this Bible it is that Heaven is wrapped up in sympathy with human history, and we look at those inventions of the day—at telegraphy, at swift communication by steam, at all these modern improvements which seem to give one almost omnipresence—and we see only the secular relation, but spirits before the throne look out and see the vast and the eternal relation. While nations rise and fall, while the earth is shaking with revolution, do you not suppose there is arousing intelligence going up to the throne of God, and that the question is often asked before the throne, "What is the news from that world—that world that rebelled, but is coming back to its allegiance?" If ministering spirits, according to the Bible, are sent forth to minister to those that shall be heirs of Heaven, when they come down to us to bless us, do they not take the news back? Do the ships of light that come out of the celestial harbor into the earthly harbor laden with cargoes of blessing go back unfreighted? Ministering spirits not only, but our loved ones leaving us, take up the tidings. Suppose you were in a far city, and had been there a good while, and you heard that some one had arrived from your native place—some one who had recently seen your family and friends—you would rush up to that man and you would ask all about the old folks at home. And do you suppose when your child went up to God, your glorified kindred in Heaven gathered around and asked about you, to ascertain whether you were getting along well in the struggle of life; to find out whether you were in any especial peril, that with swift and mighty wing they might come down to intercept your perils? Oh, yes! Heaven is a great place for news than it used to be—news sounded through the streets, news ringing from the towers, news heralded from the palace gate. Glad news! Victorious news!

But the vivacity and sprightliness of Heaven will be beyond all conception when the final victories come in, when the church shall be triumphant everywhere. Oh, what a day in Heaven it will be when the last throne of earthly oppression has fallen, when the last chain of serfdom is broken, when the last wound of earthy pain is healed, when the last sinner is pardoned, when the last nation is redeemed! What a time there will be in Heaven! You and I will be in the procession; you and I will thrum a string in that great orchestra. That will be the greatest day in Heaven since the day when the first blood of jasper was put down for the foundation, and the first hinged pearl swung. If there is a difference between Heaven now and Heaven as it was, oh, the difference between Heaven as it shall be and Heaven as it is now! Not a splendor stuck fast, but rolling on and rolling on, and rolling up and rolling up forever, forever.

Now I say these things about the changes in Heaven, about the new improvements in Heaven, for three stout reasons. First, because I find that some of you are impatient to be gone. You are tired of this world, and you want to get into the good land about which you have been thinking, praying and talking so many years. Now be patient. I could see why you would want to go to an art gallery if some of the best pictures were to be taken away this week or next week; but if some one tells you that there are other beautiful pictures to come—other Kensetts, Raphaels and Rubens; other masterpieces to be added to the gallery—you would say: "I can afford to wait. The place is improving all the time."

Now, I want you to apply the same principle in this matter of reaching Heaven and leaving this world. Not one glory is to be subtracted, but many glories added. Not one angel will be missing, but many hitherto gone, not one of your glorified friends gone. By the long practicing the music will be better, the procession will be longer, the rainbow brighter, the coronation grander. Heaven, with magnificent addenda! Why will you complain when you are only waiting for something better.

Another reason why I speak in regard to the changes in Heaven, and the new improvements in Heaven, is because I think it will be a consolation to busy and enterprising good people. I see very well that you have not much taste for a Heaven that was all done and finished centuries ago. After you have been active 40 or 50 or 60 years it would be a shock to stop you suddenly and forever; but here is a progressive Heaven, an ever accumulative Heaven, vast enterprise on foot there before the throne of God. Aggressive knowledge, aggressive grandeur. You will not have to come and sit down on the banks of the river of life in everlasting inoccupation. O busy men, I tell you of a Heaven where there is something to do!

I speak these words on the changes in Heaven and the new improvements in Heaven; also, because I want to cure some of you of the delusion that your departed Christian friends have gone into dullness and silence and unconsciousness. They are in a stirring, picturesque, radiant, ever-accumulative scene. When they left their bodies they only got rid of the last hindrance. They are no more in Oakwood, Laurel Hill or Mount Auburn than you, in holiday attire, having seated yourself at a banquet, can be said to be in a dark closet, where you have left the old apparel that was not fit to wear at the banquet. A soldier can not see a sword until he has unsheathed it; and not a blessed thought that Heaven has been improved by its society—has colonization from earth to Heaven?

Again: I remark that Heaven has greatly improved in the good cheer of announced victories. Where Heaven rejoiced over one soul it now reiolces over a hundred or a thousand. In the olden times, when the events of human life were scattered over four or five centuries of longevity, and the world moved slowly, there were not so many stirring events to be reported in Heaven; but now, I suppose, all the great events of earth are reported in Heaven. Do the ships of light that come out of the celestial harbor into the earthly harbor laden with cargoes of blessing go back unfreighted? Ministering spirits not only, but our loved ones leaving us, take up the tidings. Suppose you were in a far city, and had been there a good while, and you heard that some one had arrived from your native place—some one who had recently seen your family and friends—you would rush up to that man and you would ask all about the old folks at home. And do you suppose when your child went up to God, your glorified kindred in Heaven gathered around and asked about you, to ascertain whether you were getting along well in the struggle of life; to find out whether you were in any especial peril, that with swift and mighty wing they might come down to intercept your perils? Oh, yes! Heaven is a great place for news than it used to be—news sounded through the streets, news ringing from the towers, news heralded from the palace gate. Glad news! Victorious news!

But the vivacity and sprightliness of Heaven will be beyond all conception when the final victories come in, when the church shall be triumphant everywhere. Oh, what a day in Heaven it will be when the last throne of earthly oppression has fallen, when the last chain of serfdom is broken, when the last wound of earthy pain is healed, when the last sinner is pardoned, when the last nation is redeemed! What a time there will be in Heaven! You and I will be in the procession; you and I will thrum a string in that great orchestra. That will be the greatest day in Heaven since the day when the first blood of jasper was put down for the foundation, and the first hinged pearl swung. If there is a difference between Heaven now and Heaven as it was, oh, the difference between Heaven as it shall be and Heaven as it is now! Not a splendor stuck fast, but rolling on and rolling on, and rolling up and rolling up forever, forever.

Now I say these things about the changes in Heaven, about the new improvements in Heaven, for three stout reasons. First, because I find that some of you are impatient to be gone. You are tired of this world, and you want to get into the good land about which you have been thinking, praying and talking so many years. Now be patient. I could see why you would want to go to an art gallery if some of the best pictures were to be taken away this week or next week; but if some one tells you that there are other beautiful pictures to come—other Kensetts, Raphaels and Rubens; other masterpieces to be added to the gallery—you would say: "I can afford to wait. The place is improving all the time."

Now, I want you to apply the same principle in this matter of reaching Heaven and leaving this world. Not one glory is to be subtracted, but many glories added. Not one angel will be missing, but many hitherto gone, not one of your glorified friends gone. By the long practicing the music will be better, the procession will be longer, the rainbow brighter, the coronation grander. Heaven, with magnificent addenda! Why will you complain when you are only waiting for something better.

Another reason why I speak in regard to the changes in Heaven, and the new improvements in Heaven, is because I think it will be a consolation to busy and enterprising good people. I see very well that you have not much taste for a Heaven that was all done and finished centuries ago. After you have been active 40 or 50 or 60 years it would be a shock to stop you suddenly and forever; but here is a progressive Heaven, an ever accumulative Heaven, vast enterprise on foot there before the throne of God. Aggressive knowledge, aggressive grandeur. You will not have to come and sit down on the banks of the river of life in everlasting inoccupation. O busy men, I tell you of a Heaven where there is something to do!

I speak these words on the changes in Heaven and the new improvements in Heaven; also, because I want to cure some of you of the delusion that your departed Christian friends have gone into dullness and silence and unconsciousness. They are in a stirring, picturesque, radiant, ever-accumulative scene. When they left their bodies they only got rid of the last hindrance. They are no more in Oakwood, Laurel Hill or Mount Auburn than you, in holiday attire, having seated yourself at a banquet, can be said to be in a dark closet, where you have left the old apparel that was not fit to wear at the banquet. A soldier can not see a sword until he has unsheathed it; and not a blessed thought that Heaven has been improved by its society—has colonization from earth to Heaven?

Again: I remark that Heaven has greatly improved in the good cheer of announced victories. Where Heaven rejoiced over one soul it now reiolces over a hundred or a thousand. In the olden times, when the events of human life were scattered over four or five centuries of longevity, and the world moved slowly, there were not so many stirring events to be reported in Heaven; but now, I suppose, all the great events of earth are reported in Heaven. If there is any truth plainly taught in this Bible it is that Heaven is wrapped up in sympathy with human history, and we look at those inventions of the day—at telegraphy, at swift communication by steam, at all these modern improvements which seem to give one almost omnipresence—and we see only the secular relation, but spirits before the throne look out and see the vast and the eternal relation. While nations rise and fall, while the earth is shaking with revolution, do you not suppose there is arousing intelligence going up to the throne of God, and that the question is often asked before the throne, "What is the news from that world—that world that rebelled, but is coming back to its allegiance?" If ministering spirits, according to the Bible, are sent forth to minister to those that shall be heirs of Heaven, when they come down to us to bless us, do they not take the news back? Do the ships of light that come out of the celestial harbor into the earthly harbor laden with cargoes of blessing go back unfreighted? Ministering spirits not only, but our loved ones leaving us, take up the tidings. Suppose you were in a far city, and had been there a good while, and you heard that some one had arrived from your native place—some one who had recently seen your family and friends—you would rush up to that man and you would ask all about the old folks at home. And do you suppose when your child went up to God, your glorified kindred in Heaven gathered around and asked about you, to ascertain whether you were getting along well in the struggle of life; to find out whether you were in any especial peril, that with swift and mighty wing they might come down to intercept your perils? Oh, yes! Heaven is a great place for news than it used to be—news sounded through the streets, news ringing from the towers, news heralded from the palace gate. Glad news! Victorious news!

But the vivacity and sprightliness of Heaven will be beyond all conception when the final victories come in, when the church shall be triumphant everywhere. Oh, what a day in Heaven it will be when the last throne of earthly oppression has fallen, when the last chain of serfdom is broken, when the last wound of earthy pain is healed,

PRESIDENT A PARTISAN.

The Real Significance of McKinley's Western Tour Is Now Apparent.

President McKinley's course in taking the stump for the republican party in several western states will not result in the advantage to his party which he hoped.

It is no overstatement to say that his western tour has been in every sense of the phrase an electioneering device. He has not been content with that advantage which always results to a party by the exhibition to the voters of a president of its political faith. He has not, like some of his predecessors, confined himself in his public utterances to graceful speeches incapable of partisan construction. Instead he has made addresses which have been frankly political, defending and eulogizing his administration on all points of political attack.

He has taken with him on his junket four cabinet officers, who, in their turn, have been quite as frankly partisan.

That which is more discreditable to the president than this, however, is that he should have taken advantage of his power to force Mr. Bryan's complete relinquishment of all political activity at the very time when this presidential stumping tour is in progress.

The friends of Mr. Bryan, the men who with him welded 6,500,000 voters into a solid phalanx two years ago, have been anxious for his leadership in this fall's campaigns. He is a soldier—a soldier, indeed, to whom McKinley denied any opportunity to win distinction, but still a soldier from whom not one word of complaint or criticism has come since he donned the uniform. That Nebraska should be carried by the democrats is of importance to Col. Bryan and the cause he represents.

Was it, then, the part of political decency, was it compatible with the loftiness of character which should attach to the incumbent of the presidential office, that the president should order Col. Bryan to his camp in Florida and straightway go to stump Nebraska against him?

President McKinley's obvious effort to keep Mr. Bryan out of the political field was indicative of a small and petty mind. His own invasion of the field which he closed to his adversary is a blot on the presidency.—N. Y. Journal.

SOWING OF THE SEEDS.

Where the Blame for Dissatisfaction in the Army Properly Belongs.

"Who," demanded President McKinley at Omaha the othe day—"who will embarrass the government by sowing seeds of dissatisfaction among the brave men who stand ready to serve and die, if need be, for their country?" Well, it must be confessed that Mr. McKinley's investigating committee are doing as little as possible to embarrass the government (meaning the man who appointed them), but even they occasionally stumble upon the real seeds of dissatisfaction and the man who sowed them. Gen. Graham for example, in his testimony yesterday, attributed the sickness in Camp Alger to the incompetence of the volunteer officers, and particularly to the civilians on brigade and regimental staffs. Some of these appointees, he said, in time learned something of their business, but too many were hopelessly "incapable and incorrigible." And the result was typhoid and death. Here was a large seed of dissatisfaction, and the head gardener in the white house, who made the unfit appointments, was thus really the man who, as he now says, was guilty of "intruding detraction" to "belittle the manly spirit of American youth." Even more explicit and embarrassing are the indignant remarks of Surgeon Major Seaman, just back from Ponce and Santiago. He bluntly says that 90 per cent. of the deaths from disease were murder—pure governmental neglect. Was the medical department at fault? No. Who then?

"There was no lack of supplies of all sorts. But through the imbecility, incompetency and idiocy of the men in the quartermaster's department the supplies were not taken care of or furnished to the men."

"Who were these men?"

"Sons of generals, rich men's sons, sons of politicians, and God knows what."

Who sowed this seed of dissatisfaction? Did not the president? Did he not do it in the teeth of protests from army experts, who predicted the very results we now see? These are the questions Mr. McKinley ought to be asking himself instead of addressing his plaintive queries to the public.—N. Y. Post.

Republican Music.

Inasmuch as this is a republican brass band year, the democrats must expect their friends, the enemy, to monopolize all the music. It is political capital this year for a republican committee to hire bands to stay away from democratic mass meetings. Fortunately, however, the democratic cause is a great attraction in itself. It needs no bands or wild west annexes to draw crowds and hold them. This is a democratic year and the only enthusiasm that is aroused anywhere finds its birth in the interest that is felt in the democratic cause. Let the g. o. p. have the bands and the wild wests! The votes are good enough for us.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——The importance of replacing the present republican majority in congress by a democratic one grows daily more apparent. It is absolutely essential to the future welfare of the party and the nation that democratic opinion should control in both branches of our great legislative body next year.—Tammany Times.

——The republican party, if overtaken by its record, is lost; and every day the canvass of 1898 proceeds that awful record is overhauling the republican runaway.—Albany Argus.

FACTS AND ERRORS.

The President Makes Some Statements Which Are Intended to Mislead.

President McKinley's visit to the west was not undertaken without expectation of political results. It has helped out the exchequer of the Omaha exposition. It has afforded an opportunity to thousands of his fellow-citizens of different shades of political opinion to attest their respect for the high and exalted office of president of the United States and to display their esteem for the personal character and private life of William McKinley.

It will hardly be claimed by Mr. McKinley himself that the purpose of his visit was entirely for recreation or for information. There was a considerable element of political motive in his trip.

His party managers informed him before he started concerning the doubtful outlook for republican success in the congressional elections. He was enlightened regarding the desperate straits of the party in a considerable number of the districts in the eastern states. The invitation to visit the Omaha fair coincided with the opportunity to help his party's fortunes by stirring up enthusiasm for republican nominees in a number of the congressional districts in states west of the Alleghanies. The lengthening of his itinerary and the number of car-platform speeches he made in traversing Illinois, Indiana and Iowa establish the correctness of this view.

While the president carefully avoided references to the issues between the two parties, he lost no occasion to extol the conduct of affairs during his incumbency and inferentially to ascribe to his party the conditions growing out of the war and the existing state of trade and finance.

It is questionable whether Mr. McKinley has not done more harm to his party's prospects than good. He has made statements of fact whose accuracy is challenged. He has uttered remarks of doubtful foundation.

For instance, he intimated in his Omaha speech that it was unpatriotic to try to disturb the glorious results of the war by carping criticism and faultfinding—evidently questioning the motives and wisdom of those who have denounced the criminal blunders of the war office and its understrappers.

In his Merchant's exchange speech here he said that the job was now hunting the man instead of the reverse condition that prevailed ere he took the helm. He omitted to elaborate this phrase by explaining how it is that in the number of places the job is offering the man wages which force him to leave it by going on a strike.

Mr. McKinley did not tell that the profits accruing to the corporations taken into partnership by the government when it put Dingleyism in the statutes had not been shared with the labor employed by these corporations as was promised by Mr. McKinley and his claquers in the campaign two years ago.

Another utterance of Mr. McKinley during his recent tour was: "For the first time in the country's history the government is floating a three per cent. loan, every dollar of which was sold at par. The bonds are at a premium of five cents on the dollar and all this profit has gone to the people." The force of these statements is reactionary when we remember the familiar charge made by republicans that the Cleveland bond sale was at par and to a syndicate that reaped a profit from the rise.

Mr. McKinley pursued the subject by saying: "The loan was a popular one and it has been a source of much satisfaction that the people with their surplus savings were able to buy the bonds." This allegation is at variance with the testimony the present secretary of the treasury recently offered in court at Washington. He said that "in the applications for these bonds were so many forged and fraudulent names that many entire lots were rejected;" and that he believed many of the applications to be "straw" subscriptions made in the interest of speculators. It is also at variance with the statement of the comptroller of the currency that already three-fourths of these popular bonds are owned by the leading national banks, which secured them apparently through numerous Geoey subscriptions for small amounts.

Sincerity and fairness would seem to demand that the president in future speeches should revise his recent remarks on the bond and tariff issues in accordance with the facts. But practical politics and the jeopardy of the republican party require that he shall continue to utter half-truths and propagate whole errors.—St. Louis Republic.

A Condition That Is Absolute.

A fall in the bullion price of silver absolutely necessitates one of two things—either silver prices must advance in silver countries, or gold prices are bound to decline in gold countries. This cannot be avoided. It is as absolute as the law of the Medes and Persians, and it is no more absolute today than it was in 1873 and has been each year from then until now, and will continue to be for all time to come. To illustrate, suppose 412½ grains of silver to be worth a dollar all over the world, as it was in 1873 and had been practically always, and that wheat in Minnesota and India is worth a dollar a bushel? Suppose, then, a sudden decline in the value of silver of 50 per cent. This would, of course, necessitate either a doubling in the value of wheat in India and making a bushel cost 825 grains of silver, or else wheat in Minnesota would be reduced to 50 cents a bushel. Fifty cents in gold would buy 412½ grains of silver, which would be the amount with which a bushel of wheat could be bought in India. If there was no advance in the price there, this fact would absolutely fix the price of Minnesota wheat.

WON'T WORK THAT WAY.

The Bank Currency Scheme and the Gold Standard Will Not Fit Together.

Either the scheme to allow banks to issue currency at discretion, or the gold standard, one or the other, must be given up. They are antagonistic and cannot be made to work together. The doctrine that, having adopted gold as our standard, we can then have as much currency as we please, will prove a delusion if ever tried. That is equivalent to saying that we can have the gold standard and at the same time have any range of prices we please. To have the gold standard prices must be kept at the gold level, and any devices that carry prices above that level will carry them away from the standard. In other words, the standard will break down. This is too plain to need argument to prove. The gold standard and high prices do not go together and cannot be made to stand together. The gold standard can be maintained by maintaining gold standard prices, and in no other way. To maintain gold standard prices the currency, of whatever it consists, must be made to vary substantially as a purely gold currency would vary, so that prices will go down when gold goes out, permitting obligations abroad to be paid with commodities instead of with gold, and rise when gold comes in until an equilibrium is restored. Banks never adjust currency to these conditions; they cannot. Give to them the privilege of increasing the currency by issuing three or four dollars of paper for one of gold held in reserve, and upon this to expand bank credits five or six times again, and how long will prices conform to the gold standard? But the worst effect will be when they find it necessary, as gold is wanted for export, in order to keep up the original proportion between gold and credit, to suddenly contract this structure of credit from six to ten times as much as a gold currency would contract. No business can stand such shocks. Such a currency system would be little else than panic breeding. Its expansion would go on till the elastic limit was reached and then the explosion would come. Such a currency system would be fittingly described as dynamite currency.

Rotschild and Giffen in this are right; there cannot be a gold standard without, in part, at least, a gold currency. There must be gold enough in the country to allow such outflow of gold as trade balances require, and that means such limitations on other forms of currency as will always leave room for, nay, will always require, some gold to make up our full distributive share of the world's money.

And it cannot be too often repeated in this connection that to maintain the gold standard in a debtor country like ours, the level of prices will always be lower than in creditor countries rated by the same standard; and that as prices go lower, more and more of commodities will be required to pay debts abroad. And, furthermore, that as the gold standard is extended over the world, gold must continue to appreciate under the increased demand for it for world money, and prices correspondingly to fall.

Of course the outflow of gold can be temporarily stayed by selling bonds, as was done by Mr. Cleveland. But that is but postponing the day of settlement, and making harder the settlement when it is made. The basic truth will still remain, whatever the expedients to tide over crises, that to maintain the gold standard prices must be kept at the gold level, and that if by currency expansion or other devices prices are carried above this level, gold will leave us and the gold standard will fail. The other fact will also stand as unalterable as the first: that to make prices conform to the gold standard, the currency must be made to vary substantially as a gold currency would automatically vary.

A. J. WARNER.

Superiority Assumed.

An American gold standard man recently declared that gold went with the higher civilization and that silver belonged to a lower civilization. Let us look at this a moment. Until 1873 silver was the money that was chiefly used by nearly all of the great nations of the world. Germany was on a silver basis up to that time. The foundations of the great German empire were laid and the entire fabric of German civilization and German achievement and German greatness was reared on the basis of silver. Since she adopted a gold standard she has not advanced. Her industries are crippled and there is stagnation and distress throughout her entire borders. France, generally considered the most highly civilized country in the world, was a great silver-using country, and her unit of value is a silver coin. The greatness of the United States of America was achieved prior to 1873. Our institutions were reared, the rebellion was crushed, the slaves were liberated while the unit of value in our country was a silver dollar, provided by the act of 1792. Look where you will, you will find that the progress of the world was made while silver was the money that was chiefly in use. And since the nations of the earth have been trying to get onto a gold basis there is universal depression and stagnation. Instead of advancing civilization, gold is causing retrogression, because there is not enough of it to do the world's work.

THE AESTHETIC SIDE.

To Beautify Our Highways Is Not a Fad, as Trees Are Great Protectors of Roads.

While considering the purely utilitarian aspect of good highways it is well not to forget that there are other considerations worthy of attention, and that hard roads when unshaded and barren, and city streets when unadorned, are lacking in those simple yet beautiful features which make travel over them more agreeable and add an unmistakable charm to movement in the open air.

For the most part, all thought regarding roadmaking in the recent revival in this country, has thus far turned to grades, drainage and road beds, and almost no attention has been paid to roadside adornment. This feature, however, is not without its utility as well as aesthetic value, for country roads lined by shade trees and hedges, and so partially protected from the summer sun, are, in a measure, kept from drying out too fast and from breaking up in time of drought. The traveler is made more comfortable and his animals suffer less from heat. In the many districts in which watering is impracticable or impossible the benefits are particularly marked.

PRIZE BAD ROAD.
(Located Not Very Far from Baltimore, Maryland.)

But the beauty that may be added to any road or street at the cost of little trouble and expense is a direct source of refining influences to all that portion of the public which uses them. The great variety of trees, shrubs, bushes, hedges and flowers that are possible along the roadside are a comfort to the traveler and a delight to his eye.

In towns, and in the residence portions of cities, even better results can be obtained, as in one case in a western city where a gentleman who owned land on both sides of the street "removed the fences" says Park and Cemetery, "and planted in their places quantities of barberry bushes, Japan quince, buckthorns, prickly ash and sweet briars. The parkways retain some of the native trees, and there has been additional planting. Elms, lindens, maples, oaks and other trees have been used, and also red-branched dogwoods, syringas and viburnums. The groups planted are as irregular as the native growth. Recently a man from another city, after having ridden through this street, was surprised to find it was a public thoroughfare, his impression having been that it was a gentleman's private drive."

In some sections of the country this sort of thing is being undertaken to the great advantage of the towns. Antiquated and useless fences, which only disfigure the landscape, are being removed, and residences dot here and there among the shrubbery and flowers and lawns what appear to be great and beautiful parks.

With the adoption of this plan would naturally come the removal of the great and hideous advertising signs which disfigure so many streets, boulevards and public places and are a monstrous eye sore on any landscape. The result of such a change from the purely commonplace and prosaic to the beautiful and ornamental would be far reaching, and highly beneficial to the tastes and thoughts of all classes, and particularly to the young. —L. ROADS OVER HILLS.

They Are a Great Tax on Time, Strength and Wear and Tear of Horse and Driver.

The tax we have to pay because the original cattle tracks and paths led abruptly up and down over hills seems to be as immovable as the hills themselves which cause it. Immense sums would be eventually saved if many hill roads were relocated. In learning how to improve our highways and to construct new ones, it is well to learn where lines should run, in order to insure economy in grades and reduce the tax on time, strength, wear and tear and maintenance caused by hills.

Writing on this subject in the Portland Industrial Journal, Mr. S. D. Gray tells of roads over hills which "must not be gone around because our fathers traveled them and we may as well be footsore as they." He cites a case "in which both town and county commissioners refused to act. This road was two miles in length with eight rugged hills, four of them unsafe to ride up or down. All these hills could have been avoided and a level road made for less than $1,000 that would pay for itself in ten years. The old hills still remain. What we need is an understanding not how to build our roads but to say where our roads can and should be built."

SUIT THE CONSUMER.

A Lesson That Many Butter-Makers Will Have to Learn Before They Can Make Money.

One thing should always be borne in mind by the person in making butter to sell. The butter is for somebody else to eat, and it is for your interest to suit them, whether it just suits your taste or not. Habit has a great deal to do with our likes and dislikes. You may have been accustomed to sweet cream butter; if so, you probably like that best. Or, you may have got used to eating butter made from very ripe cream, and the butter not washed to expel the buttermilk, causing it to have a very decided flavor and taste, and so you look upon fine, delicate-flavored butter as insipid. Or, you may like little or no salting or high salting; light color or high color. But all this is of little consequence. It is no matter what you like. You want to make it to suit your customer, and you want your customers to be those who are able and willing to pay a good price for what suits them. If the customer wants sweet-cream butter, make it; if unsalted, make it so; if he desires it high salted, salt it high, and so on. Always make it the same for the customers. They are getting tastes formed which you can make it profitable to gratify. It is not the province of the maker of dairy butter to try and educate the tastes of the people who buy butter, but rather to cater to their tastes when he finds out what they are. If one is making butter to put on the general market, he wants to make what the market demands and will pay the best price for. The best way to learn the market demand is to have the butter inspected by an expert judge who is a dealer and knows what takes best in the market. Ask him to criticise it and tell you just what he thinks of it; and do not get angry at what he tells you, but try and profit by what he says. The object of this article is to help farmers to make such butter as the best-paying customers in the general market demand.—Prairie Farmer.

bottom of the cup. The top of this short tube is on a level with the bottom of the long one. By partially filling the cup with any kind of an insecticide and blowing into the long tube a fine spray can be created. The little device is not patented and any tinsmith can make one. With kerosene a small herd of cattle can be sprayed for lice or to keep off flies in a very short time. For house plants it is especially adapted and convenient. Pure kerosene must be used very sparingly on either plants or animals.—Orange Judd Farmer.

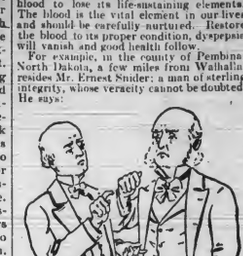
THE COW AT EIGHT.

If She Has Been Well Cared For She Should Then Be at Her Very Best.

Many dairymen and others who milk cows for profit believe that when a cow reaches the age of seven or eight her useful years are over, and that she should be replaced by one younger says a writer in the New York Tribune. But, other things being equal, this is a mistake. A cow that has been well cared for, with generous rations and proper attention given to her comfort, through all seasons of the year is better and will make a more profitable return at eight years old than at an earlier age; in other words, she is in her prime, and she will continue in this condition several years, and will not be considered an old cow until 14 or 15 years have passed. Cows with first calves—at two or three years—are generally unprofitable in their milk yield, and a really good cow between seven and eight years old will pay a better revenue than two that are performing their first year's duties in the dairy herd, and she will probably consume but a little more food than one of the younger ones. This fact is worthy of the consideration of those who are dairying for profit.

Galls on Hickory Trees.

The hickory galls are made by some of the gall lice described by Drs. Fitch, Walsh and Shimer and others. There is no connection, whatever, between these and caterpillars. There is, as yet, no practical measure known that will effectually prevent the attacks of these gall lice upon the leaves of the hickory. Beyond disfiguring leaves by their appearance, they do no special harm. The caterpillars can be easily destroyed by the timely use by arsenical poisons.—F. M. Webster, Ohio Exp. Sta.



A NATION OF DYSPEPTICS.

From the Mountaineer, Walhalla, N. Dak.

The remorse of a guilty stomach is what a large majority of the people are suffering with to-day. Dyspepsia is a characteristic American disease and it is frequently stated that "we are a nation of dyspeptics."

Improper food, hurried eating, mental worry, exhaustion; any of these produce a lack of vitality in the system, by causing the blood to lose its life-sustaining elements. The blood is the vital element in our lives and should be carefully nurtured. Restore the blood to its proper condition, dyspepsia will vanish and good health follow.

For example, in the county of Pembina, North Dakota, a few miles from Walhalla, resides Mr. Ernest Snuder; a man of sterling integrity, whose veracity cannot be doubted. He says:

The Doctors Disagreed.

"I became seriously ill three years ago. The doctor gave me medicine for indigestion, but I continued to become worse. I had several physicians at intervals who gave me some relief, but nothing permanent.

"I read in the newspapers articles regarding the wonderful curative powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and finally concluded to try the pills. I purchased six boxes. This was five months ago. The first box gave me much relief. I continued taking the pills, and after using four boxes was cured."

These pills are recognized everywhere as a specific for diseases of the blood and nerves. For partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, and other diseases long supposed incurable, they have proved their efficacy in thousands of cases.

CONGENIAL OCCUPATION.

The old stock broker limped wearily down the familiar country road on which in boyhood days he had often driven the cows homeward to their barn at milking time, and ever and anon some familiar feature of the landscape caught his eye. Years ago his father had died and left the farm to his brother and himself. Soon tiring of the dull toil of a farmer's life, he resolved to go to the city and seek his fortune.

Here his honest face secured him a position with a Wall street firm, the members of the firm assuming that an honest, ingenuous countenance was such a rarity in their line of business that it might attract attention and add to their clientele. Soon branching out for himself, he in time became one of the largest operators on the street. But, caught in a crash, he was penniless, and was now forced to seek a home with his brother's sons, who had prospered with the farm.

As he reached the familiar gate the young husbandmen saw him, and with a yell they rushed to meet their uncle.

"Come right in! You shall not want for anything!" cried Jabe.

"The room you occupied when a boy is ready for you!" shouted Bijah.

"Not a lick of work shall you do!" chimed in another of his nephews.

"Hush, boys!" said the old stock broker. "I'm still able to work, and shall do my share. Never shall it be said that I ate of anyone's bread and ended my days in slothfulness."

"Well," answered one of the nephews, "can you think of any light work about the place you could do? Something congenial, you know, that won't seem too strange and hard for you?"

"Yes," replied the uncle, after a pause, "I have it. I shall water the stock!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A WAY TO SETTLE IT.

They Were Rivals and There Was a Chance for Trouble But Peace Prevailed.

"Now, then, sir, I think we have a little business with each other. Suppose we settle it right here."

"I know what you mean. Say, look here. You and I are courting the same girl, and naturally we don't like each other. That's the trouble, isn't it?"

"That's it, and we don't need to waste many words over it, either."

"We won't. I would like to occupy your time just about two minutes, however, and if we can't settle this thing without fighting I'm your man, from a Cuban machete to a Philippine parang or any other weapon belonging either to normal or to expanded America. Suppose you kill me. You couldn't marry the girl. Even if you escaped hanging it wouldn't do you any good. She would never look twice at a murderer. Suppose I kill you. I couldn't marry her, either. But you wouldn't get much satisfaction out of that. You wouldn't be in a position to do any crowing. Suppose we kill each other. If the girl cares for either of us it would break her heart. So what's the good of fighting? Why not arbitrate the case?"

"Arbitrate it?"

"Yes. It's a toss-up, anyway. One of us stands as good a show as the other, and it wouldn't muss things up as a fight with deadly weapons would. We can state our case and leave the decision to the arbitrator."

"But, great Scott! Whom could we get to do the arbitrating?"

"Suppose we leave it to the girl herself?"

"All right. I hadn't thought of that."—Chicago Tribune.

REGAINED HEALTH.

Gratifying Letters to Mrs. Pinkham From Happy Women.

"I Owe You My Life."

Mrs. E. Woolhiser,
Mills, Neb., writes:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I owe my life to your Vegetable Compound. The doctors said I had consumption and nothing could be done for me. My menstruation had stopped and they said my blood was turning to water. I had several doctors. They all said I could not live. I began the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me right away; menses returned and I have gained in weight. I have better health than I have had for years. It is wonderful what your Compound has done for me."

"I Feel Like a New Person."

Mrs. Geo. Leach,
1609 Belle St., Alton, Ill., writes:

"Before I began to take your Vegetable Compound I was a great sufferer from womb trouble. Menses would appear two and three times in a month, causing me to be so weak I could not stand. I could neither sleep nor eat, and looked so badly my friends hardly knew me.

"I took doctor's medicine but did not derive much benefit from it. My druggist gave me one of your little books, and after reading it I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I feel like a new person. I would not give your Compound for all the doctors' medicine in the world. I can not praise it enough."

The house in which Mrs. Arthur Davis and family reside in this place is said to be the oldest house in the county, having been built in 1796 by Daniel Mosby, father of the late Robt. Mosby. Verona.

Oct. 31.—Aunt Letha Anderson's birthday was Oct. 28th. Aged 84, and her many friends will regret to hear she is very feeble.

Two months of our schools have past and every one seems well pleased with them. Verona can boast of two good schools, well attended.

We are glad to have Mr. Perry Rice and wife as citizens of our town, and hope they will find their new home and friends all they would have them be.

Quite an epidemic of ills has prevailed here the past week, but am glad to say there was nothing serious. On the sick list are Mrs. Pattie Carlisle, Mrs. B. Menefee and her daughter, Cecil, Nellie Dickerson and Pattie Callahan. All are improving.

The union prayer meeting Wednesday evening is well attended. If you who don't attend don't think so, come and see and enjoy an hour with us. Christ's cause needs you. Sin has a strong hold in our midst and let all who loves the Lord, and want to see right instead of wrong prevail, unite in the strength of the Lord and pray that where sin abounds grace may much more abound.

Bullittsville.

Oct. 31.—We have but little news for you this week. The Christian Church at this place, is conducting a very interesting series of meetings. Eld. G. W. Watkins, the pastor, has been laboring against very unpropitious weather for two weeks; but, notwithstanding the adverse circumstances, great interest is being manifested in the meetings. Friday night last, Mr. Miller, pastor of the Fifth Street Christian Church in Covington, preached an eloquent sermon to a large audience. He will return to-night and conduct the meeting throughout the week. He is an eloquent and forcible speaker.

Mr. Duncan, pastor of Ludlow Christian Church, and several good singers from Covington, will assist in the meeting. If you want to hear good preaching and singing do not fail to be present at each meeting. Friday night, Miss Fannie Willis, the beautiful daughter of our popular assessor, united with the church by confession. Miss Fannie possesses a sweet, amiable disposition and nature has endowed her with a christian character. She will add luster to the church with which she has connected herself.

This evening Misses Zayda and Annie Gaines leave for Carrollton to spend two weeks with their cousin, Miss Ella Gaines. This is a sad breach in our social circle, and we hope that it will be healed by their prompt return at the end of the two weeks.

Mrs. Sidney Blankenbaker, of Louisville, is visiting her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Washington Watts.

Stevens, Roy Stamler, John Crowe.

Died—In Ludlow, Ky., Monday, Oct. 17th, Mrs. N. G. Hanmond. The deceased was the only sister of Mrs. Myers of this place. Mrs. Myers wishes to thank her many friends here for expressions of sympathy in her bereavement.

The many friends of Miss Mabel Bagby, of Walton, who is attending College at Georgetown, are delighted at the report received of her work in that institution. She leads the girls with a grade of 99, and equals the highest mark given to the boys. Mabel is a graduate of Walton Academy, and this institution is justly proud of her.

Petersburg.

Oct. 30—Mrs. John Ambrose, on Saturday, made a visit to her particular friend, Mrs. Ellis, of Verona.

Dr. Jones was called to Doudton on Monday to see the sick child of Chas. Craven, who lives 30 miles from here.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church continues with increased interest. Bro. J. Frank Williams is an able and eloquent preacher and his assistance to Bro. Hill, the beloved pastor, is valuable and highly appreciated by the congregation and the community at large. He has been here before, but has never created such a sensation as he has on this occasion.

Last week Tom Hork, Bill Dixon, Geo. Ellis, Perry Steele and Ed Aylor went out looking for Geo. Chapman, another colored man, whom they met on the road, and who had a corn knife in his hand. This was taken from him, and they gave him a terrible beating. Constable Watson arrested the men Saturday night and they will be tried before Judge Botts Monday morning. Chapman's intimacy with Mrs. Oliver seems to have been the prime and long standing cause of the assault, as three or four of his assailants ran him away from her house last spring.

On Saturday a trio from Covington made their appearance on Constable John Watsou's place, near Kensington, 2 miles north of here, and were warned by him not to shoot on his farm. They left and went on the grounds of Esq. John C. Byland, and were warned by a negro man, who was shucking corn, that hunting was forbidden on the Squire's grounds. They went off and again got upon the Watson place, whose owner had them arrested and took them before Squire Byland, who fined them $5,00 and costs, which they paid and then went north towards Covington. The $10.00 reward from the cuvier club and the fact of qualls raising the second brood will do more to have the game law observed rigidly than anything that has ever been yet tried.

The Christian church held a festival Saturday night at the Opera House, which was well attended and it is to be presumed was financially a success. The receipts must have been large if many of those in attendance at all equalled the gastronomic performance of Mr. H. C. Diers, a bon vivant entitled to celebrity. A line was taken on his appetite and it was found that he in the commencement, made way with four bowls of oyster stew, followed by four dozen raw, six dishes of ice cream and two pounds of variety cake. He then called for some boiled ham, and this not being on the meuu, he left for home and took to his bed, on which he dreamed that he was an angel. It must have been the angel of destruction or his chief assistent.

The Clore Sale.

Last Saturday was an ideal day for a public sale, and the farmers, not being particularly busy, flocked to the sale of the personal property of the late Yancy Clore in large delegations from every neighborhood in the county, the attendance being estimated at from 800 to 1,000 persons. The auctioneer began business promptly at 8 o'clock, house hold articles being the first to go under the hammer. The most of this class of property was bought by members of the family, and high prices were not realized for it. By noon about everything except livestock and farm produce had been disposed of.

At twelve o'clock an intermission of an hour was proclaimed, in which to permit the crowd to dispose of four large iron kettles of soup, which the celebrated cook, Owen Aylor, with two or three able assistants had prepared for the occasion. Besides the soup, chicken, beef and bread were passed out to the crowd, and in half an hour the inner man had been well cared for.

After the kettles of soup and baskets of bread and meat had received attention, J. M. Lassing climbed up on the wood pile and announced that Congressman A. S. Berry, who had been mingling with the crowd for several hours, would make a short speech, and the tall, handsome Congressman from across the Licking, mounted a block and spoke for about ten minutes in his usually happy style. He urged the Democrats to turn out on the 8th inst., and vote, and pledged them that if re-elected he would continue his earnest efforts in the interest of his constituents.

At the conclusion of Col. Berry's speech the sale was resumed, and continued until late in the day, everything bringing prices that were considered high.

The old tobacco, about 9 cents per pound; Irish potatoes, 42 cents per bushel; 2 hogs, weigh about 400, $12; old corn, from 35 to 39 cents in twenty-five bushel lots; new corn in 50 bushel lots, from 32½ to 37½ cents; wheat, 61 cents; oats, 28 cents; hay, about $7; mule about 20 years old, $18; 1 horse, 15 years old, $11.50; sorrel horse, $5; milch cows from $26 to $56; heifers from $25 to $40.50; calves, $15 92 to $22; buck lamb, $6.25; 10 sheep, $9; one buck lamb, $4.25; 10 shares stock in Burlington and Florence pike, $70.

NOTES:

Prof. Collins was an early arrival. He made no purchases that would indicate that he expects to engage in housekeeping soon.

Uncle Thornton Blankenbecker was paying close attention to how things were selling, but ever ready to talk about fishing.

Col. Berry was perfectly at home among the farmers and had a crowd to entertain all the time. He could talk horse, hog, hay, corn, cow or tobacco with them.

Joe Weaver, of Union, bought an old time spinning wheel. It is presumed that Joe proposes introducing some of the primitive customs of housekeeping when he marries.

As W. P. Sullivan was leaving for home he was struck by the shaft of a buggy that passed him. One of Mr. Sullivan's ribs on his left side was broken, as the result of the collision. The driver was a stranger to Mr. Sullivan.

The improvements in farming implements could be traced back year by year for quite a period by the various implements that were sold. In harvesters the chain was complete from the improved binder of today back to the sickle used by the pioneers.

The burlesque imitation of Cindrella at the court house, last Saturday evening, was not witnessed by a very large audience. It was certainly worthy the patronage of the lovers of music, and the opera was rendered in a manner decidedly creditable to amateur talent. There were some fine voices in the company, while Mr. Kersting, violinist and Miss Cora Meeks, organist, were excellent performers.

The will of W. M. Early was offered for probate by Jesse B. Harrison and admitted to record by the court. He bequeaths to his beloved wife the household furniture and other personal property and one-half of his farm of 200 acres in Owen county; to Mattie Lay, who resided with him, $100 per year until she is 18 years old. He desired that his executors sell his personal property and if deemed advisable the farm in Owen county, and after his debts are paid, the balance, either in land, cash or other effects, equally divided between his wife and son-in-law, J. B. Harrison.—Warsaw Independent.

WANT TERRITORIAL RIGHTS.

SAN JUAN, P. R., Oct. 31.—The principal theater of the city was taxed to its utmost capacity Sunday afternoon on the occasion of a public meeting of delegates from the chief towns of the island to consider and defeat recommendations regarding the necessities of the island for the use of the special commissioners who will be selected later to represent Porto Rico at Washington when the time comes for settling the administrative system.

The assembly was fairly representative, and although the proceedings gave undue prominence to unimportant details, there was abundant evidence of intelligent reflection on the part of the delegates and of a determination not to tolerate partisan politics at this crisis in the island's affairs.

Carefully prepared reports were submitted by the political, social and economical committees.

The meeting received with enthusiasm the resolutions demanding territorial rights, the cessation of the present military rule and the installation of regular civil government.

Other resolutions were adopted asking an eight-hour day for the laboring man and severely denouncing the present corrupt system of registering deeds of land.

It was observed that the delegates proceeded upon the assumption that the United States would grant Porto Rico territorial rights.

COL. G. E. WARING, JR., DEAD.

Three Hours After His Death His Body Was Taken to Swinburne Island and Cremated.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Col. Geo. E. Waring, jr., died of yellow fever Saturday at his home in this city where he had been since he arrived from Havana on the Yucatan on Tuesday last. He was 67 years of age.

Three hours after the death of Col. Waring his body, inclosed in a metallic casket, was taken from the apartment he had occupied to the dock at the foot of Fifteenth street, where the quarantine boat, Gov. Flowers, with Dr. Doty in charge, was in waiting. The body was placed on board and taken to Swinburne island. It was there placed in a retort, and Dr. Doty himself lit the fire which cremated the remains.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The ashes of Col. George E. Waring, jr., which were placed in an urn temporarily, remained Sunday at Swinburne island. What disposition will be made of them has not yet been decided upon by Mrs. Waring. On account of the expressed wish of Col. Waring there will be no public funeral. Col. Waring often said that he wished his obsequies to be of the simplest character.

FITZHUGH LEE'S COMMAND.

It Is the Intention of the Administration to Land the Corps in Cuba By the 1st of January Next.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—No definite determination has been reached as to the date when the troops now at Savannah will be sent to Cuba. A prominent administration official said Sunday night that the departure of Gen. Lee's corps would be dependent, to a certain extent, upon the movements of the Spanish forces in evacuating the island. The American troops, he said, might sail this week, and they might not sail for a month.

It is the intention of the administration, however, to land Gen. Lee's corps in Cuba before the 1st of January. That date has been fixed definitely as the time for the final evacuation of the island by the Spaniards. An effort was made by the Spanish authorities to obtain an extension of the time of evacuation until the 1st of February, but the proposition was declined by the American commissioners.

Senor Montero Rios Ill.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission, is ill. This caused some doubt Sunday evening as to whether there will be a joint session of the commissions Monday. If he is unable to attend it is unlikely that the Spaniards would consent to enter the conference to take up the Philippine question for initial consideration.

President Arrives at the Conclusion That We Must Keep Philippines.

It Is Evident That Spain Can Not Again Re-Establish Authority Over the Remaining Islands Without a Prolonged War With Insurgents.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—President McKinley is convinced that there is no way in which the United States can escape the responsibility of taking all the Philippines. He has arrived at this conclusion after mature deliberation. He at first favored keeping nothing more than a military and naval base, and thought that the United States should in no event retain more than the island of Luzon. When the American peace commissioners left for Paris it was not contemplated that they should demand from the Spanish government more than the absolute cession of this one island to the United States and a reversionary interest in the other islands of the group.

It has been found however, that there were many practical difficulties in the way of such a solution, not the least of them being the evident impossibility of Spain's re-establishing authority over the remaining islands without a prolonged and bloody struggle with the insurgent forces.

Information, coupled with the opinion of military and naval commanders familiar with the Philippine situation, have led the president to believe that Adm. Dewey's destruction of the Spanish fleet in Manila bay and Gen. Merritt's capture of Manila, annihilated Spanish sovereignty in the islands and it became a duty of the United States to establish a better government than the one which was destroyed by American arms.

The president has been deluged with letters from all parts of the United States and with resolutions from commercial and religious bodies, urging that American sovereignty should be maintained wherever the flag has been planted. In this same line, the president's recent western trip was a revelation to him and the members of his cabinet who accompanied him. The further he went west the stronger he found the sentiment in favor of holding all the Philippines and establishing an American government over them.

Secretary Gage, who went west before the president, and who went as far as Denver, found the sentiment there even stronger than in Omaha. In all the meetings of the cabinet before the peace commissioners left for Paris Secretary Gage was the most conservative of all the president's advisers. He doubted the wisdom of taking even as much as the Island of Luzon, and would have been glad if a way had been found of relinquishing all the Philippines. Since his return from the west, however, he is an advocate of holding all the islands.

Although it has been finally determined that the Philippines shall be retained, the peace commissioners may be given considerable latitude as to the terms on which they are to be retained. The Philippines are regarded as standing on a different basis from Cuba and Porto Rico, and some of the members of the administration believe that if all the islands are taken Spain should be given some measure of compensation for them, especially as the Philippines have been by far the most valuable of all her colonies.

It can be said that it is quite probable that the American commissioners will be authorized to go so far as to offer to pledge the United States to assume the Philippine debt, or at least such portion of it as has been expended on the public works in the islands.

The exact amount of the debt that could be properly charged to the United States under such an arrangement could not be accurately stated without a fuller analysis of this debt than as yet has been made, but it is believed that it will be less than $40,000,000.

IN THE FLOWERY KINGDOM.

An Interesting Incident in the Daily Life of Her Majestic Highness, the Empress.

Her majesty, Tai An, empress of China, sat in her palace in the purple forbidden city, with her brow resting on her thumb and her index finger pushed up through her bang. Rousing herself presently from her profound absorption she beckoned to a peanut-colored person plastered up against the yellow silk tapestry.

"Swat him," she said, "where is the emperor?"

"Dash your ignominious slave into a million atoms, oh, amethyst flower of the celestial kingdom," he responded, lying flat on his stomach before her, "but your slave wotteth not."

"Wot?" she screamed.

"Yo, most purple of our yellowest lilies of the Yankee Tse Kiang, I do not wot where the emperor is."

"And this to me?" she cried.

"Most beauteous descendant of all the gods, your vile slave speaks but the truth, though he lies here on his very stomach. He wotteth not where the emperor is."

"Slave, dog, canine, wretch, scum of the Yellow river, did I not tell you what to do?"

"Truly, most divine of all the gentler purple peonies of Peking, and your slave did it to the queen's taste, so to speak."

"Ahs, then he is dead?"

"As a mackerel, oh, yellow anemone of the crystal sea."

"Why liest thou, knowing that he is dead?"

"How the dickens, most marvelous of mandarin matrons, do I know where he is? I'm no fortune teller."

"Oho, aha," smiled her majesty, again relapsing to thought, "bring another."—Washington Star.

GIGANTIC TRUST

The Continental Tobacco Company to Be Incorporated in New York City.

Actual Aggregate Cost of New Concern Exclusive of the Plug Tobacco Business of the American Tobacco Co., About $60,000,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Nearly two years ago Col. J. B. Hughes, of Hamilton, O., and his associates, Fletcher S. Heath, a banker, of the same city, and Perry S. Heath, first assistant postmaster general, began to syndicate the great plug tobacco manufacturing establishments of this country and form an organization which, although at that time without the design, is now to control more than four-fifths of the tobacco output of the country and take from the American Co. its entire plug trade.

For more than eleven months past, eight or ten of the largest capitalists in the country, including three or four of the leading tobacco manufacturers, have devoted almost their entire time to the work of perfecting this organization and bringing the manufacturers together. A month before the declaration of war against Spain $28,500,000 in cash, the amount necessary to begin the transfer of the properties, was made ready, but the prospect of war frustrated all plans. Two of the largest life insurance companies in New York city at one time contracted to take upwards of $20,000,000 in the first bonds, while Russell Sage and his associates had arranged to place half as much more.

Col. Hughes and Mr. Fletcher S. Heath procured all of the contracts for the purchase of the plants while the finally successful brokers, Messrs. Moore and Schley, of New York, the attorneys for the Continental Tobacco Co., Messrs. Lawrence and Hughes, of No. 320 Broadway, New York, completed the syndicate and thus assisted in holding the property. The latter have now about completed the articles of incorporation of the Continental Tobacco Co., and they will likely be filed for record this week. The company will have a capital of $75,000,000, one-half to be seven per cent. preferred and one-half common stock. The actual aggregate cost of the above concern, exclusive of the plug tobacco business of the American Tobacco Co., was a little less than $60,000,000 cash. Messrs. Paul J. Sorg, of Middletown, O., Capt. P. H. Mayo, of Richmond, Va., and Daniel Scotten, of Detroit, Mich., whose establishments are among those purchased by the Continental Tobacco Co., will personally retire from business, but their present active managers will continue to direct the manufacture of their individual concerns. Col. Hughes and Fletcher S. Heath are arranging the details of the new organization.

MAIL SERVICE IN MANILA.

United States Postal Agent Vaille Reports to the Post Office Department That Everything is Satisfactory.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—United States Postal Agent Vaille, at Manila, has submitted a report to the post office department on the postal operations there. He says everything is moving satisfactorily, and that the largest business houses report the mail facilities much better than at any time under Spanish rule. He speaks in glowing terms of the island, expresses the hope that the United States will retain it. He says there is room for millions of people, and that the country is not surpassed by any in the United States. He adds that on September 19 he had a short talk with Aguinaldo at Malatos about the mails in the provinces under Aguinaldo's control, where the former Spanish officials are out and there is no regularly constituted postal authority in charge. Aguinaldo, who promised to send a representative to discuss the matter, was told that if he could satisfy the agent that the mails sent out would be delivered to addresses in proper condition he would deliver the mails.

THE PHILADELPHIA PARADE.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—Philadelphians and their visitors again poured into the streets Friday to seek positions to witness the third and last of the great peace jubilee processions. Friday's procession was purely of a civic character and was a most fitting windup of the week's jubilee, the emblems of peaceful industry following the display of the nation's prowess in war.

The exercises of the day opened with the re-dedication of old Independence hall, the historic building from which the declaration of independence was read to the people of the new republic on July 4, 1776. The buildings which had from time to time since that date been added for uses as offices of the municipal authorities have all been recently removed and the famous hall is now in its original form, as it was 122 years ago, when occupied by the United States congress and the national government officials.

The re-dedication exercises were presided over by Gov. Hastings and were opened by prayer by Rev. Dr. Brownson. The anthem, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," was sung by 33,000 pupils of the public schools, accompanied with music by the 1st Regiment band. The memorial poem composed by Mrs. Florence Earle Coates, dedicated to the peace jubilee, was read by Daniel W. Hutchins, principal of one of the public schools. The anthem, "Columbia," was sung by the scholars, and then followed the oration by Mayor Chas. Warwick.

Upon the conclusion of the ceremonies the great audience hurried to positions from which to see the monster civic procession. A stand covering the sidewalk the entire length of the front of the historical hall had been erected for occupancy during the parade by the 3,000 school children, who had participated in the dedication exercises.

The mammoth trades display, or what was popularly known as the civic parade, started from Broad and Cumberland streets promptly at 11 o'clock, headed by Maj. Gen. George R. Snowden and staff of 30 mounted aides.

The parade was one of the greatest in the history of the country. It was divided into ten divisions and it is estimated that there were 50,000 men in line besides at least 150 floats representing in miniature almost every manufacturing interest and trade. There were 110 bands of music in line.

THE GOLD FIELD IN OHIO.

CANAL DOVER, O., Oct. 29.—The gold excitement at Malvern is still spreading, and there now seems to be sufficient evidence to indicate that gold really exists in paying quantities.

The details so far from the field have been meager because of its out of the way location and the infrequency of travelers from that district to this point. Jacob Gepfert, whose home is in Malvern, arrived here Friday. Mr. Gepert is a reputable man and his statements ought to be authoritative. In speaking of the new Eldorado he said: "It is difficult to find out just what there is in it for Mr. Alfred Wartmon, a newcomer, who has purchased a $4,000 mining outfit. Some of the reports have been shown to me, and they are more promising than the one made by Wartmon, which shows about $25 of pure gold to the ton of quartz. There is one assay made at the instance of a Malvern man, whose name I am not privileged to mention, which shows between $50 and $60 of gold to the ton.

"If it is all a scheme to raise the price of real estate on the part of Wartmon and other farmers, they should begin selling pretty soon. Many of them have now been offered more than twice the value of their land, but they are still holding on and say they will not sell at any price."

The big quartz crusher will be in operation within a day or two.

The vessel which has begun to take on her freight is docked at the Pacific street wharf. She may sail Sunday.

Redmond, who is said to have enlisted with the "rough riders," and to have fought at Santiago, escaped after returning to this country and is still at large.

ASK FOR MERCY.

The Spaniards Abandon the Effort to Saddle Cuban Debt on America.

United States Guarantees That Life and Property Shall Be Secure in Cuba—Commissioners Will Next Take Up Philippine Question.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—The Spanish peace commissioners have accepted the negative views of the United States commissioners towards the proposed assumption by the United States of the Cuban debt.

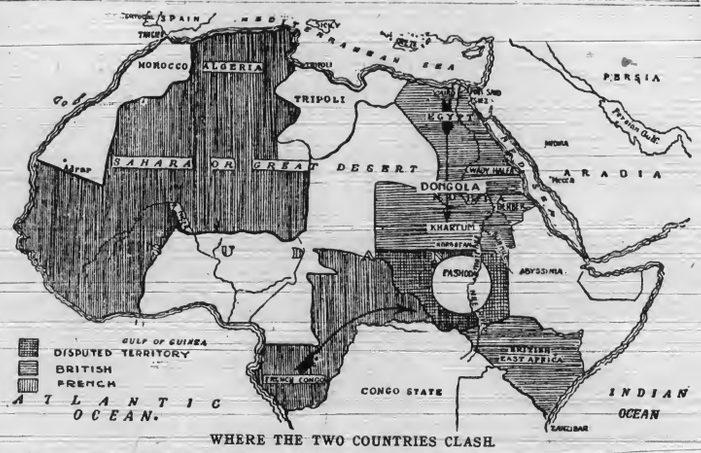
The American commissioners have firmly but courteously declined to assume for the United States the entire or joint responsibility for the Spanish financial conditions, and the Spanish commissioners have finally abandoned the effort and have agreed that the Cuban article of the protocol shall, without conditions, have a place in the ultimate treaty of peace. It was not until Monday that they became absolutely convinced that the Americans had from the outset of their refusal to accept the Cuban debt, meant exactly what they said.

In spite of the fact that the Spanish commissioners had as a back ground of their efforts, doubts of succeeding, their hope of so doing has been so keen and their contention has been so vigorously prosecuted that the final conviction of their inability to win their point brought to the Spaniards such a shock and depression that consistently with these dispatches at the time, there were grave doubts as to the continuance of the negotiations.

In support of these statements is the fact that Senor Montero Rios, after Monday's session, and on Tuesday last, would have resigned the presidency of the Spanish peace commission, had he not believed that his so doing may have greviously shaken, even if he had not unseated Senor Sagasta's government. From this standpoint, if for no other reason, Senor Montero Rios retained his position, and at Wednesday's session, acting under the conviction arrived at on Monday, the Spaniards announced that they would forego further argument on the Cuban debt and agreed that, practically in the terms and absolutely in the spirit of the protocol, the article about Cuba should go forward into the final treaty.

Thus Spain agrees to relinquish sovereignty over and claim to Cuba without either terms or conditions.

All differences, if any existed, regarding Porto Rico and the selection of the island of Guam were also arranged by a mutual understanding, and the commissioners found themselves well-nigh touching the Philippine question, which will be taken up next week.



The session of the joint commissions which began Thursday at 2 p. m. ended at 4 p. m.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The intimation conveyed by the American commissioners to the Spanish commissioners at Monday's session of the peace conference at Paris, that the position of the United States with respect to Cuba and the Cuban debt, could not be regarded as subject to change and that consequently the American commissioners were ready to proceed with the consideration of other heads under the protocol the Paris advices show had the desired effect. The one concession as to Cuba that our commissioners will make will be to guarantee for the United States that life and property shall be secure in Cuba. This responsibility the United States assumes only until such time as a stable government shall be formed and operative in Cuba. There will be perpetual guarantee on this score.

Undue significance has been attached to the dispatch of a special messenger from Washington Wednesday to the president at Philadelphia. Almost every day a long report has come by cable from Judge Day, president of the American commissioners at Paris, telling what had been accomplished, what the Spanish commissioners were seeking and what the American commissioners propose to do at the next meeting.

It is expected that the commissioners will now take up the subject of the Philippines. The American commissioners have given this subject much attention, but so far it has never appeared before the joint commission save in the shape of one spasmodic effort made by the Spaniards at the beginning of the sessions to have the United States abandon Manila as a precedent to further negotiations on the subject of the Philippines. The American commissioners among other things have been looking into the subject of the Philippine debt about which there is much ignorance at this end of the line. It is unlikely that the same rule will be applied to that debt as was insisted upon relative to the Cuban debt. In other words, if the United States annexes the Philippines, which seems now to be the most logical outcome of the situation, it might be reasonably contended that at least so much of the debt as represented moneys expended for the improvement of the island should pass to the United States with the title. The situation is regarded as materially different from that in Cuba, where the United States gains nothing substantial for, with the annexation of the Philippines, we should acquire a territory almost as large as the British Isles with a teeming population of more than 8,000,000 people. It will be for the American commissioners to arrange the details for the transfer of the Philippines to the United States, as it is expressly stipulated in the peace protocol that the disposition of the Philippines shall be arranged by the peace commissioners so that there is ample warrant, unlike the case of Cuba, for full discussion of all questions of the Philippine debt, municipal and insular.

It should be said that the adjustments already accomplished will stand in the final treaty, unless opposing views and positions on the Philippine question should develop hereafter and bring to naught the efforts of the future and at the same time the results already obtained.

WHERE THE TWO COUNTRIES CLASH.

England claims all that part of Africa through which Nile river runs, while France, beginning at the French Congo, is seeking to control a strip of territory reaching from the Atlantic to the India ocean. Naturally their expeditions of conquest have met in the vicinity of Fashoda, as indicated in the map.

McCord against the government of Peru for damages sustained by reason of imprisonment during one of the revolutionary outbreaks there has been received at the state department. The payment of this amount will close a diplomatic controversy which has been in progress between the United States and Peru for some years, this government having persistently but fruitlessly heretofore urged reparation for McCord.

THEY WILL VACATE FASHODA

Report That France Has Asked Egypt to Conduct Maj. Marchand and Party Down the Nile.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—It was rumored on the stock exchange late Wednesday afternoon that France had requested Egypt to conduct Maj. Marchand and his party down the Nile, in consequence of the sufferings of Marchand and his followers at Fashoda, from lack of supplies and the climatic conditions.

MARSEILLES, Oct. 27.—Gen. Lord Kitchener, of Khartoum, and Capt. Baratier, the bearer of Maj. Marchand's Fashoda report, arrived from Alexandria, Egypt, Wednesday on board the Messageries steamer from that port. During the voyage the two officers dined together and cordially conversed on the customs of the tribes and peoples each had met. The British consul here met Gen. Kitchener on landing and Capt. Baratier received an affectionate greeting from his mother, Gen. Kitchener and Capt. Baratier left for Paris on the same train. A crowd which assembled on the platform cheered Capt. Baratier and a delegation from the naval and commercial schools presented him with a bejeweled insignia of the Legion of honor, to which his appointment has just been announced. A deputation from the geographical society of Marseilles, after congratulating Capt. Baratier, proceeded to Gen. Kitchener's saloon car. There the spokesman of the French party expressed admiration of the general's remarkable campaign and work in behalf of civilization, and thanked him for the courtesy he had extended to Maj. Marchand and his colleagues. The general thanked his visitors warmly and eulogized Maj. Marchand, whose expedition, he said, had excited the admiration of the whole world. The train then departed amid shouts of "Vive Baratier!" "Vive Marchand!"

LAKE STEAMERS GO ASHORE

The Republic at North Point, But Not Badly Damaged as Yet—Another Ashore But Name Not Learned.

ALPENA, Mich., Oct. 27.—The steamer Republic, bound up without a cargo, went ashore on North Point at noon Wednesday. The wind was blowing at the rate of 60 miles an hour and the sea was terrific. The life saving crew from Thunder Bay island reports that the ship is not badly damaged as yet, and the crew preferred to remain on board. The Republic is a steel craft, and one of the best built boats on the lakes. She is worth $200,000.

The steel steamer Ramapo, of the Union Steamboat Co., came in for shelter Wednesday night badly damaged by the heavy sea. It is reported that another steamer is ashore on North Point, but her name can not be learned.

Col. Waring Has Yellow Fever.

The German Emperor and Empress' Entrance Into Jerusalem.

Sunday the Imperial Pair Attended Services at the Evangelical Church in Bethlehem, Afterward Paying a Visit to the Church of the Nativity.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 31.—The approach of their German imperial majesties to the city Saturday was made through triumphal arches and amid banners, garlands and overgrown crowds, displaying in every way their enthusiasm and delight.

The formal entry through the Jaffa gate was heralded by the roar of guns at the citadel, where the Turkish band played the German anthem.

From the Tower of David Emperor William and Empress Augusta Victoria proceeded on foot, amid wild cheering, to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, where they were received by the Catholic, Greek and Armenian clergy, whose patriarchs presented addresses eulogizing the devotion of Emperor William, who has since conferred decorations on the patriarchs.

Their majesties then proceeded to the German Evangelical church, where the pastor presented an address.

At 6 o'clock in the evening (Saturday) a reception was held at the German consulate and later there was a general illumination of the city, with a display of fireworks.

Sunday the imperial pair attended service at the Evangelical church in Bethlehem, afterward paying a visit to the Church of the Nativity.

The weather Sunday was beautiful and everywhere the greatest enthusiasm was displayed.

After the excursion to Jericho, Djevad Pasha, former grand vizier, recently Turkish governor of Crete and now attached to the person of Emperor William as a special representative of the sultan, will leave the imperial suite. It is rumored that this is due to some unpleasantness.

Emperor William has sent his portrait in brilliants to Tewfik Pasha, Turkish ambassador to Germany, who was among the high Ottoman dignitaries that received the emperor and empress in Constantinople.

Emperor William and the empress, while at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, visited the various portions of the sacred shrine and spent ten minutes at the scene of the crucifixion. Their return from the church was the occasion for an outburst of popular enthusiasm, palm branches being strewn along the way and the cobblestones laid with carpets.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

According to private information received here, Emperor William's reception at Haifa, Palestine, was anything but a success. The Turkish ironclads that were to fire a salute did not arrive until four hours after the emperor's departure, and nobody was allowed to witness the imperial landing from the windows.

THE FAMOUS DREYFUS CASE.

The Court of Cassation Decides to Review the Trial—Has Absolute Control Over the Matter.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—By Saturday's decision the court of cassation obtains the most absolute control over the Dreyfus case. It can demand and examine any documents whatever, including the dossier, of any case bearing upon the Dreyfus matter, and can examine under oath any witness, however high his position.

In short, if the court makes a sincere use of its powers the truth will have a much better chance of being discovered than would have been the case had it merely ordered revision before another court-martial, whose members might have been actuated by a desire to shield the general staff.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says the the decision of the court of cassation on Saturday was given by a vote of 9 against 4.

A BIG SENSATION AT PONCE.

PONCE, Oct. 31.—A sensation was caused here Saturday on the arrival of the Red D line steamer Philadelphia from the Spanish Main, by the discovery in the hand bags of two passengers of a number of explosive cartridges containing dynamite.

The discovery was made by the custom officials and the passengers were arrested on the supposition that they are anarchists.

The police who fear that others belonging to the gang have escaped, are making a strict search.

Wind Up of the Exposition.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 31.—Six high officials of the Trans-Mississippi exposition, which closes Monday, were arrested Sunday, and the finish of the great Western states show promises to abound in sensations and charges of a most serious nature, that of forgery and selling awards.

An Encyclical on Anarchism.

The manager of the elevator expects to handle 500,000 bushels of corn before the season closes.

Quite a number of our farmers have sold their tobacco. Prices range from $5 to $6 per hundred round. If these good prices shall prevail throughout the season our farmers will realize a snug sum for the present crop, which is one of the largest and best ever in the county. The loose handlers and local buyers will purchase the bulk of the crop, as prices in Paducah, Hopkinsville, Clarksville and Louisville will not justify shipment to these markets. Our advice to farmers is to sell to the local buyers when they offer prices that will justify, which they are now doing.—Tale of Two Cities.

VOL. XXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1898. NO. 3.

THE election is over, and many orators are out of a job.

THE campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor can now proceed.

SENATOR HOAR has surpresed the administration by declaring his opposition to the President's expansion policy.

LAST Friday, the first time in the history of the New York Cotton Exchange, the price of cotton went below the 5 cent mark.

THE snakes in India are a thing to be dreaded. In the last twenty-two years 433,239 persons have died there from the effects of their bites.

THERE is considerable opposition to President McKinley's policy to annex the Philippines. The opposition is not confined to Democrats by any means.

IN several counties in this State Tuesday voters were called upon to decide as to whether they should issue bonds with which to pay for the turnpikes they have contracted for, and to be made free.

THERE are many applicants for government offices that think the Presidential order modifying the civil service rules is a long time coming. Some are beginning to believe that it will never be made.

MAIL is delivered in the Philippines about a month after it is posted in the United States. The time depends on connections, especially at Hong Kong, but mail is never delayed at that port more than three days.

IF brevity is the soul of wit Gov. Bradley's Thanksgiving proclamation is exceedingly witty. Here is all there is of it:

"Thursday, the 24th day of November next, is hereby set apart for thanksgiving and prayer."

SPAIN owes her solniers now in Cuba $5,000,000, while the officers have their pockets lined with money, which is causing great dissatisfaction among the soldiers, and the citizens of Havana fear they are going to create great trouble soon.

THE time at which American sovereignty will begin in Cuba will be January 1, 1899. All the Spanish soldiers can not be removed from the island by that time, but Uncle Sam will see that they return to Spain as rapidly as possible.

JOHN WANAMAKER has been making some statements about Republican management of public affairs in Pennsylvania that have gotten him into trouble and he will be given an opportunity to prove his assertions in court. Having been on the inside so long he ought to know whereof he speaks.

HON. CHAS. OFFUTT, twice speaker of the House in the Kentucky Legislature, committed suicide at Omaha, Nebraska, by shooting himself, on the 3d inst. His mind had been unbalanced for some time, and that he would take his life had been feard. Mr. Offutt was a native of Paris, Bourbon county, and had been engaged in the practice of law at Omaha, for several years.

IN a recent speech Senator Hoar, in alluding to the President's expansion policy, said: "It is by example, and not by guns and bayonets, that the great work of America for humanity is to be accomplished. And in my opinion we are today in great danger—a greater danger than we have encountered since the pilgrims landed at Plymouth. The danger is that we are to be transformed from a republic founded on the declaration of independence, guided by the counsels of Washington, into a vulgar commonplace empire founded upon physical force."

THE War Investigating Committee struck pay-dirt when it investigated the alleged mismanagement of Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park. Several surgeons declared the water unfit for use. Requisitions for lime for disinfecting were refused as unnecessary. Requisitions for drugs were returned with important items scratched off, after the usual red-tape delays. Sanitary precautions were neglected, though written protests were made. Blankets used by typhoid patients were reissued without ever being washed, &c. When Major Gen. Breckinridge went there he made an improvement in conditions, and because he complained of the abuses, he has been made to suffer.

THE ELECTION.

The Republicans Swept the Platter

Both parties claim the Lower House in Congress, the Republicans by 30 to 40.

Kentucky has elected 10 Congressmen sure, and claim the tenth, leaving the 11th district to the Republicans.

It seems that the Republicans have got decidedly the best of the election generally.

Berry is elected by about 4,000 in this district.

Both parties are claiming New York, the Republican by 20,000. New York City gave the Democrats 85,000 majority.

The Democrats elected the Appellate Judge in the Third Kentucky District.

Berry's majorities in Boone were as follows: Burlington, 97; Florence, 100; Walton, 64; Rabbit Hash, 102; Bellevue, 32; Petersburg, 160; Bullittsville, 140; Big Bone, 60; Verona, 80; Union, 85; Beaver, 45. Donaldson carried Constance by 8, leaving Berry's majority in the county 945.

The above is not official, and the returns may increase Berry's majority.

The Republicans are well pleased with the result of yesterday's and why should they not be?

The Democrats gained several Congressmen, but fell short of expectations.

There was a big stay home vote in Boone county.

TRUST OR NO TRUST.

An Appeal To Tobacco Growers.

It matters not whether the trust or the anti-trust wins. The fact remains that tobacco growers do not receive a fair living price for their crops. They have heretofore had no say in fixing the price except the costly method of rejecting sales. Forty thousand hogsheads of tobacco in Louisville alone are annually rejected. This costs you $60,000. Why not send three of your number to attend the daily sales and whenever the average price is below cost of production authorize them to stop the sales, by refusing to put up your tobacco until the demand will justify an advance in price? Your traveling expenses in attending your individual sales would more than pay the commissioners. Will you do this? Will you agree to pay them 5 cents per hhd, for refusing to put up your tobacco instead of paying the warehousemen $1,50 for rejecting it? Will you assemble yourselves on the third Monday in November next at your county seats and appoint delegates to a state convention to select men to attend to this business for you? Will you sign this agreement to-wit: "I hereby agree to place the selling of my tobacco in the hands of the Commissioners to be selected by the state convention of tobacco growers to be held in Louisville on the 4th Monday in November, 1898, and to allow them five cents for each hogshead of tobacco sold above the average cost of production to be determined by the State Convention?" "Will you sign this and stick to it? There will be sold in Louisville alone not less than 150,000 hhds, of the 1898 crop. The average cost of this is not less than 8 cents per pound. Unless you do something to protect your interests it will not average more than six cents. This means a loss to you of the enormous sum of Three Million Dollars on one crop of tobacco. Can you stand this? At 5 cents commission on each hhd, the cost would be only $7,500. What is this compared to $3,000,000. Your Commissioners could be on the breaks by the first of December next. If you are compelled to realize on your crop you could use your warehouse receipts as collateral and borrow money until your tobacco is sold. This you could well afford to do rather than suffer a loss of $300,000,000 by a forced sale on an overstocked market or a market without competion. The present report that "The combine is busted," is all bosh. The same report was circulated just before the July convention. Heed it not. To control the price of both the raw material and the manufactured goods offers the manufacturers an opportunity of making millions of dollars at the expense of the producers and consumers which is too enticing for them long to resist. Will you continue to sink down to the "Pauper Labor of Europe" level? Or will you make an effort to free yourselves from the tyranny of insatiable greed?

CONDITION OF THE CROPS.

Washington, November 2.—The monthly summary of crop conditions issued today by the weather bureau says:

The month of October was generally favorable for germination and growth of fall-sown grain throughout the country east of the Rockies, but excessive moisture in the central valleys, east gulf and south Atlantic States, interfered with farm work and caused much damage to crops remaining in the fields. On the Pacific coast, in New England and in the middle Atlantic States, the weather conditions were generally favorable for farming interests.

Generally throughout the central valleys and southern States corn, both the uncut and that in the shock, suffered great damage from excessive rains, which caused sprouting and rotting to a great extent and delayed husking and cribbing.

Except in Texas and portions of the Carolinas, where cotton picking has progressed satisfactorily, the month has been unfavorable for gathering the late crop, much of which in the central portion of the cotton belt has been greatly damaged by rains.

The reports generally indicate that early sowed grain germinated quickly, had made vigorous growth and was in excellent condition at the close of the month.

In Kentucky tobacco in barns has sustained injury from the effect of excessive moisture.

The month has been comparatively free from destructive frosts, although they occurred as far south as Northern Florida.

The largest sweet potato ever grown in Georgia was brought to Tifton by Mr. M. Walker, a farmer living two miles out of town. It is a giant of its species, and measures just four feet ten and one half inches in length. It has been placed on exhibition here, and attracts no little attention. It is of the variety commonly called "nigger killer," and is a dark red, with white meat. About a month ago, before potatoes became fully grown, Mr. Walker brought a yam weighing 9 pounds and measuring 39½ inches in circumference. Better results even than these two specimens are expected when the potatoes are dug.

CROP AND STOCK.

Frosts have preventeda third crop of apples in some localities.

Mt. Sterling is talking of prohibiting the sale of cattleon the streets.

A half interest in the famous stallion, Oakland Baron, was sold last week for $5,000.

Some of the finest crops of tobacco in Woodford county are said to be ruined by rust.

Jonas Weil bought of Josh Barton, of Boyle county, 32 head of 1,400 pound cattle at $4 50.

Frank Adams, of Princeton, has apples of last year's crop which are in a perfect stage of preservation.

Wheat is so rank in many localities in Brown county, O., the farmers have turned their sheep into the fields.

In Madison counry A. E. Barnes sold to S. A. Deatherage sixty feeding cattle of 800 pounds weight at $3 60 per cwt.

The Owensboro canning factory put up 1,338,000 cans of fruit and vegetables this year for which the farmers received $16,000.

Considering the outlay there is more money in hens than there is in cows, but there is none in either unless we treat them right.

In Boyle county a crop of corn estimated at fifteen barrels per acre, was sold at $18 75 per acre, to be shucked and fed in the field.

Wiley E. Wood, of Tennessee, bought in Boyle county, an extra nice bunch of cotton mules at $55 to $75, and some plug horses at $25 to $50.

Joe Stewart, of Breckinridge county, planted three-quarters of an acre in cane, and from the patch he managed to secure 330 gallons of sorghum.

Geo. B. Taylor, of Jessamine county, sold to W. H. Robb, Boston, Mass., a handsome pair of four year-old geldings, by sons of Red Wilkes, for $700.

A. C. Tompkins has bought 25 hogsheads of tobacco from Massie Bros., of Owensboro. The tobacco is stored in Louisville warehouses and it is said the price paid was about $24,000.

J. H. Rice, a tobacco man of Henderson, who has made a trip through Henderson, Hancock, Webster and Hopkins, says that the buyer who expects to get much tobacco at $7 and $5 will get left. He says that tobacco is going to be very high for several reasons.

At the sale of Mr. J. D. Grover on Wednesday last 45 feeding cattle, of weight 1,070 to 1,190 pounds, sold in two lots at $3 90 and $3 97 per cwt; three work mules at $75, $80 and $99.50 per head, stock hogs at $3 per cwt, brood sows at $1.50 to $2 per cwt; wheat 57 cents per bushel.

It is quite noticeable that the country buyers are going slow in the purchase of tobacco in the barn this season and that many of the early purchases will be disappointing. A buyer can be an expert in the art of buying, but make many mistakes in buying a crop in the barn this year, when so much of it is house burned and diseased. It is taking a great risk to purchase a crop with such conditions while hanging in the barn, and the country Burley buyers have tumbled to fact and are waiting until the crop has been handled and its condition better observed.—Weed.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

Corn is selling at from $1 to $1.25 per barrel.

Quite a pretty wedding occurred at the beautiful country home of Judge and Mrs. J. W. Greene, near town, last thursday, the contracting parties being Dr. W. H. Yager, of Campbellsburg, and Miss Corda Gaines, a niece of Judge Greene. The wedding was a very quiet affair, only a few of the most intimate friends being present. Dr. Yager is a brother of Prof. Yager, of Georgetown college, and is a rising young physician of flattering prospects. They left for Chicago, where they will make their future home.

THE election here passed off very quietly, Tuesday. A full vote was not polled.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

Alfred Straud, colored, met with a dangerous and painful accident on Monday. He was making preparations to go hunting and had a muzzle loading shot gun. Attempting to load it he made a mistake and put both loads into one barrel. Shooting the gun off the barrel exploded tearing off his right hand and maiming and lacerating his arm in a frightful manner.

At Cartersville school house in Grant county, last Friday evening, Albert Jeffers and Henry Jones had a difficulty that resulted in the death of Jeffers. It seems that Jones had been paying devoted attentions to the daughter of Mr. Jeffers much to the displeasure of the parent, however agreeable it might have been to Miss Jeffers. On the night in question there was "meeting" at the school house conducted by the Rev. Isaac Strobridge. After church was over and the congregation stepped outside the door, Mr. Jones offered Miss Jeffers his arm and started to go home with her. To this Albert, her father, interposed very vigorous objection. He told young Jones that he did not want him to go home with or pay any attention to his daughter, and insisted that he should go away. This Jones declined to do and started on his way with the daughter. Jeffers then drew a cane he had in his hand and struck Jones across the arm and shoulders a very vicious blow. Jones turned around, drew his hand from his outside coat pocket and hit Jeffers over the head with a stone he had concealed in his pocket and wrapped in a handkerchief. The blow took effect on the head of Jeffers and felled him to the ground like a beef. He was carried to his home by friends and doctors hastily called. It was found that his skull was fractured. Jeffers died Tuesday. Jones is in jail charged with murder.

W. T. Bennette, a prosperous farmer, of East Williamstown, living near the Pendleton county line, dropped from the horse he was riding along the road, one day last week, a corpse. He was about fifty years old and a prosperous and substantial citizen.

The members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in all parts of the world are to be asked to contribute $20,000,000 for a "Twentieth century thank offering fund." The money will be devoted to charitable and educational institutions now maintained by the Methodist church, and will be one of the grandest contributions any organization has ever undertaken for the benefit of the human race. The task of raising so large a sum as $20,000,000, seemingly impracticable, is by no means impossible, say the Bishop interested.

Teachers' Association.

The Teachers' Association of Magisterial District No. 6, was held at the Pt. Pleasant school house November 5th, 1898.

The Association was called to order by Supt. Voshell, and after some preliminary remarks concerning the good order of the schools of Boone county, the programme that had been previously prepared was taken up and discussed.

Mental Arithmetic, the first subject on the programme, was discussed very ably by G. S. Hann, Rev. and Mrs. Watkins and Supt. Voshell, after which dinner that had been prepared by the ladies of the district, was served.

Immediately after dinner Primary Geography was discussed by Mrs. Watkins, E. S. Mathews, G. S. Hann and Supt. Voshell.

The teachers to whom Grammar was assigned were not present, and School Government was discussed by Mr. Cortland, Mr. G. S. Hann and Supt. Voshell.

The next subject, History, was discussed by Miss Lula Souther, E. S. Mathews and G. S. Hann.

The Superintendent appointed Mrs. Watkins, C. R. Cortland and E. S. Mathews a committee to make out a programme for the next Association, to be held at Verona, on the fourth Saturday of the present month.

Mr. G. S. Hann was requested by the Superintendent to draft resolutions for this meeting.

The committee reported the following programme for the meeting at Verona:

Male vs. Female Teachers—Prof. G. E. Thomas.

Primary Grammar—Miss Hamrick.

Advanced Grammar — Miss Lucy Clayton.

Kentucky History—Miss Ella Norman.

History—Miss Lizzie Roberts.

Reading—Miss Marie Korn.

Physiology—Miss Lizzie Kipp.

Geography—Miss Annie Lee Wolf.

Mental Arithmetic—Miss Jeannette Chambers.

The following resolutions reported by Mr. Hann were adopted:

Resolved—

1st. That we, as teachers, offer our heart-felt thanks to the patrons of Pt. Pleasant school district for the bountiful dinner they spread before us; also for their presence, which always encourages the teachers.

2d. That we congratulate ourselves in having Supt. Voshell for our leader, and extend to him our thanks for his untiring efforts to do justice to all and to make our Association so beneficial.

3d. We also wish to praise the trustees and patrons of Pt. Pleasant school for having such a lovely and well equipped school house for the benefit of their children and the country in general

E. S MATHEWS, Secretary.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The tobacco trade the past week has continued at about the same prices, with a little more snap in the market at times for the better grades, which were offered more freely than for some time, but prices were not up to the holders' ideas for these handsome redried tobaccos, as they have been calculating to get from 18 to 22 cents. Prices have ranged from 14 to 18 cents, and a few of the shippers have been disposing of their holdings at the market prices. Medium and low grades continue in demand and were firm. The only reason we see for the good prices of these lower grades and the low figures for the very best tobaccos is that the manufacturers are producing manufactured tobacco to compete with competition, and they are using the lower grades of leaf, and until the public demands better tobacco we can only expect the slight difference to exist in the prices of the medium and best grades.

The stocks are gradually decreasing and there is no doubt the entire stocks on hand will be required to serve the manufacturers before the new crop can be manipulated for use.

A great many of our tobacco men are of the opinion that the continued agitation of the manufacturers' combination has a depressing effect on the leaf trade, but when everything gets into working order the leaf trade will revive, and the small stocks will be taken at better figures.

The new crop, in small quantities, is coming into market, but being in winter condition, and with only a few buyers for the new goods prices are not established to base the future upon. The desire to get hogsheads of new has caused some very good prices to be paid. The crop shows some damage by house-burn, and it is the general impression that a good portion of the crop has some damage in this way, but we hear that certain sections of the country have some excellent tobacco, and while it does not show the color that is desirable, it will be a good manufacturing tobacco.

THE opposition to the annexation of the Philippines grows stronger day by day. Last winter the President was understood as considering such a policy "criminal aggression."

A LESSON ON WRESTLING.

Plant Well Your Feet Before Grappling With Your Opponent.

So Christians Must Be Ready to Meet Evil Powers—Carrying a Bible Will Not Win in the Fight—Rev. Dr. Talmage's Sermon.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage selects one of the boldest figures of the Bible to present most practical and encouraging truths. Text, Ephesians vi., 12: "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

Squeamishness and fastidiousness were never charged against Paul's rhetoric. In the war against evil he took the first weapon he could lay his hand on. For illustration, he employed the theater, the arena, the foot race, and there was nothing in the Isthmian game, with its wreath of pine leaves, or Pythian game, with its wreath of laurel and palm; or Nemean game, with its wreath of parsley; or any Roman circus, but he felt he had a right to put it in sermon or epistle, and are you not surprised that in my text he calls upon a wrestling bout for suggestiveness? Plutarch says that wrestling is the most artistic and cunning of athletic games. We must take a wide difference between this, the lowest of spectacles, and wrestling, which is an effort in sport to put down another on floor or ground, and we, all of us indulged in it in our boyhood days, if we were healthful and plucky. The ancient wrestlers were first bathed in oil, and then sprinkled with sand. The third throw decided the victory, and many a man who went down in the first throw or second throw in the third throw was on his top and his opponent under. The Romans did not like this game very much, for it was not savage enough, no blows or kicks being allowed in the game. They preferred the foot of hungry panther on the breast of fallen martyr.

In wrestling the opponents would bow in apparent suavity, advance face to face, put down both feet solidly, take each other by the arms, nad push each other backward and forward until the work began in real earnest, and there were contortions and strangulations and violent strokes of the foot of one contestant against the foot of the other, tripping him up, with struggle that threatened apoplexy or death to the defeated fell, and the shouts of the spectators greeted the victor. I guess Paul had seen some such contest, and it reminded him of the struggle of the soul with temptation, and the struggle of truth with error, and the struggle of heavenly forces against apollyonic powers, and he dictates my text to an amanuensis, for all his letters, save the one to Philemon, seem to have been dictated, and as the amanuensis goes on with his work I hear the groan and laugh and shout of earthly and celestial belligerents: "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

I notice that as these wrestlers advanced to throw each other they bowed one to the other. It was a civility, not only in Grecian an Roman games, but in later day, in all the wrestling bouts at Clerkenwell, England, and in the famous wrestling match during the reign of Henry VII, in St. Giles' Field, between men of Westminster and people of London. However rough a twist and a hard pull each wrestler contemplated giving his opponent, they approached each other with politeness and suavity. The genuflexions, the affability, the courtesy in no wise hindered the deliberateness of the contest. Well, Paul, I see what you mean. In this awful struggle between right and wrong, we must not forget to be gentlemen and ladies. Affability never hinders, but always helps. You are powerless as soon as you get mad. Do not call rum sellers murderers. Do not call infidels fools. Do not call higher critics reprobates. Do not call all card players and theater goers children of the devil. Do not say that the dance breaks through into hell. Do not deal in vituperation and billingsgate and contempt and adjectives dynamitic. The other side can beat us at that. Their dictionaries have more objurgation and brimstone.

We are in the strength of God to throw flat on its back every abomination that curses the earth, but let us approach our mighty antagonist with suavity. Hercules, son of Jupiter and Alcmene, will by a precursor of smiles be helped rather than damaged for the performance of his twelve labors. Let us be as wisely strategic in religious circles as attorneys in courtrooms, who are complimentary to each other in the opening remarks, before they come into legal struggle such as that which left Rufus Choate or David Paul Brown triumphant or defeated. People who get into a rage in reformatory work accomplish nothing but the depletion of their own nervous system. There is such a thing as having a gun so hot at the touchhole that it explode, killing the one that sets it off. There are some reformatory meetings to which I always decline to go and take part, because they are apt to become demonstrations of bad temper. I never like to hear a man swear even though he swear on the right side. The very Paul who in my text employed in illustration the wrestling match, behaved on a memorable occasion as we ought to behave. The translators of the Bible made an unintentional mistake when they represented Paul as insulting the people of Athens by speaking of "the unknown god whom ye ignorantly worship."

Instead of charging them with ignorance, the original indicates he complimented them by suggesting that they were very religious; but as they confessed that there was some things they did not understand about God, he proposed to say some things concerning Him, beginning where they had left off. The same Paul who said in one place, "Be courteous," and who had noticed the bow preceding the wrestling match, here exercises sanvities before he proceeds practically to throw down the rocky side of the Acropolis the whole Panthenon of Idolatries. Minerva and Jupiter smashed up with the rest of them. In this holy war polished rifles will do more execution than blunderbusses. Let our wrestlers bow as they go into the struggle which will leave all perdition under and all Heaven on top.

Remember also that the wrestlers went through severe and continuous course of preparation for their work. They were put upon such diet as would best develop their muscle. As Paul says: "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." The wrestlers were put under complete discipline—bathing, gymnastics, struggle in sport with each other to develop strength and give quickness to dodge of head and trip of foot; stooping to lift each other off the ground; suddenly rushing forward; suddenly pulling backward; putting the left foot behind the other's right foot, and getting his opponent off his balance; hard training for days and weeks and months, so that when they met it was giant clutching giant. And, my friends, if we do not want ourselves to be thrown in this wrestle with the sin and error of the world, we had better get ready by Christian discipline, by holy self-denial, by constant prudence, by submitting to divine supervisal and direction. Do not begrudge the time and the money for that young man who is in preparation for the ministry, spending two years in grammar school and four years in college and three years in theological seminary. I know that nine years are a big slice to take off a man's active life, but if you realized the height and strength of the archangels of evil in our time with which that young man is going to wrestle, you would not think nine years of preparation were too much. An uneducated minister was successful in other days, but not in this time, loaded with schools and colleges. A man who wrote me the other day a letter asking advice, as he felt called to preach the Gospel, began the word "God" with a little "g." That kind of a man is not called to preach the Gospel. Illiterate men, preaching the Gospel, quote for their own encouragement the scriptural passage, "Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it." Yes! He will fill it with wind. Preparation for this wrestling is absolutely necessary. Many years ago Dr. Newman and Dr. Sunderland, on the platform of Brigham Young's tabernacle at Salt Lake City, Utah, gained the victory because they had so long been skillful wrestlers for God. Otherwise Brigham Young, who was himself a giant in some things, would have thrown them out of the window. Get ready in Bible classes. Get ready in Christian Endeavor meetings. Get ready in giving testimony in obscure places, before giving testimony in conspicuous places.

Your going around with a Bagster Bible with flaps at the edges, under your arm, does not qualify you for the work of an evangelist. In this day of profuse gab, remember that it is not merely capacity to talk, but the fact that you have something to say, that is going to fit you for the struggle into which you are to go with a smile on your face and illumination on your brow, but out of which you will not come until your physical and mental and moral and religious energies have been taxed to the utmost and you have not a nerve left, or a thought unexpended, or a prayer unsaid, or a sympathy unwept. In this struggle between right and wrong accept no challenge on platform or in newspaper unless you are prepared. Do not misapply the story of Goliath the Great and David the Little. David had been practicing with a sling on dogs and wolves and bandits, and a thousand times had he swirled a stone around his head before he aimed at the forehead of the giant and tumbled him backward, otherwise the big foot of Goliath would almost have covered up the crushed form of the son of Jesse.

Notice also that the success of a wrestler depended on his having his feet well planted before he grappled his opponent. Much depends upon the way the wrestler stands. Standing on an uncertain piece of ground, or bearing all his weight on right foot or all his weight on left foot, he is not ready. A slight cuff of his antagonist will capsize him. A stroke of the heel of the other wrestler will trip him. And in this struggle for God and righteousness, as well as for our own souls, we want our feet firmly planted in the gospel—both feet on the Rock of Ages. It will not do to believe the Bible in spots, or think some of it true and some of it untrue.

You just make up your mind that the story of the Garden of Eden is an allegory, and the epistle of James an interpolation, and that the miracles of Christ can be accounted for on natural grounds, without any belief in the supernatural, and the first time you are interlocked in a wrestle with sin and Satan you will go under and your feet will be higher than your head. It will not do to have one foot on a rock and the other on the sand. The old Book would long ago have gone to pieces if it had been vulnerable. But of the millions of Bibles that have been printed within the last 25 years not one chapter has been omitted, and the omission of one chapter would have been the cause of the rejection of the whole edition. Alas! for those who, while trying to prove that Jonah was never swallowed of a whale, themselves get swallowed of the whale of unbelief, which digests but never ejects its victims. The inspiration of the Bible is not more certain than the preservation of the Bible in its present condition. After so many centuries of assault on the Book, would it not be a matter of economy, to say the least—economy of brain and economy of stationery, and economy of printers' ink—if the batteries now assaulting the book would change their aim and be trained against some other books, and the world shown that Walter Scott did not write "The Lady of the Lake," nor Homer "The Iliad," nor Virgil "The Georgics," nor Thomas Moore "Lalla Rookh," or that Washington's "Farewell Address" was written by Thomas Paine, and that the war of the revolution never occurred. That attempt would be quite as successful as this long-timed attack anti-Biblical, and then it would be new. Oh, keep out of this wrestling bout with the ignorance and the wretchedness of the world unless you feel that both feet are planted in the eternal veracities of the Book of Almighty God!

The time is coming—I know it will quicken your pulse when I mention it—when the last mighty evil of the world will be grappled by righteousness and thrown. Which of the great evils will survive all the others I know not, whether war, or revenge, or fraud, or lust, or intemperance or gambling, or Sabbath desecration. It will be the evil the most thoroughly entrenched, most completely reenforced, most patronized by wealth and fashion and pomp, most applauded by all the principalities and powers and rulers of darkness. It will stand, with grim visage, looking down upon the graves of all the other slain abominations—graves dug by the hot shovels of despair, and surmounted by such epitaphiology as this: "It biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder," "The wages of sin is death" "Her house inclineth unto death and her paths unto the dead."

"There is a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof is death." Yes! I imagine we have arrived at the time when we may say, Yonder stands the last and only great evil of all the world to be wrestled down. It stands, not only looking upon the graves of all the entombed and epitaphed iniquities of the world, but ever and anon gazing upward in defiance of the heavens and shaking its fist at the Almighty, saying: "Nothing can put me down. I have seen all the brother enemies of the human race wrestled down and destroyed, but there is no arm or foot, human or angelic or Deific, that can throw me. I have ruined whole generations, and I swear by all the thrones of diabolism that I will ruin this generation. Come on, all ye churches, and all ye reformatory institutions, and all ye legislatures, and all ye thrones! I challenge you! I plant my feet on this red-hot rock of the world's woe. I stretch forth my arms for the mightiest wrestle any world has ever seen. Come on! Come on!" Then righteousness will accept the challenge and the two mighty wrestlers will grapple, while all the galleries of earth and Heaven look down from one side, and all the fiery chasms of perdition look up from the other side. The two wrestlers sway to and fro, and turn this way and that, and now the monster, evil, seems the mightier of the two, and now righteousness seems about to triumph. The prize is worth a struggle, for it is not a chaplet of laurel or palm, but the rescue of a world, and a wreath put on the brow by Him who promised, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown." Then world, earth, Heaven and hell—hold their breath while waiting for the result of this struggle, when with one mighty swing of an arm muscled with Omnipotence, righteousness hurls the last evil, first on its knees and then on its face, and then rolling off and down, with a crash wilder than that with which Sampson hurled the Temple of Dagon when he got hold of its two chief pillars, but more like the throwing of Satan out of Heaven, as described by John Milton.

> Him the Almighty power hurled
> Headlong flaming from the ethereal sky,
> With hideous ruin and combustion, down
> To bottomless perdition; there to dwell
> In adamantine chains and penal fire,
> Who durst defy the Omnipotent to arms.
> Nine times the space that measures day and night
> To mortal man, he with his horrid crew
> Lay vanquished, rolling in the fiery gutt,
> Confounded, though immortal."

Aye! That suggests a cheering thought, that if all the realms of demonology are on the other side all the realms of angelology are on our side, among them Gabriel and Michael, the archangel, and the Angel of the New Covenant, and they are now talking over the present awful struggle and final glorious triumph; talking amid the alabaster pillars and in the ivory palaces and along the broad ways and grand avenues of the great capital of the universe, and amid the spray of fountains with rainbows like the rainbow round the throne; and as they take their morning ride in the chariots with white horses, bitted with gold, that were seen by John in vision apocalyptic and while waiting in temples for the one hundred and forty and four thousand to chant, accompanied by harpers and trumpeters and thunderings and hallelujahs like the voice of many waters. Yes, all Heaven is on our side, and the "high places of wickedness" spoken of in my text are not so high as the high places of Heaven, where there are enough reserve forces, if our earthly forces should be overpowered, or in cowardice fall back, to sweep down some morning at daybreak and take all this earth for God before the city clocks could strike 12 for noon. And the cabinet of heaven, the most august cabinet in the universe, made up of three—God, the Father, God, the Son, and God, the Holy Ghost—are now in session in the King's palace and they are with us and they are going to see us through, and they invite us, as soon as we have done our share of the work, to go up and see them and celebrate the final victory that is more sure to come than tomorrow's sunrise.

The latest roster of the Japanese navy shows that of the 15,000 men in the service 5.73 per cent. are between the ages of 15 and 20 years, and 88.8 per cent. between the ages of 20 and 32 years. Only 1.05 per cent. are over 40 years, and most of these are officers.

NON-REDEEMABLE MONEY.

How Our Financial Foundation Was Rendered Shaky in 1873.

Money may be divided into two classes, primary and representative. By the term primary money is meant money that is not redeemable in any other money. It is endowed with legal tender qualities. It is a thing of value. It is the substance, not the shadow. It may be used to redeem other money, but it is not redeemable itself. It bears the same relation to a stable system of finance that the foundation of a building does to the superstructure. It is the foundation of the system upon which to build representative money. If so much representative money rests upon it that the center of gravity falls without the base, the whole system topples over. Financiers, instead of adding representative or credit money, on an insecure foundation, add to it by adding to the base. A wise man in building looks after the foundation. This is his first thought. It is of supreme importance, yea, absolutely essential, in order to have a safe, permanent building, to have a foundation able to support it. So it is with the financial system. It must be built from the bottom up—not from the top down. In 1873 one-half of the base of our system was taken away. It was stolen by a few vandals during the night. It made the base too narrow. Instead of subtracting we ought to have added. Our system would then not be top-heavy as it is now. The center of gravity would be within the base, and the angry waves of discontent would not affect it. Panics would not come. If so, they would be of short duration. Everything would soon resume its normal condition and the people would be prosperous and happy. But the scene has changed. We have too little base and too much top. We lack strength. When silver was demonetized one-half the foundation was destroyed. The whole superstructure has been wobbly ever since. The representative money is too heavy for the primary, and our condition is unhealthful, abnormal. To restore healthfulness to our financial system, silver must be made primary money. It ought to be remonetized and endowed with full legal tender power in the payment of all debts. It ought to be made as good as gold. It should be taken from the top of the column and placed at the base. This would give strength and tone to the whole system. It would double the base, whereas before it was cut in two. With both gold and silver as primary money, the strength of the base is doubled, consequently it will support twice the representative money that either metal will alone. For illustration, say there is $600,000,000 of gold in the United States. Gold being the only primary money—the only money that does not need to be redeemed—it follows that $600,000,000 of representative money may be safely issued because there is a gold dollar behind each paper promise to pay a dollar on demand. When redeemed, it may be reissued because the gold is still in existence with which to redeem it again. Under our present system the United States cannot safely have out more promises to pay dollars than it has dollars in gold. But under the bimetallic plan, take silver from the representative column and place it in the primary as it was before February 12, 1873, it increases the base over $628,000,000 which would give a metallic basis of $1,228,000,000. An equal amount of paper promises to pay money could be issued on the coin which would give the people $2,456,000,000 of a circulating medium. This would give a per capita circulation of $17.50 of gold and silver, whereas there is now only about $8.55 in actual money. The treasury department claims there is a per capita circulation of $22.55. It counts gold, silver and paper as money, which is wrong. Gold is the only money we have. The greenback bears the same relation to the government, or to the people, that a man's individual note bears to himself. It is not money. It is a promise to pay money on demand. It is not a part of his wealth. It is an evidence of debt. Silver is not money in the estimation of some of our financiers. It is no more than a piece of paper. It represents money—gold. It holds a quasi position in our monetary system. While the silver dollar has never been redeemed in gold, yet the treasury notes which are based upon bullion purchased by the government, are redeemed in gold. It follows that it is only a question of time until the silver dollar itself will be redeemed in gold, if in the estimation of the secretary of the treasury, it is necessary, to do so, to maintain the parity of the two metals. John G. Carlisle, late secretary of the treasury, said this would be done, if necessary, and as there is no difference between the administration of William McKinley and Grover Cleveland on the financial question the presumption is that it will be done sooner or later. This plan of redemption destroys silver as primary money. And if money based upon it is redeemed in gold it is virtually equivalent to redeeming the dollar itself in gold. Under the law the greenback is redeemable in coin, but the treasury officials construe the word coin to mean gold. Or they virtually do the same thing in giving the creditor the option in which kind of money he will be paid. There is no authority for such a construction of the law, however. It is a plain perversion of the word. But as long as our officials lack honesty to enforce the law aright, the people will have to suffer. Such conduct merits the severest condemnation, and it is strange that any man who regards his oath of office will do it.

REPUBLICAN ROT.

The Ridiculous Claims That the Administration Organs Are Now Making.

One of the many discreditable characteristics of the republican party is its assumption that the people of the United States are fools—that they can be made to believe that black is white and that they are incapable of remembering national events for a period of six or eight months together. This characteristic has been exhibited in campaigns without number and it is particularly manifest in the one now in progress.

Republican orators and republican newspapers assert, day after day, that the war with Spain was a republican war and that democratic success at the coming elections will be regarded as a condemnation of that war. The intelligence of the people is insulted by the assumption that they have already forgotten the series of events beginning with the destruction of the Maine and culminating in the congressional resolution of April 21 which inaugurated the war with Spain.

It was a republican war, we are told. Has anyone forgotten how, week after week, the republican house of representatives, cowering under the lash of Thomas B. Reed sat silent and supine while indignation of the nation was at fever heat? Has anyone forgotten how the report of the Maine court of inquiry was withheld from congress upon one pretext or another while Hanna, Elkins and McCook oscillated between Wall street and the white house?

Are the people of this country a multitude of imbeciles that they are expected to ignore history so recent that it is in every man's mind? A republican war! Ask Hon. Albert J. Hopkins about that. Along in early April he, too, believed it was to be a republican war. He believed that the speaker of the house of representatives was repressing republican sentiment and he organized a revolt against that official. He took his grievance to the white house, and what he heard there caused himself and his followers to slink back to the capitol like so many whipped spaniels. They did not even whimper from that time forward. They had discovered that so far as the administration was concerned it was not "a republican war."

"Give us 24 hours and we've got 'em licked," said Marcus A. Hanna on the 17th of April. Of whom was he speaking—of the Spaniards? Not at all. The dictator of the republican party, the mentor of the president of the United States, was referring to those members of the house of representatives who were endeavoring to bring to a vote a resolution declaring war against the kingdom of Spain. He was striving to avert such a declaration, and to the very last moment he struggled against it with all the power and influence he could muster. And yet it was "a republican war!" The republican president, the republican speaker, the republican congress, the supreme boss of the republican party all working tooth and nail for peace at any price, yet six months later the American people are calmly assured that it was "a republican war!"

Undoubtedly there were republicans in congress who favored war, whose wrath boiled within them at the cowardly and unpatriotic policy adopted by their party leaders. But had it not been for the democrats in both houses who from first to last maintained the nation's honor—who, with the saving remnant of patriotic republicans, bade fair to beat the administration, the speaker and the benny-javed boss on their own ground—there would have been no war at all. The Maine would still be unavenged and Hanna would be raking in the profits from Spanish bonds.

Dragged by the nape of the neck, squealing, scratching and protesting, into a struggle for the preservation of the nation's dignity and honor, and yet a few short months later proclaiming from stump and sanctum that it was "a republican war!"

—It is a little singular to find Mr. Hanna stoutly maintaining the war policy of the administration. He didn't favor it along in April. He didn't want war at all, and he proclaimed his sentiments from the housetops. Why, then, should he be shouting the praises of war? Is it because war brings profitable army contracts in its train?—Chicago Chronicle.

—More trusts have been formed since President McKinley was inaugurated than in five years preceding his inauguration although a week after his inauguration the supreme court of the United States announced a decision that was broad enough to break down every trust in the land and was designed by the court to bring about just that result. That decision was against the Trans-Missouri Traffic association, an illegal combination of railroads west of the Missouri river.—Columbus (O.) Press-Post.

RICH GIFTS TO THE POPE.

"Oom Paul's" Magnificent Million-Dollar Diamond and Its Predecessors.

"He has been a pretty good man," remarked the informal President Paul Kruger of the Transvaal, "and I think I will send him a present."

Following this remark, Oom Paul purchased the biggest diamond in the world, worth at least $1,000,000, and sent it as a gift to Pope Leo XIII., to illuminate his last days in the vatican.

In 20 years the pope has received $10,000,000 in diamonds.

The ruby and diamond ring given him by the sultan cost $100,000, and the jeweled toilet service presented to him by the shah of Persia cost $700,000.

On one occasion, Queen Victoria, being especially grateful to his holiness for a favor, sent him a pectoral cross with a single large diamond in the center valued at $500,000.

Another time the Catholics of the United States made up a purse and sent a diamond worth $20,000.

During his life the pope has received gifts worth not less than $30,000,000.

The empress of Austria gave him recently a gold casket, largely traced in precious enamels. The casket was valued at $100,000, yet it contained nothing. The pope used the casket for his diamond crosses. Three magnificent pieces reposed in the casket. One of these was the United States cross, another was the Victoria cross, and another was a cross sent him from one of the richest women in the United States, who spent $150,000 for a plain gold cross with diamonds at the points.

The queen regent of Spain, wishing to remember his holiness, purchased with money out of the royal coffers a chalice for $200,000, and in the chalice little Alphonso laid the largest diamond he owned. The Spanish cabinet followed him to present it to the pope, and his own baby fingers selected it.

Besides these beautiful presents, the pope has received many contributions in solid gold. One of these, during the queen's jubilee, amounted to $3,000,000; and on his birthday, a year ago, he received $200,000 in gold pieces. None of this money has been spent by the pope, and it is thought that he has some project for disposing of it at his death.

In legacies during the last 20 years the pope has received from wealthy Catholics a gift of $22,000,000, and in moneyed gifts from individuals he has received $4,000,000.

In the vatican there is a souvenir room, which is one of the pope's sitting-rooms, and there are gifts from the presidents of the United States, from Central and South American republics, from Indian princes and from native chiefs of Oceanica. They have sent him pieces of rare wood and trophies of various kinds, one of these being an alleged autograph of Columbus.—N. Y. Journal.

Exemplifying Its Principles.

"Let me through!" exclaimed the excited man at the railway station, struggling to force his way through the gate. "I can catch that train!"

"What's the use of talking like that?" said the gateman, pushing him back. "It's a hundred yards away, and going faster than you can run to save your life. There'll be another train starting in 20 minutes, anyhow."

"Yes, but, good heavens!" roared the excited man, "that'll make me 20 minutes late! I'm due at Auburn Park in 30 minutes exactly to organize a 'Don't Worry' club!"—Chicago Tribune.

Sentiment.

Minister—I hope that you fully appreciate the fact that when you are married it is for life, and that the obligations you assume are most solemn?

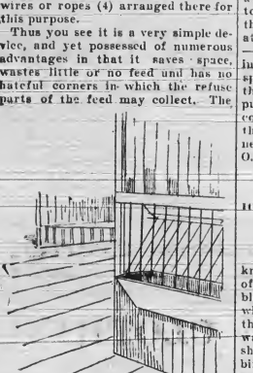
MANGER FOR HORSES.



Just the Thing Wherever the Space for a Horse Stable Is Not Capable of Expansion.

Owing to the unprofitable expense of roofing any more space than is absolutely necessary, one of the great problems in the interior arrangement of farm buildings is the economizing of room. Such being the case, every practicable device possible should be sought out—and when one is discovered that answers the purpose fairly well it ought never to be forgotten.

This is highly applicable to the horse manger shown herewith, for not only is it convenient and economical, but just the thing wherever the space for a horse stable is small, as usually occurs when the stalls are arranged across one end of the barn, or if so that the horses face the barn floor.

As can be seen in the illustration, in place of the commonly wide and deep manger construct a trough (1) about a foot wide and the same in depth, using hardwood boards for the purpose, if possible. In front of this, away from where the horse stands, insert iron rods or tough wooden poles (2) the full width of the trough and just far enough apart so that the animal can get its nose between them to pull out the hay or fodder placed for it by its keeper upon the slat support (3). And how is this held in position? Why, by being hinged at the bottom and supported from above at regular intervals or being attached to wires or ropes (4) arranged there for this purpose.

Thus you see it is a very simple device, and yet possessed of numerous advantages in that it saves space, wastes little or no feed and has no hateful corners in which the refuse parts of the feed may collect. The fact is, this affair faces the barn floor all seed and chaff must fall through the slat support onto the same, and as this in turn may be scraped up and fed to the cows, not a single thing edible need to be wasted.

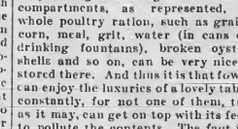
Provided corn fodder is at any time largely fed, all one has to do is to let down the slat support from the top occasionally and out upon the floor will roll the stalks, whence they can be easily conveyed to any spot desired, which, of course, should not be the manure pile, since cornstalks are always a nuisance in dung of any kind, unless it is a mulch designed for some special purpose.

And how about the economizing of room? Why, if the manger is next to the barn floor, when drawing in hay or the like drop down the slat support from the top, leave it so, and it will be entirely out of the way.

As to the material for constructing this support, generally speaking it is best made of half-inch boards four inches wide, and in fastening it at the bottom so that it will swing up and down use common four-inch strap hinges, these serving the purpose almost as well as iron ones, and being incomparably cheaper.—Frederick O. Sibley, in N. Y. Tribune.

THE USE OF PUMPKINS.

Those Classes of Stock to Which They Can Be Fed to Great Advantage from Now On.



There are three classes of stock to which pumpkins can be fed with great profit from this time on; the growing pig, the lamb and the milk cow—the two former to be preferred. One of the great benefits of feeding pumpkins, and particularly the seeds, lies in the fact that they act as a vermifuge and hence serve a valuable purpose at this time of year in ridding both these classes of stock of the worms that do so much to hinder their thrift. This is true especially of sheep. About all their diseases may be summed up in one word—worms—and while pumpkins will perhaps do little injury to lung worms or grubs in the head, they will prove valuable in getting rid of the other vermicular infections. The old grandmother who makes pumpkin seed into tea and feeds it to her grandchild, whose mother's inexperience does not enable her to take care of it properly, is doing about the right thing. She knows that the youngster has worms, and her long experience has told her that pumpkin seed tea and worms are at sword's points. We suspect that if our grandmothers had the management of the lambs there would be less complaint of worms. Some way we always did think that a grandmother who had cared for seven or eight children and a dozen or more grandchildren had more sense than a good many surgeons.—Journal of Agriculture.

FOR FEEDING POULTRY.

A Useful Device Which Is Described as a Joy to Both the Keeper and the Fowls.

Fowls are always and forever soiling their food when it is "dished out" to them in the ordinary haphazard way. This is especially true if the birds are confined, and as a large percentage of life-sustaining material thus goes to waste, not to mention the rendering of as much more revolting unfit for the stomach of even an ostrich, little matter who the poulterer is, he can ill afford to do without some sort of a feeding device, of which the one pictured herewith is most excellent in every respect.

Cheapness and simplicity combined with practicability make it indeed a joy to both the keeper and the fowls. As can be seen, it consists of an ordinary wooden trough, thin boards bent into and held in position by being firmly nailed to the uppers of the end pieces, which in turn are hinged to the lower parts on one side and hooked on the other. By this arrangement the poulterer is enabled to "open" the affair like a trunk, clean out the trough and then fill it again with food.

By having the trough divided into compartments, as represented, a whole poultry ration, such as grain, corn, meal, grit, water (in cans or drinking fountains), broken oyster shells and so on, can be very nicely stored there. And thus it is that fowls can enjoy the luxuries of a lovely table constantly, for not one of them, try as it may, can get on top with its feet to pollute the contents. The fact is, the birds can only insert their heads at the sides and ends, and simply eat—not peck one another, remember, as in the case of an open dish, since the space is too limited for them to move their heads about so as to execute any pugilistic maneuvers. Hence all may come and eat in peace, and that to their heart's content, there being never once a "table jar."—Frederick O. Sibley, in N. Y. Tribune.

VERTIGO IN POULTRY.

It Is Pressure of Blood on the Brain, in Most Cases Caused by Overfeeding.

Usually when fowls have what is known as "twisted neck" or show signs of vertigo the cause is pressure of blood on the brain. The next point is, what causes the pressure of blood on the brain? Such fowls are nearly always apparently healthy, and, in fact, should show good condition, as only birds that are well fed suffer from such ailment. When fowls are on a range they procure much more food than might be supposed, and to give corn at night, especially in summer, is to put them in such a condition as mentioned. Of course, in the winter season corn may be used, but farmers and poultrymen should understand that when a hen has free range she becomes very fat and has all the opportunity for procuring more food than she needs. The fact that a hen may not appear fat may be a delusion. If all of the fowls—hens and chicks—are affected, it is a sure sign that something is wrong with the food. It is true that the seeds of some weeds may be at fault, but usually the cause is high feeding. The remedy is to put the birds up and give them nothing for 48 hours; then give one ounce of lean meat to each hen once a day for ten days—no other food—and after that feed a variety once a day.—Farm and Fireside.

The Best Food for Eggs.

The best food for making hens lay is lean meat. When the supply of eggs falls stop all other foods and feed lean meat, or liver (any cheap meat will answer), and it will be found superior to anything that can be used. Green bone that contains a large proportion of lean meat is even better, provided the fat portions are removed from the bone. It will be found cheaper than grain because it will make eggs. One reason why hens sometimes fail to lay when they have plenty of grain is that they require a change, and meat contains the material for supplying the albumen of the eggs, and is therefore a substance that the hens must have or they cannot perform service. If the hens are fat give one ounce of lean meat each day, allowing no other food, for a week or two.—American Gardening.

Hints on Alfalfa Culture.

In growing alfalfa the land must be plowed deep and harrowed fine. Manure and fertilizer should be applied liberally and lime applied to the land in the fall. Sow the seed in the spring, using ten to twenty pounds of seed, according to circumstances, sowing broadcast if the land is clear of grass and weeds. If not it will be an advantage to drill the seeds in rows close together and cultivate the first year with wheel-hoes. Once established, an alfalfa plot will last for years, as the roots go down to great depths and secure moisture. In this section farmers should sow a few rows by way of experiment in the spring and keep the plants free of grass and weeds.—Dakota Field and Farm.

How to Dispose of Manure.

Don't leave manure in heaps about the stable. It ferments and the ammonia resulting is not good for the stock, while the manure is fire-fanged until it is useless. Haul the manure away from the stable and spread it in the fields, or if this may not be done, keep it in a thin, flat pile. It may get badly leached if left this way, but that is preferable to having it burned while in a pile.

FOR CHILBLAINS.

These painful and annoying disfigurements come from various causes—sometimes from a weak constitution, sometimes from lack of proper nourishment.

Children are more subject to chilblains than grown people, but frequently outgrow the tendency. Occasionally, however, the complaint attacks people after they are grown.

To prevent them, one should begin a long time before winter appears, to take precautionary measures. As soon as the days begin to be chilly, you must never go out without gloves, and at once make a change into warmer underclothing.

Be sure that the sleeves of your dresses are made long enough to cover the wrists, and that you are warmly dressed underneath. Wear stout shoes with gaiters, and take plenty of exercise. As the cold weather comes on, put on all-wool clothing, and carry a muff; indoors wear warmly-lined slippers, and have night socks. Never sit over a fire or warm your hands and feet at it; if they are cold, wash in hot water, or rub till the blood circulates. Take plenty of exercise indoors as well as out. Walk, bicycle, skate. Indoors dancing is the best way to get the feet warm. It is, however, not only in the cold weather that chilblains attack one; mild, damp winters are frequently as bad for them, if not worse.

The best thing to use for removing chilblains is the following lotion, but they must not be broken ones, or there will be great harm done in setting up inflammation: Opodeldoc, one ounce; tincture of cantharides, one-quarter of an ounce; oil of cajeput, one-quarter of an ounce. Rub this in for ten minutes at a time three times a day. It is essential that aperient medicine should be taken every night when suffering from chilblains, and that the daily morning bath should be warm. To prevent chilblains from appearing, use lemon juice daily, or vinegar, to which a fourth part of camphorated spirits has been added. Tea should be given up and cocoa taken instead; and cod-liver oil should be taken three times a day, and a strong tonic as well.

A good lotion for unbroken chilblains is collodion, two ounces; turpentine, six drachms; tincture of benzoin, one-half ounce. Eat plenty of celery, both raw and as a vegetable; and avoid too rich, greasy food, or many hot dishes. Where the chilblains are broken, apply tincture of catechu, two fluid ounces; honey, one ounce; rose water, four to eight ounces. Also annoint them with this pomade: White wax, two drachms; balsam of Peru, two drachms; sweet almond oil, 12 ounces; rose water, 20 drachms; spermaceti, two drachms. Dissolve and beat together to a thick paste. Where the chilblains are ulcerated, dilute tincture of myrrh in warm water and bathe them with it. If the ulcers are at all bad, you must not attempt to put on boots or gloves, but remain quietly at home, living on a strengthening diet till you are cured. —Housewife.

BEAUTY IN WALL HANGINGS.

Interior Decorations Have Never Been More Artistic Than at Present.

The art decorators continue to deck up their establishments with tapestries and papers and drapery fabrics of artistic tints and delightful texture, and the home-loving woman prowls about envying and idolizing, coveting and hating with a zeal that should make the angels weep. If she has a plump purse her agony of mind is the result of an already overcrowded house or a terrible state of uncertainty as to which of two papers or three tapestries is the prettiest. If she is an unfortunate, trying to keep up a beautiful home on a "small but steady income," or a really downright poor woman with artistic instincts, her sorrow and yearnings are easily explained.

The beauty of the wall hangings and the upholstery fabrics this season is satisfying to an unusual degree. The poor woman can examine and gaze and really enjoy doing so, knowing the while that they will never grace her little drawing-room or set off the few pieces of inherited "old blue" in her dining-room. A handsome pattern in the Louis XVI. brocades has a ground of pale esthetic tint and a design of flowers and festoons in white or silver. The festoons inclose the large, rather stiff bouquet, the straws of which are held by narrow floating ribbons. The festoon itself is an imitation of fine point lace and reproduced with wonderful delicacy. It is caught up at intervals with sprays of flowers. All through the design narrow floating ribbons with tasseled ends are seen. Another Louis XVI. brocade of unusual beauty is in deep turquoise blue, with great loose bouquets of colored carnations, their vivid green stems tied with broad pink ribbon, which meanders like a coral-tinted serpent throughout the pattern. The ground of this brocade is a sort of rich corded silk, and it resembles a fine tapestry as much as a brocade. In oriental colorings the tapestries are very handsome. Those with dark grounds and light figures are perhaps the most effective, but the wide stripes of light and dark with the figures in contrast are new and smart.—Philadelphia Press.

CLUMSYBY'S LACK OF TACT.

He Had a Philosophic Method of Turning This Lack to His Own Account.

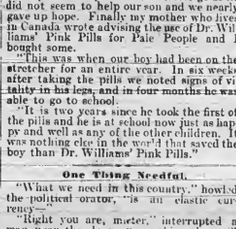
"One of the things that have been most helpful to me in the course of my life," said Mr. Clumsyby, "has been my lack of tact. This may seem like a contradiction, but it is really very simple.

"I have always been fancied that I could attend to business for other people all right, but I never had any tact about my own; that is, about my personal relations with people; I always bungle them whenever I attempt to do anything. Thus, if I have a misunderstanding or difference with anybody about anything and I set about straightening it out, I can't possibly do it except in one way; I have to go at it flat-footed; I haven't any more diplomacy than a stone image. And, moreover, besides being clumsy about it, I am pretty sure to say too much; to say things that it isn't necessary to say. In other words, I haven't any tact at all.

"And at first this was a great drawback to me. But after awhile I made a discovery; that if I didn't exercise my tact I shouldn't make any mistakes by it, and, following that course for a time, I came to a realization of the fact that there's a great lot of things that we run up against in life which may be irritating at the time, that are, however, not worth squabbling over at all, whether a man's got tact or not, and I was sure to make a mess of these things if I tried to do anything about them, why, I don't try; I simply let 'em go!

"And that's what I've been doing now for years, not bothering about every little trifle, but letting the little things go, and not bothering about 'em at all; paying no attention to them whatsoever. And so I have been enabled to preserve my equanimity and avoid all useless wear and tear; and thus my lack of tact has finally proved most helpful to me."

"But I have to keep a watch all the time." —N. Y. Sun.



A FATHER'S STORY.

From the Evening Crescent, Appleton, Wis.

A remarkable cure from a disease which has generally wrecked the lives of children, and left them in a condition to which death itself would be preferred has attracted a great amount of attention among the residents of the west end of Appleton.

The case is that of little Willard Creech, son of Richard D. Creech, a well known employe of one of the large paper mills in the Fox River Valley. The lad was attacked by spinal disease and his parents had given up all hope of his ever being well again when, as by a miracle, he was healed and is now in school as happy as any of his mates.

Mr. Creech, the father of the boy, who resides at 1062 Second Street, Appleton, Wisconsin, told the following story:

He Goes to School.

"Our boy was absolutely helpless. His lower limbs were paralyzed, and when we used electricity he could not feel it below his hips. Finally we let the doctor go as he did not seem to help our son and we nearly gave up hope. Finally my mother who lives in Canada wrote advising the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I bought some.

"This was when our boy had been on the stretcher for an entire year. In six weeks after taking the pills we noted signs of vitality in his legs, and in four months he was able to go to school.

"It is two years since he took the first of the pills and he is at school now just as happy and well as any of the other children. It was nothing else in the world that saved the boy than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

One Thing Needful.

"What we need in this country," howled the political orator, "is an elastic currency—"

"Right you are, mister," interrupted a man near the door; "something that will stretch a man's income so as to make both ends meet."—Chicago Evening News.

What Cuba's Loss Means to Spain.

The loss of Cuba means to Spain the loss of the very sustenance of the nation. Already her tax ridden people are crying for bread. In the same way the loss of your once vigorous appetite means poverty and starvation to your body. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

STORIES OF RELIEF.

Two Letters to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. JOHN WILLIAMS, Englishtown, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot begin to tell you how I suffered before taking your remedies. I was so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without falling. I had womb trouble and such a bearing-down feeling; also suffered with my back and limbs, pain in womb, inflammation of the bladder, piles and indigestion. Before I had taken one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I felt a great deal better, and after taking two and one-half bottles and half a box of your Liver Pills I was cured. If more would take your medicine they would not have to suffer so much."

Mrs. JOSEPH PETERSON, 513 East St., Warren, Pa., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered with womb trouble over fifteen years. I had inflammation, enlargement and displacement of the womb. I had the backache constantly, also headache, and was so dizzy. I had heart trouble, it seemed as though my heart was in my throat at times choking me. I could not walk around and I could not lie down, for then my heart would beat so fast I would feel as though I was smothering. I had to sit up in bed nights in order to breathe. I was so weak I could not do anything.

"I have now taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and used three packages of Sanative Wash, and can say I am perfectly cured. I do not think I could have lived long if Mrs. Pinkham's medicine had not helped me."

Bullittsville.

The Christian church at this place concluded its series of interesting meetings on Friday night last. Rev. Miller, pastor of the Fifth St., Christian church in Covington, preached six of the grandest, most eloquent and most instructive sermons I ever listeued to. He had large audiences every night—they represented all denominations of Christians—they came from Constance, Florence, Burlington, Petersburg, and the intervening country. Though comparatively a young man, being only thirty-four years old, he possesses some occult power by which he holds his auditors spell-bound throughout his entire discourse. Mr. Alvin Ranshaw, the leader of the choir in his church, was present at each meeting and led in the singing. He possesses a rich basso voice thoroughly cultivated and completely at his command. Miss Emma Herndon, a member of his choir, was also present and assisted in the singing. During each evening's services she sang a solo. She possesses the sweetest aud most pathetic voice I ever listened to. The music she renders seems to come from a warm, christian heart and has a power which touches the hearts, feelings. With such preachiug and singing it a marvel why but one coufession was made. The meetiug however was a grand success and closed with a large and attentive audience.

On the 2nd inst., Mr. Jos. A. Gaines and wife, Mrs. Martha Gaines, celebrated their golden weddiug at the home of their son, O. W. Gaines. No ostentation was attempted. In fact the children arranged the whole affair without acquaintiug their parents with its intent. A weddiug feast had been prepared and his brothes with their families were invited to be present. When the guests had assembled in the parlor Mr. Oscar Gaines arose aud in a few appropriate remarks announced the purpose of the feast and congratulated the aged and happy couple upon the felicitous issue of a life spent in peace, comfort and tranquility. This is a very remarkable couple and when they shall have passed away it will be hard to find auother to fill their stations in life. Mrs. Gaines has always been a leader in all religious enterprises within her sphere. For a number of years she has been a devout christiau. She has been a zealous student of the Bible and few ministers of the gospel are better versed in its teachings thau she is. Though in her 75th year, she is president of the Ladies' Aid Society and as zealous in her efforts to relieve suffering humanity as if she were but 35 years old. It can be truly said of her that she is a model christiau; a model wife and a model member of society.

Mr. Gaines is in his 77th year. He has never had a physician to visit him professionally, has never used tobacco in any form, has never drank any kind of liquor, nor have I ever heard of him uttering an oath. His life has been strictly a moral life. He has beeu an ardent student all his life, is a great reader and keeps himself thoroughly in line with all current topics. Few men are better posted in the history of ancieut and modern events thau he is. Though he has never taken an active part in politics, he has represented his county in the State Legislature. This honor was confered upon him without any solicitation or effort on his part. He has filled many other positious of honor in the county. May this grand old couple continue the even tenor of their past lives through the golden period of their wedded state, and enter the diamond fields in he same health, peace and tranquility that they now enjoy.

Young Mr. Cloud, of Floreuce, who was recently mustered out of Uncle Sam's service, was in town Friday. He is quite young but has a firm step and erect carriage that indicated the stuff soldiers grim and determined are made out of.

A visit of the trustees to Prof. Collin's school, Weduesday, found everything running smoothly. The bright, intelligent faces of the pupils were interesting, and to hear them recite well learned lessons went to show they were working. Prof. Newton said before the Teachers' Institute held here several years ago, "Our common schools are the safeguard of this Republic and the nursery of Democracy."

Rev. Lentz was interviewed, one morning this week by the traveling editor of the Blade, as he was trying to disconnect himself with a mud hole in the road between Noah Tanner's and Mrs. Mary Carpenter's. It seems that the popular and accommodating minister was enjoying the fresh air and sunshine by taking a ride on his bicycle and failed to notice the mud hole until he was within a few yards of it, when he put the break on. It did the "wild west" bucking act, and he did the rest. As he pulled himself together and picked the mud out of his eyes, we understand he told the traveling Blade editor that never again, as long as life lasts, will uncle Frank Smith or any member of his family be accused by him of acting in a suspicious manner even if they do shoot hogs with insomnia pills.

If any one wishes to know how to cure bacon in warm weather call on or address J. M. Utz, the toll-gate man. He has made a new discovery in curing bacon and killed hogs on the 31st of Oct.

There has been and is being built more buildings in this community, this fall, than for a long time, if ever before. Every one it seems has the disease (and best of all for the men that have to do the work) every one is in a hurry. No, that will not do, for Perry Aylor claims that he will not get in a hurry about anything, and he is building the largest one of the lot so far heard from, it being 52x60 feet, built out of solid oak without speck, spot, wrinkle or any such thing, and don't you forget. This is the barn that the Recorder of two weeks ago spoke of J. B. Berkshire building for Mr. Aylor.

For sale—Guernsey and Alderney bull, 2 years old.

Jim Snyder says B. R. Gaines gathered about 1,200 bushels of corn from 18 acres of land. How is that for good corn?

A party of hunters from Riverside camped ou Ashby's Fork about a mile above here last week. If the farmers would have such fellows as those arrested when they catch them on their farms, it would soon break up their hunting, and we would have more game.

Several from this neighborhood united with the Baptist church at Bellevue last week. They are Frank Voshell, Irvan Rue, Woodie Sullivau, Henry Smith, Ben Passon, Misses Essie Acra aud Ada Rue. May God grant that they may never yield to temptatiou to turn form the paths of righteousness.

Weaver and Berkshire made another big delivery of fruit trees here Monday. What becomes of all the fruit trees? It looks like enough fruit trees have been delivered in the county in the last 20 years to have converted it into one large orchard of fruit.

Rev. J. A. Kirtley called at the RECORDER office, yesterday, as he was on his way home from Big Bone, where he and Rev. Dicken had closed, the night before, a most profitable and interesting meeting of nearly three weeks. On Monday they baptized 19 persons, and at the closing services that night 7 more were received, who will be baptized next Sunday.

In renewing his subscription to the RECORDER, J. D. Gaines, a former citizen of this county, who is bookeeper for the Gate City Lumber Co., at Texarkana, Texas, writes:

"Thought I would have been up to old Boone this fall, but could not make it. They keep me busy here keeping books for the above concern, but hope, if I have luck, to visit the old home in the spring. Give my regards to Joe Furnish, Fount Riddell and all my friends you meet. My old friends up there seem to be dying off, and I wont know many people when I come."

We met Mr. Steve Henry at Erlanger one afternoon last week, and he demanded a contradiction of the statement in last week's RECORDER that he was going away to spend a month. He says that he does not expect to go until next winter, when he intends to spend two months at Frankfort, as representative in the Legislature from the second District of Kenton county. Mr. Henry recognizes the advantages that accrue from getting a good start in a race.

Last Wednesday the Kenton county grand jury returned indictments against Ben, Martin and Frank Michaels, John Rigler, John, Nannie, Elva and Berta Watson, charging them with malicious shooting. It will be remembered that on Sunday, the 11th day of last September, the Michael and Watson families, who live near Erlanger, engaged in a pistol battle, in which Jones McGraw and Joseph Michaels were killed. The bail of each of the defendants was fixed at $1,000.

The following from St. Louis, Mo., explains itself:

Dear sir:—I see in your paper of Oct. 26th, that the Big Bone correspondent says on account of my moving here that they are without a road overseer in that district, and that the roads are in a very bad condition and need attention. I wish you to say to the friends that I worked all the money out that came into my hands. I made a report of all but $2 49 which I put on the road besides $2 50 over what I got. If I had stayed in said district I could not have done any more. You will please call on Judge Roberts and see my report which I sent in. I have not reported the $2 49 as being worked out, but can send vouchers for $5 instead of $2 49. I hope the people of Big Bone will not blame me for bad roads as I could not do any more. Very respectfully yours,
THOS. C. JACK.

Hereafter D. E. Castleman will fill all his appointments exactly on time, as he now carries a new ticker which is warranted not to deviate when once it is started with the correct time.

Mrs. Sue Havenhorst (nee Kyle) and formerly of Kenton county, was an officer at the election yesterday in Colorado. In that State the women exercise the same political rights as the men.

R. S. Richardson, of Kenton county, was over in this neighborhood purchasing some stock, last Friday. He bought of O. P. Conner one cow and young calf at $45, and of Alfred Cason a calf and heifer for $40.

Atty. J. G. Tomlin, John Vest and A. M. Edwards, of Walton, were in town Thursday on business in which the old reliable Walton Building and Loan Association was interested. They had in charge a large number of the record books of the Association, and were apparently preparing for a big legal contest with some one in the near future.

Geo. Busby was visiting his kinsman, Nicholas Carpenter, who lives near here, a few days last week. Mr. Busby left here when a small boy and has been in the United States navy for the last seventeen years, and was on the Wilmington at the battle of Santiago, where he received a slight flesh wound. He is over six feet tall, and a fine looking man. He left last Friday, for Philadelphia, to report at the expiration of his furlough, which is today.

THE great periodic star shower, which is seen at intervals of 33½ years, is due November 12 or 13, 1899. On the same dates this year, also, a considerable display of these meteors is expected. They are supposed to consist of matter which is cold until rendered incandescent by friction with the earth's atmosphere.

THERE still stands close to the River Yer, in England, an old, octagonal shaped house, built during the reign of King Offa, of Mercia, about the year 795. This makes the house over 1,100 years old. It was fortified at one time. It is the oldest inhabited house in England. The lower walls are thick and its upper portion is built of oak.

THE wife of an English clergyman has made a collection of all the buttons picked in the offertory bags during the last two or three years, and has fastened them to cardboard in various cunning shapes of animals, birds and flowers. As a bazar is shortly to take place in connection with the church she has had these button pictures photographed and copies will be on sale at the exhibition.

EVERY continent on the globe with the exception of Australia, produces wild roses. There can be little doubt that the rose is one of the oldest flowers in the world and perhaps grown from the wind-blown seeds in paradise. In Egypt it is depicted on numbers of early bas-reliefs, dating from 3,000 to 3,500 B. C. Rosewater, or the essence of roses, is mentioned by Homer in the Iliad and of the flower is it spoken in the proverbs of Solomon.

A LARGE paper house with 16 rooms has been erected by a Russian gentleman upon his country estate at Savinowka, in Podolia. The house was constructed in New York by an American engineer, and cost 80,000 rubles. Its architect declares that it will last longer than a stone building. To make the triumph of paper more emphatic, the proprietor has resolved that the whole of the furniture shall be made of the same material.

THE newest disease to be added to the troubles of mankind is called emphysema. The death from the disease at St. Vincent's hospital, a few days ago, of John McGuire, was the sixth death from it so far recorded, and three of these were in St. Vincent's. The disease is produced from a germ known as the aerogenes bacillus, which becomes active underneath the skin and produces air. The skin is expanded in such a way that the victim takes shape out of all resemblance to that of a human being.

ARKANSAS has passed a road law providing for the appointment by county courts of road and bridge commissioners. Their duty is to divide counties into road districts and to appoint overseers. All male persons more than 18 years and less than 45 years of age are subject to road duty for at least five days in the year, exemption to be obtained upon payment of $1 a day. County courts are authorized to levy taxes not to exceed three mills for road purposes. Convicts may be worked on the roads by the counties at the rate of 75 cents a day.

THE faculty of the University of Michigan is investigating a case of initiation into the mysteries of one of the fraternities. A freshman candidate, whose name is concealed, after being blindfolded, was taken to a railroad sidetrack near the Michigan Central track and tied to the rails. He was left there until the through passenger train came, and as it thundered down upon him he screamed and struggled and finally lost consciousness just as the train went by a few feet from him. The freshman has since been delirious.

THE first of the new crop of pineapples from the neighborhood of Orlando, Fla., has begun to move, and it is estimated that the pineries in that neighborhood will ship about $50,000 of that fruit before January 1. The pineries now being planted, or made ready for planting, within a couple of miles of Orlando, according to a dispatch to the Savannah News from that place, will call for 100,000 new plants. These come from the old fruiting plants in the form of suckers. The old plants will produce two to five or six of these each year.

AT Warsaw, Ind., O. A. Light, who resides at Wilmost, was relieved of a lump which he took into his stomach 14 months ago, and which had in that time almost wrecked his constitution. Mr. Light believed he swallowed it one night while drinking at a spring. He went to the sanitarium, and the physician in charge used a stomach pump on him, bringing up the leech, which adhered to the eye in the stomach tube. Light's appetite was destroyed, and the little food he took did not assimilate, and he was reduced to skin and bone. He believes himself entirely cured.

TERESA SUNK.

Spanish Vessel, Raised by This Government at Great Expense, Lost.

After Accomplishing Nearly Half Her Trip Was Abandoned Near Watlioe Island or San Salvador, Where Colombus Landed in 1492.

CHARLESTON, S.C., Nov. 7.—The ocean tug Merritt put into Charleston Saturday morning for supplies. She reported the loss of the cruiser Maria Teresa, raised by Constructor Hobson recently, off San Salvador, Bahamas, November 1, in the midst of a furious storm.

The cruiser left Caimanera, Cuba, on the morning of October 30 in tow for New York. She had already passed Cape Maysi and started northeast around the Bahamas. A furious storm, warning of which had already been sent out, overtook her, and in her condition she was unable to weather the gale. The strain opened rents in her hull which had been patched to enable her to make the journey and she began to fill rapidly. The Merritt took off Capt. Harris and the crew from the sinking ship and she soon went down. The Merritt brought the captain and 126 men who will proceed north by rail. No lives were lost as far as known.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The navy department has received a dispatch from Lieut. Commander Harris, who was with the Maria Teresa when she left Caimanera, saying he reached Charleston Friday night on the wrecking tug Merritt with the officers and 58 men, formerly the crew of the Teresa. The cruiser was lost about 30 miles north of San Salvador Tuesday last, in a northeast gale of exceptional violence.

The news of the loss of the Spanish cruiser came to the navy department in a telegraph dispatch from Lieutenant Commander Harris, received at about 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Secretary Long being temporarily absent from the department, the officials of the navigation bureau, acting under a strict construction of official etiquette, refused to make the dispatch public until the secretary had given his consent. Consequently the publication of the news was delayed until the afternoon. When finally published the dispatch read as follows:

"CHARLESTON, Nov. 5

"Secretary of the navy, Washington.

"Arrived here Friday night in steamer Merritt with all of the crew of the Infanta Maria Teresa, abandoned in a heavy northeastern November 1, 30 miles north of San Salvador. Have 58 enlisted men. (Signed)

HARRIS."

Upon the receipt of the news the naval officers attached to the navigation bureau immediately consulted the charts to locate the scene of the disaster. The first glance satisfied them that the last had been seen of the ill-fated Maria Teresa. As near as they could calculate the vessel lies in about 2,600 fathoms of water or nearly three miles.

The location is 24 degrees north latitude by 74-30 west longitude, about 233 miles distant from Nassau. At the time the Teresa sunk she was about 310 miles distant from Caimanera, the port from which she started a little over two days before.

FATAL COLLAPSE OF A ROOF.

Many Workmen Crushed at the New Wonderland Theater, Detroit—Eleven Bodies Recovered—Others Fatally Hurt.

DETROIT, Nov. 7.—The roof of the new Wonderland Theater collapsed at 1:45 p. m. Saturday, carrying down the iron galleries of the structure and a great mass of scaffolding and debris. Some 25 men were working under the collapsed part of the structure. Scarcely any of these seem to have escaped injury. The bodies of six dead men have already been recovered. Several others are fatally injured. The side wall of the four-story structure is bulging threateningly and the front of the building, although still upright, is considered dangerous. The hospital ambulances are busy carrying away the dead and the wrecked theater is surrounded by a great crowd of people.

As nearly as can be ascertained, the cause of the accident was the removal of the temporary wooden braces which supported the roof. The instant the last one was taken down, the whole roof caved in with a crash, carrying everything in the interior of the building to the basement with it.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 7.—Three more victims were Sunday dug from the ruins of the New Wonderland building, which collapsed Saturday afternoon. This makes the death list so far 11.

LOST HER LIFE IN A BATHTUB

The Body of a Woman Found Dead After a Night of Dissipation—Most Unfortunate Affair.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 7.—The dead body of Miss Nora Everley, or, as she was known, in Cincinnati, Edith Garfield, was found in the bath tub of flat 7, The Alta, shortly after 8 o'clock Sunday morning. The woman, together with Mrs. Josephine Gerold, had spent the night there in company with Mr. Frank Woodrow and W. Boyd Wessel, two young men who have a large acquaintance in business and social circles, and are connected with the best families in Cincinnati. All evidence so far obtained points to a case of accidental death or suicide. The woman was lying on her side, with her head under the water, when found. The body and water were still warm. In the afternoon a bruised spot showed itself on the forehead of the dead woman, which may or may not have been the result of a blow sustained shortly before death. None of the other occupants of the flat was awake at the time of the woman's death. She had been the first of the quartet to awake, and had gone alone to the bathroom. Coroner Haerr was notified promptly, and the case, owing to several unexplained points, is now being investigated by himself and the police.

Negro Murderer Confesses, Implicating Two Others—Lynched—The Others May Go the Same Way.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 7.—Authur Williams, a Negro under arrest for the murder of Miss Elina Ogden at Wellburne, Fla., on Friday, made a confession Saturday night, implicating two other Negroes, Buck James and Monroe Leggitt. At 11 o'clock Saturday night the constable and his guards were overpowered by a crowd of incensed citizens and Williams was taken from their custody, riddled with bullets and a fire built upon his body. James and Leggitt are now under arrest, but it was likely that they would go the way of Williams Sunday night.

A CAPITOL FIRE.

The Entire Eastern Part From the Main Floor to Basement Ruined.

Supreme Court Rooms Completely Ruined—Court Will Meet in Senate Committee Room—The Loss Will Foot Up $200,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—An explosion and fire at 5:13 Sunday afternoon wrecked the supreme court room and the rooms immediately adjoining it on the main floor of the capitol. The damage is enormous. The entire central eastern part of the great marble pile from the main floor to the subterranean basement practically is a mass of ruins. The force of the explosion was so heavy that the coping stones on the outer walls, just east of the point where the explosion occurred, were bulged out nearly two inches; windows in all that part of the building were blown out, and locked doors were forced from their hinges quite a 150 feet from the scene of it.

Fire followed the explosion so quickly as to seem practically simultaneous with it. The explosion shook the immense structure to its foundations and was heard several squares from the capitol. It occurred in a small room tightly enclosed by heavy stone walls in the subterranean basement immediately below the main entrance to the old capitol building. In this room was a 500-light gas meter which was fed by a four-inch main. Very little gas is used in that part of the building, but at the time of the explosion the gas had not been turned on at the meter. The meter itself was wrecked and the gas pouring from the main caught fire. The flames originating from the explosion darted up the shaft of the elevator, which had been completely destroyed by the force of the explosion, and communicated with the record room of the supreme court, the office of the marshal of the court and the supreme court library. Before the flames could be subdued the priceless documents in the record room had been almost totally destroyed and serious damage had been done in the marshal's office and some minor rooms in the immediate vicinity.

The library of the supreme court, located immediately beneath the supreme courtroom was badly damaged by fire, smoke and water, practically destroying the great collection of law reference books. The library contains about 20,000 volumes and was used not only by the justices of the supreme court, but by members of congress and lawyers practicing before the supreme court. Mr. Justice Harlan said Sunday night that the library was very valuable. Many of the works it contained would be thought, be difficult to replace. Librarian Clarke, after a cursory examination necessarily made by the light of lanterns, expressed the opinion that many of the books could be saved, although they had been drenched by water from the streams poured into the library for two hours or more after the explosion occurred.

The most serious damage, in the opinion of the justices of the supreme court, is to the records stored in the sub-basement. These included all of the records of the supreme court from 1792 to 1832. The room contains records of cases and opinions rendered by the fathers of the judiciary of the government. Apparently the documents in this room are either totally destroyed or so badly damaged by fire and water as to be useless.

Fortunately the clerk's office was not in the least damaged by fire and the explosion did no damage in it except to blow out one window.

The supreme courtroom was damaged principally by water and smoke, the fire not reaching that point. Adjoining the courtroom, however, both the marshal's office and the senate barber shop furnished food for the flames.

While many theories are offered as to the cause of the explosion, it seems beyond doubt to have been due to escaping gas.

No intelligent estimate of the money loss yet can be made. In the opinion of capitol officials and mechanics who examined the structure Sunday night the loss will reach probably $200,000 to the building. The loss on the library and records, as stated above, can be scarcely estimated in dollars and cents. A million dollars could not replace them, because of many of them no duplicates are in existence.

Arrangements were completed Sunday night by which the sittings of the supreme court will not be interrupted. The court will convene Monday in the room of the senate committee on the District of Columbia, one of the most spacious rooms in the capitol. How long the sessions of the court will be held there will be determined by the justices themselves.

YELLOW FEVER IN HAVANA.

It Is Spreading With Alarming Rapidity and There is Almost a Panic in Cuba's Capital.

HAVANA, Nov. 7.—The yellow fever situation here is causing great anxiety among the American officials. The increasing number of cases, a majority of which are of a serious nature, has alarmed the entire American colony, and the announcement Sunday of two new victims caused the alarm to develop almost the character of a panic. The disease is spreading rapidly, and is not confined to the Vidado district where Capts. Foraker and Beebe were stricken.

Chief Clerk Caldwell, of the quartermaster's department, who was taken ill Saturday evening, was seen and examined by Dr. Laine Sunday. The doctor declared his disease yellow fever, ordering his removal and isolation in a building near the trocha. A clerk named Stuart, of the quartermaster's department, has been ill since last Wednesday. His case was also diagnosed as yellow fever, and he was removed to the same place. Two other clerks were slightly ill Sunday evening, but fever symptoms have not yet developed.

MANY DELAYS EXPECTED.

The General Movement of Troops to Cuba Will Be Hampered by the Unpreparedness in the Matter of Transports.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Had it not been for the accidental decision of the authorities to delay the general movement of troops to Cuba on account of danger from yellow fever they would find themselves strangely unprepared in the matter of transports. Col. Hecker, chief of transportation, has been in Cuba, leaving the bulk of the work for one man, who has seemingly not been able to wrestle with the problem. The government owns 11 transports on the Atlantic coast and they are scattered in every direction.

Although the orders were urgent that the Chester should leave for New York on November 6, in order to embark the Fifteenth infantry at Savannah on November 8, it now develops that the transportation department will not have her ready to leave before the latter date.

MISSION CHURCH SENSATION

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 7.—"I'm trying to live a Christian life. I'm homesick to see Jesus. I'm ready to go Sunday, this hour, this minute, if necessary. Praise the Lord!"

Scarcely had these words left the lips of Mrs. Jennie Walker, at a religious meeting at the Goodway Mission Sunday, when she fell back into her seat, dead. The hall was crowded with worshipers. After a short service people in the congregation arose one by one and began to bear testimony. Mrs. Walker had risen to testify. In one breath she said she was ready to go—her next breath was her last. The woman had died of heart disease.

CARELESS ENGINEER'S WORK

By Disobedience of Orders, It Is Alleged, He Is Responsible for the Death of Seven Men in a Mine.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 7.—Seven men were killed and three fatally injured at the Exeter colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. at West Pittston, near here, Saturday. The accident was due to the alleged carelessness of Engineer David Price, who, acting in disobedience of positive orders, caused three cars to run into the top of the shaft. These cars, loaded and weighing 11 tons, fell down the 360-foot shaft and crashed with frightful force upon the carriage carrying ten men. Seven were almost instantly killed.

HANGED THE WRONG MAN.

Evidence That a Negro, and Not Tom Woolfolk, Was the Murderer of a Georgia Family.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 7.—A memorandum book, just found among the things willed to a Macon man by a Negro lynched two years ago at Maysfield, S. C., for murdering a family there, contains an account of the murder of the nine members of the Woolfolk family in this county, eight years ago, for which Tom Woolfolk, oldest son, was hanged, protesting his innocence. The Negro claims to have done this killing, as well as dozens of others.

GEESE CARRIED A MESSAGE.

An Ingenious Scheme for Notifying Neighbors Who Have Troublesome Fowl.

"Down in the Neck," two neighboring households once dwelt in amity. They still dwell there, but in amity no more. Let them here respectively be called the Hodkinses and the Podkinses for the very good reason that those names are unknown among the truck plantations. The Hodkinses are keeping geese this year. The Podkinses are not keeping geese—not if they know it. Now the Hodkins geese acquired the habit, when weary of disporting themselves in the "big ditch," of resorting to the front lawn of the Podkins demesne. These invasions the Podkinses resented. Their remonstrances failed of effect. A condition of strained relations ensued. Mrs. Podkins, kindly old soul, said she "didn't want ter git th' menfolks a-scrappin' and a-makin' things up over a passel o' geese." So she organized a board of strategy, consisting of herself, her daughter "Sis" and her boy "Joe." The result of their deliberations and certain preparations, where figured needle and thread, some grains of corn and some bits of cardboard, became evident next morning. The Hodkins geese appeared as usual, but returned home quickly, squawking so noisily as to bring the Hodkinses in a body to the front door. What they saw paralyzed them. Descending from each fowl's bill was a bit of thread, the inner end anchored to a grain of corn in the bird's interior department, while to the other end of the string was attached a card bearing this inscription: "These Kepe Yur Durn Ole Gooses Home." The Hodkins water fowl are now reconcentrados upon the Hodkins home ranch.—Philadelphia Record.

IS UNDER GUARD

Three Troops of State Militia Ordered to Report to Sheriff O'Connor—Soldiers Patrolling the Streets—Up to Midnight No Mob Appeared.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 4.—The Augusta jail Thursday night was under guard to prevent a repetition of Wednesday night's attack by lynchers who wanted to wreak their vengeance on Will Robinson for attempt to outrage Miss Walker.

Will Moore, private in Company C, 2d Georgia volunteers, who was shot in Wednesday night's attack, has a fair chance for recovery. Soldiers, however, express indignation at his injury, and, to prevent any movement on their part, Col. Brown, of the 2d Georgia, wired Capts. Renkel and Frye to call in all arms and ammunition, which was done, and guard was placed over it.

Several of the soldiers of the 2d army corps who have just arrived from Camp Meade were in the mob last night. Gov. Candler during the day wired from Atlanta ordering the following troops of the state militia to report to Sheriff O'Connor for duty: Richmond Hussars, (cavalry), Ogiethorpe Infanty, German guards and Irish volunteers.

Cavalry and infantry have been patrolling streets within several blocks of the jail in all directions since nightfall, and up to midnight the mob had not made its appearance. Two men are not allowed to walk together within the district under martial law. The grand jury met Friday morning and Robinson will be promptly indicted and tried on Monday.

THE TREASURER'S REPORT.

An Increase in Revenues of $57,597,630 Over Last Year and an Increased Expenditure of $77,594,423.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The treasurer of the United States, Hon. Ellis H. Roberts, has submitted to the secretary of the treasury the annual report on the transactions and condition of the treasury for the past fiscal year. The net ordinary revenues of the government were $405,321,335, an increase of $57,597,630 over those of the previous year, while the net ordinary expenditures were $443,868,582, an increase of $77,594,423. The resulting deficiency of $38,047,247 exceeds that of the preceding year by $19,994,793.

In the receipts are counted $64,751,223 paid into the treasury on account of the sale of the Union Pacific and Kansas Pacific railroads. Out of them were paid $29,850,952 of the bonds issued for the construction of the Pacific railroads, which went to increase the expenditures.

VIOLENT VOLCANO ERUPTION

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 4.—Another volcanic eruption has occurred in the New Hebrides, more alarming than its predecessors. The volcano Lopeira, after remaining quiescent for 20 years, broke out and the burning lava thrown up could be seen 12 miles away. Five villages were huddled at the base of the volcano and the houses were buried in Scoria at the first outbreak. The sea for miles around boiled at a high temperature, and jets of water leaped high into the air. Fortunately none of the inhabitants of the five destroyed villages were buried under the melted lava. A few days after the outbreak the natives went up to the top of the still smoking volcano, carrying bunches of cocanuts, which they offered up as a sacrifice "to make the fire dead."

MAJ. MARCHAND AT CAIRO.

The Explorer Received a Hearty Welcome From the French Residents—He Looks Thin and Worried.

CAIRO, Nov. 4.—Maj. Marchand, the commander of the French expedition at Fashoda, arrived here at 7 o'clock this evening. He was met at the railroad station by the French officials and residents. The explorer looked thin and worried. Directly the major appeared at the door of the train the spectators rushed forward, waving hats, sticks and handkerchiefs and crying "Vive Marchand!" The later, who was much pleased and touched at the reception accorded him, drove off to the French diplomatic agency amid more cheering.

The French officer, who is short, slight, active and bronzed, was dressed in civilian clothes.

FREE FIGHT AT A MEETING.

Four Men Perhaps Fatally Injured at a Political Gathering in the Indian Reservation in North Carolina.

ASHVILLE, N. C., Nov. 4.—News has reached here of an affray at a political meeting in the Indian reservation in Swain county, in which four men were perhaps fatally injured. William Bradley and his son Wallace armed with pistols and clubs attempted Saturday night to break up a meeting of Indians and white republicans, dragging one member out of the building. A free fight followed in which both the Bradleys were cut and shot fatally, and two of the other crowd were badly cut. Thomas Baker, chairman of the republican party in the precinct, has appealed to his political brethren here to send arms in case there is further trouble.

TERRIBLE DISASTER AT SEA.

VINYARD HAVEN, Mass., Nov. 5.—A disaster at sea, fortunately with a small loss of life, five persons in all, was made known Friday by the landing here of 22 persons who escaped from the burning steamer Croatan, of the Clyde line, bound from New York for Wilmington, N. C., and Georgetown, S. C. The disaster occurred on November 1, about 18 miles north of Cape Charles and about 205 miles from New York, from which port the steamer sailed on October 31, with a general cargo and eight passengers.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the burned hulk of the big freighter sank beneath the waves. Of the 27 persons who were on board, 22 have survived. These passengers were landed at this port Friday afternoon by the schooner Alice E. Clark, of Portland, Me., which had been in the vicinity of the Croatan at the time she was burning. The Croatan's list of drowned is as follows:

Steward James Curtis, of Jersey City.

Mrs. James Curtis, wife of the steward.

Frank ——, an oiler, (last name unknown).

Jennie Willard, colored, Wilmington, N. C.

The story of the disaster is told by Capt. Hale and other officers of the unfortunate vessel as follows:

"The Croaton was but 20 hours from New York on her way to Wilmington and going at a good rate of speed, with a smooth sea and calm weather, when, at 3 p. m., a fireman came hurriedly on deck and reported that the ship was on fire. A general alarm was immediately given and an effort was made to lower the boats, but the fire spread with such rapidity that all efforts to reach them were unavailing because of the flames. In fact, in less than ten minutes after the fire was reported the ship was completely enveloped in flames from stem to stern. Shortly after the fire was discovered an explosion took place in the cargo, which blew off the after-hatches. A second explosion followed a few minutes later and the ship was then a mass of flames. It was at this time that Superintendent Hale, seeing that to remain on the vessel meant sure death, gave orders for all hands to jump overboard and save themselves as best they could. The gallant captain was the last man to leave the ship, remaining on deck with his first officer, until they were completely enveloped in flames and the vessel had commenced to sink.

There seemed to be no panic on board and men and women, after lashing on their life preservers, calmly leaped into the water, knowing that their chances of escape were much more certain than if they remained on board the burning ship. Some of the passengers had their faces scorched and many had their clothing on fire when they leaped into the sea. The captain and first officer succeeded in securing a yawl boat, which had been damaged in lowering, and by hard work rescued eight persons from the water.

The burning ship was sighted by the four masted schooner Alice Clark, of Portland, Capt. Clark, from Norfolk, for Portland, which lay becalmed six miles off, and her captain sent a boat crew to aid in the work of rescue. They succeeded in saving 12 persons, many of whom had been an hour or more in the water and had become nearly exhausted. They were taken on board the Clark and given every possible attention.

Capt. Hale, his officers, crew and passengers all speak in the highest praise of the treatment they received at the hands of Capt. Clark, his wife and the crew on board the Clark.

Capt. Clark not only gave the shipwrecked men and women food and clothing, but supplied them with money to take them to their homes.

THEY ARE DISSATISFIED.

Porto Ricans Do Not Like Our Way of Doing Business—They Expected to Be Treated as People of This Country.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Gen. Roy Stone, who has just returned from Poto Rico, says: "The people of Porto Rico are not at all satisfied with American rule. There is a growing difference between the natives and the militia, which is greatly to be regretted. When the army of occupation first invaded the island the natives received the Americans so cordially that they expected to be treated as people of this country and not as a conquered province. The treatment they have received from our hands has been just the opposite. This has produced a chill.

"What the Porto Ricans want is to be taken in as a part of the United States. They do not expect to enter the union as a state, but as a people in training to be advanced to statehood. In addition to this they want free trade with the United States, and there is no reason that I can see why they should not have it. At present they are forced to pay duty on all imported goods, Spanish included, which were free before.

"Our military government of the island has been far from satisfactory. We have destroyed the Spanish military rule and have not replaced it with American forces, thus destroying their safeguards to life and property. As a result of this from one hundred and fifty to two hundred of the finest plantations have been destroyed by fire. Just who is responsible for this I can not say.

The infantry there is of very little use in policing the island. We must have cavalry. In addition there should be a civil guard composed of Porto Rican privates and American officers.

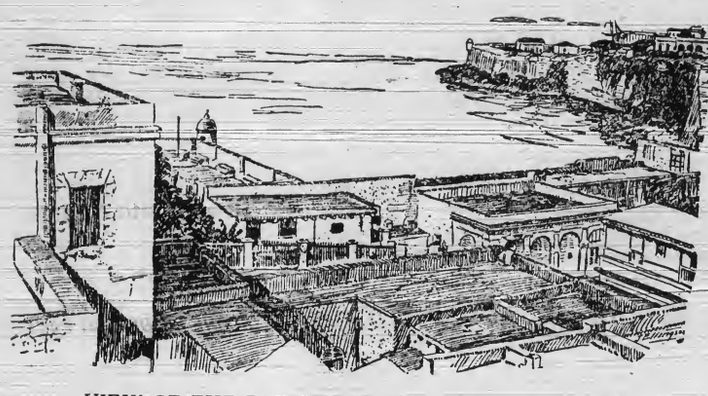
"There is a great deal of sickness among our troops, but it is due principally to the imprudence of the men, and not to any neglect of the officers or heads of departments."

Gen. Stone will advise establishment of an electric railroad system throughout the islands.

THE SPANIARDS DECLINE.

They Will Not Accede to America's Demand in Reference to the Philippine Islands—Meet Again Tuesday.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The joint session of the peace commissions Friday lasted two hours. The Spaniards refused the proposition made by the Americans on Monday last, but the negotiations were not broken off. While it is believed that no formal counter proposition was made, there was a discussion of the Philippine question outside the lines of the American propositions. The commissions then adjourned until Tuesday next.



MADRID, via Biarritz, France, Nov. 5.—Premier Sagasta, after a long consultation with the queen regent Friday, spontaneously declared to a number of newspaper correspondents, that he hardly expected that the Americans would abandon their pretentions in the matter of the Philippines. The government, he said, had instructed Senor Moutero Rios, the head of the Spanish peace commission, to defend Spain's just claims to the utmost, obtaining all possible concessions. The Spanish commissioners, Senor Sagasta said, would in no case retire because such a step would be equivalent to a rupture and a renewal of hostilities, in which case he fears that the Americans would bombard the Canaries, the African colonies and the Spanish ports, Spain being unable to resist.

The newspapers are indignant at the Americans declaring that they regard it as impossible to obtain justice from Spain.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The administration is awaiting results from the peace commission with equanimity, in the realization that the government is perfectly well prepared for any turn the negotiations may take.

The navy especially is in a state of preparedness, should it come to a resumption of hostilities, far in advance of its condition at the outbreak of the war. One by one all of the splendid fighting machines of the North Atlantic squadron, which had been brought north at the earliest moment, were docked, cleaned and thoroughly refitted at the New York and Norfolk navy yards. Their ammunition supplies were replenished, and they are now, with possibly one or two exceptions, ready for instant service in almost any quarter of the globe. Adm Dewey has taken considerable precautions in the cases of his own vessels, having dispatched them one by one to the big British docks at Hong Kong, where they have been placed in as good condition as possible outside of our home ports. Secretary Long has prudently declined to part with the new numerous fleet of auxiliary vessels acquired by the government just prior to and during the war. These were all inspected by a technical board which found that a number of them were not particularly well adapted to navy uses, but the secretary concluded that these vessels were still sufficiently serviceable for emergency uses and accordingly kept them in condition to be commissioned at short notice.

As far as the army is concerned, while the original force of nearly a quarter of a million men called into service by the president has been largely diminished by the mustering out of many regiments and organizations, it is the opinion of expert military officers that the army as a whole is really a more formidable weapon now than it was at any period during the war. This apparently paradoxical statement is explained by the fact that such of the troops as are now in the service have had the discipline of several months' hard training. The men have steadily improved in efficiency and their officers know how to take care of them as well as to fight battles. The staff corps have cured many of the evils from which they suffered during the war, and are prepared to move troops with rapidity, with due care for their health and for their adequate rationing during any campaign that might be expected. In fact, all branches of the military service provided by the experience of the war, and are now, as previously stated, in better shape than ever before.

A Report on the Claim of Georgia That Land Lying in Tennessee and North Carolina Belongs to Georgia.

There is still some doubt as to whether Chattanooga is in Georgia or Tennessee. Referring to this matter the states attorney said: "Chattanooga is within the ancient boundary of Georgia. If the question is reopened and that boundary is established Chattanooga will of course be in this state."

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

McELREE'S

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

W. L. ADDISON, M.D., Cary, Miss., says: "I use Wine of Cardui extensively in my practice and find it a most excellent preparation for female troubles."

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1898. NO. 4.

CONGRESSMAN BERRY was given quite a handsome endorsement by his district.

THE Republicans in this county proved to be possessed of as much apathy as the Democrats were.

THE loss of Richard Croker, on the result of the gubernatorial election in New York is said to be $50,000.

AT the Congressional election before that of the 8th inst., the Democrats cast for Berry, 2255 votes, the Republicans, for Ernst, 785, in this county.

WHILE the Fusionists were electing a Governor in Nebraska, the Republicans went after the legislature and got it, gaining a United States Senator thereby.

IT is said that Gen. Maximo Gomez will no longer have any Americans about him, and that he has no use for Cubans who favor annexation to the United States. Nothing but Cuban independence will be accepted by Gomez.

THE Courier-Journal contained a six column editoral, one day last week, in which it avowed its fealty to the Democratic party in the future. Is there any danger of its ever declaring that the editorial was written by a crazy man?

ASHTABULA, O., has for years been treasuring as a relic a shell which was fired by a British warship in 1812, and which had failed to explode. Somehow it got into a pile of scrap iron delivered to the Pheonix Iron Works foundry and performed its functions so well that the furnace doors were blown to smithereens.

IT is not altogether certain that President McKinley will not have to defeat Roosevelt for the Republican nomination for President. Roosevelt's victory in New York puts him in line for the Presidency, and knowing that would be the result of his election, is said to be the cause of the President and his friends giving his canvass the cold shoulder.

THE election throughout the State on the 8th inst. was as orderly as any ever held, and no complaints against the workings of the Goebel election law have been made. Both parties were represented in every county at the counting of the ballots, and the padding of returns was impossible. One of the noticeable facts is with what speed the result in the counties composing the Eleventh Congressional district was ascertained and made public under the Goebel law. It is now certain that the Eleventh district is not as far from Kentucky as the Philippine islands.

IN his forthcoming message President McKinley will make a strong appeal for legislation for the construction of the Nicaraguan canal under directions of this government. The President will point out that our new connections in the Pacific and in the West Indies make it imperative for the United States to build and control the great international water way, and that delay beyond the present Congress in authorizing its construction will jeopardize the chances for American control in the future. President McKinley fully appreciates the difficulties in the way of securing prompt action, but he and other canal advocates also appreciate that failure this year may mean permanent failure. Hence preparations are going forward for one of the most bitter fights ever waged in the interest of the canal.

MR. KNOTT, in commenting on the result of the recent election in Kentucky says: "The Sound Money Democrats yesterday remained away from the polls as far as Kentucky was concerned."

A little further on in his comments he says:

"The returns show three things, we think:

"First, a united Democratic party can carry Kentucky."

Of course, if the Democrats carried Kentucky with the gold Democrats remaining away from the polls they can carry the State when both wings of the party is acting in harmony. That is a very clear proposition, but Mr. Knott does not appear to desire that harmony shall exist, and is liberal in his abuse of the Courier-Journal because it claims it wants to see the old party in the saddle again in Kentucky, and gave it its assistance in that direction during the campaign.

CHURCH NEWS.

Bishop Potter criticises all preachers who preach without manuscript.

The Baptist Congress will meet at Detroit, Nov. 15th, and will be in session until the 17th.

The Sunday-schools of America now have an enrollment of nearly 13,000,000 officers and pupils.

"Children's Rally Day for America" will be observed in the Christian churches on Sunday, Nov. 20th.

"I'm trying to live a Christian life. I'm homesick to see Jesus. I'm ready to go Sunday, this hour, this minute, if necessary. Praise the Lord!" Scarcely had these words left the lips of Mrs. Jennie Walker, at the Goodway Mission, in Kansas City, when she fell back into her seat, dead.

After serving the Paris Christian church for 28 years as its pastor, Elder J. S. Sweeney declined, positively, a reelection very much to the surprise and greatly to the regret of the members of that church. During his stay at Paris he has baptized about 3,000 people, preached more than 1,000 funerals and married 700 couples. It is thought that Elder Zack T. Sweeney will be chosen as his brother's successor. He is also a very able man and an attractive pulpit orator. Elder J. S. Sweeney expects to continue Paris as his home.

WILD WESTERN WAYS.

Why doesn't the sea cow give watered milk?

Why isn't a dirt cart a real estate conveyance?

Why shouldn't a chiropodist be partial to corned beef?

Why does the silent partner in a business always have so much to say?

Why does a small boy's face always look as if he had been eating something?

Why isn't a doctor attending a patient's funeral a case of cause and effect?

Why is it wrong to hit a man when he's down after working so hard to get him there?

Why doesn't some genius crown himself with glory by discovering a process for extracting gold and silver from mining shares?—Chicago News.

As compared with October, 1897, the receipts in the Western tobacco markets for October, 1898, were one-third less, reducing the stock on hand over 7,000 hogsheads, being an unprecedentedly low mark. As regards the Cincinnati market of last week, the Western Tobacco Journal says: "Not only has the improvement which we mentioned in our last report, continued during the present week, but we think there was even a betterment. The bidding was more active throughout, and all the manufacturers' buyers appeared to have orders. The principal demand seemed to be for colory lugs and trash, but red tobacco was also readily taken at somewhat advanced prices. Fine tobacco did not advance correspondingly, but also showed increased strength, and several sales were made which proved quite satisfactory to the owners. The outlook entire was decidedly brighter, and many think the turning point towards better prices has come."

THE adjustment of the Philippine question is progressing slowly, and every few days it is reported that Spain is about to withdraw her commissioners from the negotiations that are being conducted. The delay in the complete evacuation of Cuban soil may be to await the final conclusion reached at Paris.

BOSTON merchants have adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That in the opinion of the Board of Directors of this Association the acquisition of any part of the Philippine Islands, except what is needed for a naval station, would be detrimental to the interests of the United States."

THE city of Louisville has compromised its franchise tax claims against eight banks and trust companies for the years prior to September, 1898, at sums aggregating $228,905. The suits pending in the State courts against these banks for franchise taxes have been dismissed.

BOONE came along as usual, with a larger Democratic majority than any other county in this Congressional district.

CROP AND STOCK.

R. N. Ratcliff, of Sharpsburg, bought 25 extra sugar mule colts at from $45 to $70.

John Embry bought in Woodford county a number of lambs of the 1899 crop at 5 cents.

Some corn has been sold in the neighborhood of Mortonsville, Woodford county, at 85c a barrel.

Berry Browning, of Clark county, sold 39 weanling calves at an average price of $34.50. Most of these were March and April calves and 19 of the lot brought $27 each.

Mr. John F. Price left at our office about half a peck of Early Rose potatoes which were planted on the 15th of July on ground from which he had already taken a crop of potatoes. The potatoes of this second crop were as fine "taters" as we have seen this year and ate as well.—Lexington Gazette.

Bring your hogs to 200 pounds on clover, and it is then an easy matter to finish them off quickly on corn in the fall, without the expense of feeding long through the cold weather. Feeding corn in order to keep up the animal heat, while putting on fat, does not pay. Although you may not have quite such heavy weights in the end as by other methods, there will be more money in the purse.—Indiana Farmer.

Farmers throughout the county are becoming exasperated at the reckless manner in which many so-called hunters ride through their farms, leaving fences down and recklessly shooting at game, even if it be in line with horses, stock, hogs or cattle. Others will run a rabbit into a rock pile and tear down in a few minutes what would take a farmer hours to build up. Many are threatening to have some of these parties arrested and thus stop this reckless disregard of others' rights. The penalty is severe, and we would advise all who desire to hunt to first procure the consent of the land owner, or some of you may get into trouble.—Bracken Chronicle.

When does the farmer make a profit? There are hundreds of farmers who have become wealthy, yet they have handled very little money and have had difficulty in meeting their obligations. There is one bank account which they do not draw upon, and the deposit accumulates for years, and that is the soil. A farmer takes a poor farm, works it, adds manure, and receives but little over expenses, but every year his farm has become more fertile and also increased in value. In ten or more years the farm may be worth five times the original cost, and it represents just as much profit as though the farmer had received money. All farms are, to a certain extent, banks of deposit, where the profits of the farm slowly accumulate.

Practical and experienced feeders, who breed and purchase steers for fattening, observe striking differences in the attitude of animals of varying types and make-up to lay on flesh readily and in such form and quality as to command the highest price on the market. It requires a well-trained eye to detect in all cases the possible variation of results in the store of stock but there are some distinctions that are easily detected. There are certain types of cattle, for instance, that never feed profitably under any conditions, and it is quite as important to discriminate against these in the feed lot as to be able to recognize the excellence in other types.

The characteristics that make the profitable feeder are naturally more difficult to detect in animals in stock condition than when fattened, but notwithstanding this there are a number of indications that are fairly reliable. Though the young steer may be comparatively thin in flesh and temporarily lacking the thick, even covering of the back and ribs so essential in the finished carcass, he must nevertheless present that blocky frame and stoutness of build, accompanied by short, straight legs, wide back and loin, well-sprung ribs, fullness of back, shoulders and in flanks, prominent brisket, full neck vein, wide chest, and well-rounded barrel, together with a good, soft, mellow handling skin and fine, silky hair, giving what is termed the thick, mossy coat, without coarseness, and with it all a good, strong, vigorous head, clear, full eye, and quiet temperament. The importance of an even covering of flesh and good handling quality can hardly be overestimated. The bone should be moderately fine and clean. Coarseness either in the bone or about the head and horns is particularly objectionable, as it indicates coarseness of texture throughout and a greater percentage of offal and cheap meat, as well as a tendency to sluggish circulation. The head should present a certain refinement, finish and vigor that in a measure indicate general quality and superior excellence of finished product, though this refinement must not be accompanied by delicacy.—Prof. C. F. Curtis, in Fourteenth Anunal Report of Bureau of Animal Industry.

Condition of Crops and Live Stock November 1st, 1898.

The reports for November is made up from replies received from 148 correspondents, representing 104 counties.

WHEAT—Wheat sowing was interrupted during October by the continued wet weather. In many counties the soil was too wet to cultivate for a period of three weeks, while in the most favored counties farmers were unable to proceed for a few days only without interruption by rain. At this date (November 1st) a large per cent. of the acreage remains to be sown. Farmers generally had prepared their fallow land early and many seeded during the month of September. This early wheat has been the prey of Hessian fly and other insect enemies of the young wheat plant to such an extent that resowing of much of it has been found necessary. Where free from injury from insects early wheat has made phenomenal growth and some of it in fact has reached the "jointing" stage. A continuance of the growing season will soon render it liable to injury by the slightest freeze.

The condition of the crop averages 96 for the State. The highest average, 100, is shown in the southeastern district. In the central district the condition averages 95, and the average for the western district is 87. On November 1st. 1897, the condit on for the State was 62, and for a corresponding date of 1896 the condition was 96.

The estimates on acreage are, to a certain extent, unreliable, owing to the fact that a large per cent of the crop remains to be sown. Preparations were undoubtedly begun for an unusually large acreage, but the injury to early wheat and the delay in getting the late wheat in the ground will affect the acreage and estimates to be made next month will be taken as final.

The estimated acreage at this date taking the State, is 107, as compared with acreage of 1897. The largest increase is shown in the few counties of the southeastern district where the crop is grown. Here the acreage is estimated at 117, as compared with 1897. The acreage in the central section is 103 and in the western 105, as compared with 1897.

PASTURES AND LIVE STOCK—Pastures are still good and show a condition of 106 as compared with average years. Live stock generally are in a thrifty condition and will enter the winter in best possible condition. The condition of hogs being fed for market is 94, as compared with average years. Hogs, as a rule, are reported plentiful, but the weight is not up to the average. Cholera prevails to a limited extent only: 96 correspondents report hogs free from cholera and 37 report cholera or other disease in a mild form.

REMARKS.—The amount of corn damaged in shock and on stalk by wet weather is exceeding all predictions. A few correspondents estimate that 40 per cent. of the crop is worthless, while the most conservative estimate the loss at 15 to 20 per cent. The trouble is general, and unless the injury is much exagerated the loss will very much affect what was considered the largest yield ever produced. The ears are still very sappy and perfect maturity appears to have been prevented by the unusually moist season.

Farmers whose growing wheat is suffering from insects are requested to send specimens of the insect working the injury to Prof. Garman, Entomologist of the Agricultural Experimental Station at Lexington or to this office, in order that remedies or preventives may be suggested. LUCAS MOORE, Commissioner of Agriculture.

SOME of the leading English journals say it would be of great benefit to England for the United States to own the Philippines.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Nov. 11th, 1898.

It is known that Mr. McKinley feels very keenly the rebuke administered to Algerism by the voters of the country at the Congressional elections, and probably that if he had it all to do over again, he would not be willing to stand sponsor for Alger. The first Cabinet meeting after the election was a very mournful affair; it lasted nearly four hours and was devoted entirely to attempts to extract a few crumbs of comfort from the result in the few States in which the Republicans held their own, and from the fact that they will have a majority in the Senate of the next Congress. The mourners are feeling a little better now, over the probability that the Republicans will by the skin of their teeth barely hold control of the next House, but they are afraid to count too much even upon that little, for fear that the official count, necessary to determine the result in a number of close districts, will leave the Republicans in a minority.

When all the circumstances connected with the campaign are taken into consideration, and the vote cast is compared with that of '96, it will be seen that this week's elections were a great triumph for the Democratic party—a triumph that was really extraordinary in the face of the obstacles which confronted the party. It seems incredible almost that an administration which had the undivided support of the country in fighting to a triumphant close a foreign war should have so soon forfeited and lost so much of that support, although all sorts of appeals, ranging from patriotism to cupidity, were used to retain it. If the Democratic party maintains its present aggressive attitude, it will surely win the Presidential election two years hence.

Senator Jones, of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, does not regard the election of Roosevelt as a serious loss to the Democracy of the country. On the contrary, he talks as though he believed it would be decidedly beneficial. He says the Democratic leaders in New York went astray on the platform and that he regards the defeat of the party in that State as the legitimate reward of straddlers and peacemeal politicians. There are many other Democrats who are sorry that the party failed to carry New York, some for one reason and some for another, but the most of them because they think that Tammany should be satisfied with the control of the party in the city of New York and not seek to control the State and National affairs. They say that if Van Wyck had been elected governor, Mr. Croker would have attempted to control the National Convention, in 1900, and that such attempts bring nothing but injury to the party.

There were several surprising things connected with the testimony of Gen. Lawton, who commanded a division of Shafter's army, in the Santiago campaign, which was taken by a single member of the Commission, Col. Denby. His testimony, as a whole, did not square with things he has said to Gen. Miles, and which Miles had repeated to others, and he has said since testifying that he did not tell some things he knew. All these things have resulted in a determination to give Lawton another chance to testify when the whole Commission will be present. Capt. Clark Howell, of the commission, is said to have information that will enable him to make the cross examination of Lawton interesting. Some other interesting things are likely to be uncovered by the Commission, now that the administration does not feel called upon to keep them quiet for fear of their effect upon the elections. Individuals who thought they were to be permanently protected by the administration are likely to be found guilty of short-comings and punished therefor. The report of Gen. Miles, now in the hands of Secretary Alger, ought to be interesting reading to the Commission, if it really wishes to get at the bottom of things. It contains some points that would not have to be followed very far by the Commission before pay-dirt would be reached. Gen. Shafter has been ordered to come to Washington to testify before the Commission.

The Peace Commission had another joint powwow, at Paris, this week, but they are still talking in the air and not ready to get down to business. As soon as the price we are to pay Spain for the Philippines, is agreed upon, Mr. McKinley will notify the Commission to settle the business.

The eminent gentlemen, representing the United States Canada and England, who have for about a year been holding occasional meetings for the purpose of srving to draw up a treaty settling the numerous disputes we have with Canada, and incidentally drawing high pay for themselves, are now in session in Washington.

The Winter Before Us.

According to Ezekiel Bonzy, who is held to be the most accurate reader of the goose's breast bone in America, the coming winter is going to be a snorter, says the Elkton Progress. It is to start with a snow storm which will come in November, and the snow will stay on the ground for the purpose of catching and holding other snowstorms that will arrive frequently and with great vigor until about the middle of March. Mixed in with the output of snow will be hail, winds and consecutive periods of zero weather, which will cause a great demand for overcoats and double mittens. For the first time in eight years the goose bone is white at the front end, indicating an early snowfall. As the bone of 1898-99 is very wide and mostly white all over its surface, Mr. Bonzy infers that there will be deep snow and good sledding. His conclusions are well reinforced by researches among corn husks all of which are uncommonly thick and well laid on.

Rabbit fur is now an important commercial article. It is known to the trade as electric seal, and when dyed so closely resembles the genuine article as to defy detection except among experts. It is said that $500,000 is invested in rabbit culture in England.

SENATOR QUAY says the recent campaign in Pennsylvania forces him to be a candidate for reelection —that a very large proportion of the next legislature are his personal friends. On joint ballot the Republicans will have about 75 majority.

WHAT WE LIVE FOR.

Dr. Talmage Preaches on What Our Lives Should Be.

The Object of Our Existence Down to the End Should Be Action —Paradise Is Only for the Workers.

Washington, Nov. 13. — To all those who feel that they have no especial mission in the world, this sermon of Dr. Talmage will come as a cheering revelation; text, John xviii, 37: "To this end was I born."

After Pilate has suicided, tradition says that his body was thrown into the Tiber, and such storms ensued on and about that river that his body was taken out and thrown into the Rhone and similar disturbances swept that river and its banks. Then the body was taken out and moved to Lausanne, and put into a deeper pool, which immediately became the center of similar atmospheric and aqueous disturbances. Though these are fanciful and false traditions, they show the execration with which the world looked upon Pilate. It was before this man, when he was in full life and power, that Christ was arraigned as in the court of over and terminer. Pilate said to his prisoner: "Art thou a king, then?" and Jesus answered: "To this end was I born." Sure enough, although all earth and hell arose to keep him down, he is to-day empnlaced, enthroned and coroneted king of earth and king of Heaven. That is what he came for and that is what he accomplished.

By the time a child reaches ten years of age the parents begin to discover that child's destiny, but by the time he or she reaches 15 years of age, the question is on the child's lips: "What shall I do? What am I going to be? What was I made for?" It is a sensible and righteous question, and the youth ought to keep asking it until it is so fully answered that the young man or young woman can say with as much truth as its author, though on a less expansive scale: "To this end was I born."

There is too much divine skill shown in the physical, mental and moral constitution of the ordinary human being to suppose that he was constructed without any divine purpose. If you take me out on some vast plain and show me a pillared temple surmounted by a dome like St. Peter's and having a floor of precious stones and arches that must have taxed the brains of the greatest draughtsman to design, and walls scrolled and niched and paneled and wainsoted and painted, and I should ask you what this building was put up for and you answered "For nothing at all," how could I believe you? And it is impossible for me to believe that any ordinary human being who has in his muscular, nervous and cerebral organization more wonders than Christopher Wren lifted in St. Paul's, or Phidias ever chiseled on the Acropolis, and built in such a way that it shall last long after St. Paul's cathedral is as much a ruin as the Parthenon—that such a being was constructed for no purpose and to execute no mission, and without any divine intention toward some end. The object of this sermon is to help you to find out what you are made for and help you find your sphere and assist you into that condition where you can say with certainty and emphasis and enthusiasm and triumph: "To this end was I born."

First, I discharge you from all responsibility for most of your environments. You are not responsible for your parentage or your grandparentage. You are not responsible for any of the cranks that may have lived in your ancestral line and who a hundred years before you were born may have lived a style of life that more or less affects you to-day. You are not responsible for the fact that your temperament is sanguine, or melancholic, or bilious, or lymphatic, or nervous. Neither are you responsible for the place of your nativity, whether among the granite hills of New England, or the cotton plantations of Louisiana, or on the banks of the Clyde, or the Dneiper, or the Shannon, or the Seine. Neither are you responsible for the religion taught in your father's house, or their religion. Do not bother yourself about what you cannot help or about circumstances that you did not decree.

Take things as they are and decide the question so that you shall be able safely to say: "To this end I was born." How will you decide it? By direct application to the only Being in the universe who is competent to tell you—the Lord Almighty. Do you knew the reason why He is the only one who can tell? Because He can see everything between your cradle and your grave, though the grave be 80 years off. And besides that He is the only Being who can see what has been happening in the last 500 years in your ancestral line, and for thousands of years clear back to Adam, and there is not one person in all that ancestral line of 5,000 years but has somehow affected your character, and even old Adam himself will sometimes turn up in your disposition. The only Being who can take all things that pertain to you into consideration is God, and He is the one you can ask. Life is so short we have no time to experiment with occupations and professions. The reason we have so many dead failures is that parents decide for children what they shall do or children themselves, wrought on by some whim or fancy, decide for themselves, without any imploration of Divine guidance. So we have now in pulpits men making sermons who ought to be in blacksmith shops making plowshares, and we have in the law those who instead of ruining the cases of their clients ought to be pounding shoe lasts, and doctors who are the worst hindrances to their patients' convalescence, and artists trying to paint landscapes who ought to be whitewashing board fences, while there are others making bricks who ought to be remodeling constitutions or shoving planes who ought to be transforming literatures. Ask God about what worldly business you shall undertake until you are so positive you can in earnestness smite your hand on your plow handle or your carpenter's bench, or your Blackstone's "Commentaries," or your medical dictionary, or your Dr. Dick's "Didactic Theology," saying: "For this end was I born." There are children who early develop natural aptitudes for certain styles of work. When the father of the Astronomer Forbes was going to London he asked his children what present he should bring each one of them. The boy who was to be an astronomer cried out: "Bring me a telescope!"

But my subject now mounts into the momentous. Let me say that you are made for usefulness and Heaven. I judge this from the way you are built. You go into a shop where there is only one wheel turning and that by a workman's foot on a treadle, and you say to yourself: "Here is something good being done, yet on a small scale," but if you go into a factory covering many acres and you find thousands of bands pulling on thousands of wheels and shuttles flying and the whole scene bewildering with activities, driven by water or steam or electric power, you conclude that the factory was put up to do great work and on a vast scale. Now, I look at you, and if I should find that you had only one faculty of body, only one muscle, only one nerve, if you could see but not hear, or could hear and not see, if you had the use of only one foot or one hand, and, as to your higher nature, if you had only one mental faculty and you had memory but no judgment, or judgment but no will, and if you had a soul with only one capacity, I should say not much is expected of you. But stand up, oh, man, and let me look you squarely in the face. Eyes capable of seeing everything. Ears capable of hearing everything. Hands capable of grasping everything. Minds with more wheels than any factory ever turned, more power than any Corliss engine ever moved. A soul that will outlive all the universe except heaven, and would outlive all heaven if the life of the other Immortals were a moment short of the eternal. Now, what has the world a right to expect of you? What has God a right to demand of you? God is the greatest of economists in the universe, and He makes nothing uselessly, and for what purpose did He build your body, mind and soul as they are built? There are only two beings in the universe who can answer that question. The angels do not know. The schools do not know. Your kindred cannot certainly know. God knows, and you ought to know. A factory running at an expense of $500,000 a year and turning out goods worth 70 cents a year would not be such an incongruity as you, O man, with such semi-infinite equipment doing nothing, or next to nothing, in the way of usefulness. "What shall I do?" you ask. My brethren, my sisters, do not ask me. Ask God. There's some path of Christian usefulness open. It may be a rough path or it may be a smooth path, a long path or a short path. It may be on the mount of conspicuity or in the valley unobserved, but it is a path on which you can start with such faith and such satisfaction and such certainty that you can cry out in the face of earth and hell and heaven: "To this end was I born."

Do not wait for extraordinary qualifications. Philip, the conqueror, gained his greatest victories seated on a mule, and if you wait for some caparisoned Bucephalus to ride into the conflict you will never get into the worldwide fight at all. Samson slew the Lord's enemies with the jawbone of the stupidest beast created. Shamgar slew 600 of the Lord's enemies with an ox goad. Under God spittle cured the blind man's eyes in the New Testament story. Take all the faculty you have and say: "O Lord, here is what I have! Show me the field, and back me up by omnipotent power. Anywhere, anyhow, any time for God."

It may be helpful if I recite my own experience in this regard. I started for the law without asking any divine direction. I consulted my own tastes. I liked lawyers and courtrooms and judges and juries, and reveled in hearing the Frelinghuysens and the Bradleys of the New Jersey bar, and as assistant of the county clerk, at 16 years of age, I searched titles, naturalized foreigners, recorded deeds, received the confession of judgments, swore witnesses and juries and grand juries, but after awhile I felt a call to the gospel ministry and entered it, and I felt some satisfaction in the work; but one summer, when I was resting at Sharon Springs and while seated in the park of that village, I said to myself: "If I have an especial work to do in the world, I ought to find it out now," and with that determination I prayed as I had never before prayed, and got the divine direction, and wrote it down in my memorandum book, and I saw my life work then as plainly as I see it now. Oh, do not be satisfied with general directions! Get specific directions. Do not shoot at random. Take aim and fire.

And now I came to the climacteric consideration. As near as I can tell, you were built for a happy eternity, all the disasters which have happened to your nature to be overcome by the blood of the Lamb if you will heartily accept that Christly arrangement. We are all rejoiced at the increase in human longevity. People live, as near as I can observe, about ten years longer than they used to. The modern doctors do not bleed their patients on all occasions as did the former doctors. In those times if a man had fever they bled him; if he had consumption they bled him; if he had rheumatism they bled him, and if they could not make out exactly what was the matter they bled him. Olden time phlebotomy was death's coadjutor. All this has changed. From the way I see people skipping about at 80 years of age I conclude that the life insurance companies will have to change their table of risks and charge a man no more premium at 70 than they used to do when he was 60, and no more premium at 50 than when he was 40. By the advancement of medical science and the wider acquaintance with the laws of health and the fact that the people know better how to take care of themselves human life is prolonged. But do you realize what, after all, is the brevity of our earthly state? In the times when people lived 700 and 800 years the patriarch Jacob said that his years were few. Looking at the life of the youngest person in this assembly and supposing that he will live to be a nonagenarian, how short the time and soon gone, while banked up in front of us is an eternity so vast that arithmetic has not figures enough to express its length, or breadth, or depth, or height. For a happy eternity you were born, unless you run yourself against the divine intentions. If standing in your presence my eye should fall upon the feeblest soul here as that soul will appear when the world lets it up and heaven entrances it, I suppose I would be so overpowered that I should drop down as one dead.

You have examined the family Bible and explored the family records, and you may have seen daguerreotypes of some of the kindred of previous generations, you have had photographs taken of what you were in boyhood or girlhood, and what you were ten years later, and it is very interesting to anyone to be able to look back upon pictures of what he was ten, or twenty, or thirty years ago, but have you ever had a picture taken of what you may be and what you will be if you seek after God and feel the spirit's regenerating power? Where shall I plant the camera to take the picture? I plant it on this platform. I direct it toward you. Sit still or stand still while I take the picture. It shall be an instantaneous picture. There! I have it. It is done. You can see the picture in its imperfect state and get some idea of what it will be when thoroughly developed. There is your resurrected body, so brilliant that the noonday sun is a patch of midnight compared with it. There is your soul, so pure that all the forces of diabolism could not spot it with an imperfection. There is your being, so mighty and so swift that flight from heaven to Mercury or Mars or Jupiter and back again to heaven would not weary you, and a world on each shoulder would not crush you. An eye that shall never shed a tear. An energy that shall never feel a fatigue. A brow that shall never throb with pain. You are young again, though you died of decrepitude. You are well again, though you coughed or shivered yourself into the tomb. Your everyday associates are the apostles and prophets and martyrs and most exalted souls, masculine and feminine, of all the centuries. The archangel to you no embarrassment. God Himself your present and everlasting joy. That is an instantaneous picture of what you may be and what I am sure some of you will be.

If you realize that it is an imperfect picture, my apology is what the apostle John said: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." "To this end was I born." If I did not think so, I would be overwhelmed with melancholy. The world does very well for a little while, 80 or 100 or 150 years, and I think that human longevity may yet be improved up to that prolongation, for now there is so little room between our cradle and our grave we cannot accomplish much, but who would want to dwell in this world for all eternity? Some think this earth will finally be turned into Heaven. Perhaps it may, but it would have to undergo radical repairs and thorough eliminations and evolutions and revolutions and transformations infinite to make it desirable for eternal residence. All the east winds would have to become west winds, and all the winters changed to springtides and all the volcanoes extinguished and all the oceans chained to their beds, and the epidemics forbidden entrance and the world so fixed up that I think it would take more to repair this old world than to make an entirely new one. But I must say I do not care where Heaven is, if we can only get there; whether in gardenized America or an emparadised Europe or a world central to the whole universe. "To this end was I born." If each one of us could say that we would go with faces shining and hopes exhilarant amid earth's worst misfortunes and trials.

In the seventeenth century all Europe was threatened with a wave of Asiatic barbarism, and Vienna was especially besieged. The king and his court had fled, and nothing could save the city from being overwhelmed unless the king of Poland, John Sobieski, to whom they had sent for help, should with his army come down for the relief, and from every roof and tower the inhabitants of Vienna watched and waited and hoped, until on the morning of September 11 the rising sun threw an unusual and unparalleled brilliancy. It was the reflection of the sun on the swords and shields and helmets of John Sobieski and his army coming down over the hills to the rescue, and that day not only Vienna, but Europe, was saved. And see you not, O ye souls, besieged with sin and sorrow, that light breaks in; the swords and the shields and the helmets of divine rescue bathed in the rising sun of heavenly deliverance? Let everything else go rather than let Heaven go.

What a poor farthing is all that this world can offer you compared with pardon here and life immortal beyond the stars, unless this side of them there be a place large enough and beautiful enough and grand enough for all the ransomed. Wherever it be, in what world, whether near by or far away, in this or some other constellation, hail, home of light and love and blessedness! Through the atoning mercy of Christ, may we all get there!

GOLD AND MONOPOLIES.

The Instrumentality by Which the Money Power Is Seeking to Do Its Work.

"In reaching out for the barbed-wire trust and great Rockefeller-Carnegie iron and steel 'combine' has disclosed the full proportions of its plan and purposes. The 'Federal Steel company,' as the 'combine' will probably be called, intends to control the iron business of the country. It will mine or control the mining of all the ore. It will fix the price of every pound of iron. It will manufacture or control the manufacture of every kind of iron product, from armor plate and guns and beams and rails to wire, barbed and plain, and cold chisels and hammers and nails. As iron is the foundation and the skeleton of the superstructure of our material civilization, the few men at the head of this 'combine' will exercise a stupendous influence upon the division and distribution of the wealth of this nation, and therefore upon its social and political life. Behind the 'Federal Steel company' there is a dream of wealth and power and aggrandizement that would have seemed fantastic a few years ago, but is now in a favorable way to complete realization."—N. Y. World.

When some great industrial monopoly springs into life the World is quick to observe it, but it is as blind as a Mammoth cave fish to the greatest of all monopolies—that of money. The money monopoly is equal to all others combined, for it controls them all. Money is the machinery by which all modern business is transacted, and they who control the machinery have the business at their mercy. It is as plain as light itself that the gold standard is the instrumentality by which the money power is seeking to do its work. The great money lenders of London, Berlin and New York are dictating the financial policy of Europe, America, and a large part of Asia, through the agency of the gold standard. The specious excuse is offered that bimetallism is impracticable. That it is impossible to keep gold and silver exactly together—on a par—if both are freely used. Therefore we must only have one. It is assumed that the moment one becomes more valuable than the other at the agreed ratio—that is, when a premium appears—the one which rises to a premium ceases to be money and the other becomes the standard; or, as some have claimed, we would have two standards, which to "thinkers" of a certain class is "unthinkable." In other words, the main defense of the gold standard rests upon the idea that the smallest premium upon one of the metals is a greater evil than to destroy that metal entirely as money. The simple statement of the proposition demonstrates its absurdity. At the worst the breaking of the par is no more than a slight inconvenience in accounting, so far as domestic trade is concerned. If, for example, gold should rise to a premium of ten per cent., then a dollar in gold would be equal to a dollar and ten cents in silver. So long as this condition lasted the gold would be held chiefly by the banks (as it is now) and count one part of their reserves. But the condition could not last permanently unless practically all of the gold were expelled from the country, and this could only be when our silver and paper together constituted our full distributive share of the world's money. Until that point was reached it would be more profitable to invest the gold than to hoard it in the banks or elsewhere, because as silver flowed into the country to make up our full share of the world's stock prices would rise, which is only another way of saying that the gold would fall. So far as international parity is concerned, it is never permanently and steadily maintained, even between countries using the same money metal. The exact par of the English pound sterling is $4.866 in American money, but it seldom stands at that figure commercially. It ranges generally from about $4.82 to $4.89, according to the state of the international balances and the varying demands of the different countries for specie. Between gold countries and silver countries the parity is already as badly broken as it can be. The gold standard gives no relief there. Unfortunately for us, the breaking of the par of exchange has given silver-using countries a very great advantage in international trade. The arguments in favor of the gold standard are purely technical—mere quibbles. On the other hand, the objections to it are of the most substantial character. Its adoption means the destruction of a large part of the money supply of the nations in which it is made the standard, falling prices, hard times, oppression of the debtor and an unconscionable advantage to the creditor. The latter is the reason why the world's great creditors favor it. The value of their demands is increased, they obtain command of more and more of other people's wealth for the same number of dollars. In effect they corner the money market and dominate the business of the world. Upon a constantly falling market the weaker business men are forced out, while the stronger ones form combines for their own production. Hence it can be truthfully affirmed that the gold standard is the prolific father of trusts. The Rockefeller-Carnegie combine may control the iron and steel industry, but the money combine controls everything, including the New York World.

THE SILVER PRODUCT.

Treasury Tables Show the Statements of Goldites to Be Without Foundation.

The claim made that there is an overproduction of silver since 1873 as compared with gold, and that this is the cause of its fall in price, is absolutely without foundation. According to the tables issued by the treasury department August 16, 1892, showing the total production of gold and silver in the world at coinage value, it appears that from the year 1792, when our monetary system was founded, to the year 1852, being a period of 60 years, the total production of silver in the world, rating it at coinage value, was $1,769,197,000, and the total production of gold during that time was $960,236,000; that is, there was almost twice as much silver produced as gold. The production of each metal of course varied greatly during the different years, and yet the market ratio between the two metals remained practically the same during all that time. The tables show that during those 60 years there was a variance of only seven-tenths of one point, or just about the cost of exchange. The same tables show that from 1852 to 1873 the total gold production of the world was $2,516,575,000, while the total silver production was $989,225,000; that is, there was 2½ times as much gold produced as silver, yet the market ratio remained undisturbed during those 21 years, just as it had during the period of 60 years, when there was twice as much silver as gold. Again, the same treasury tables show that from 1873 to 1892, inclusive, the total gold production of the world was $2,176,503,000, while the silver production was $2,347,087,000; that is, the production of gold was nearly equal to that of silver. During the first two periods silver was a money metal; during the last period it was not. The fact that during the first two periods, covering over 80 years, the market ratio remained the same, although the production of each metal varied greatly from time to time, shows that the market price or ratio was practically the same as the legal ratio or mint price, so long as both metals were used as money. Now, inasmuch as silver did not fall in value as measured in gold during 60 years in which there was twice as much silver produced as gold, it is clear that had silver not been demonetized it would not have fallen when the gold production was nearly equal to that of silver, as it was after 1873. Again, silver has not fallen in comparison with other property. By taking the average price of all commodities known to the markets it is found that a pound of silver will buy as great an amount of commodities, as great an amount of property as ever. It is gold that has gone up. The law, by striking down the competition, has given gold a monopoly. Practically, the gold dollar is a 200-cent dollar. Nominally, it still has only 100 cents in it, but it takes 200 cents' worth of commodities to get one when measured by bimetallic prices.

JOHN P. ALTGELD.

PRODUCTION OF WHEAT.

In Silver Using Countries the Cost Is Remaining More Stationary.

A few months ago wheat could be produced in the United States, shipped to England, and sold at 11 cents per bushel cheaper than a like quantity could be raised and shipped to the same markets from Russia, India or Argentine Republic—the great wheat-producing countries of the world. Improved machinery in those countries has probably cheapened its production to some degree, and for the sake of argument, I will admit that it can be laid down either in London or Liverpool at the same price per bushel. If this be true, then the wheat from all over the world would come into competition with ours in foreign markets, and if the quality were the same, it would appear to the casual observer that the wheat produced in the United States would sell on equal terms with that from other countries. But such is not the fact. Why? For this reason: Because we are a gold standard nation, and it is easier to effect exchanges among those having a common medium of exchange. In this country there is no difference between the value of gold and silver money—it is all redeemable in gold—while in the silver-using countries gold is at a premium of about 100 per cent. In the past 20 years, in silver-using countries, there has been no material change either in prices or in wages when computed in silver. The link that held the two metals together from time immemorial to 1873 was free coinage of both. When free coinage was denied silver, that metal began to depreciate in value and prices in silver are no longer prices in gold. Hence the difference in prices between a gold-using and a silver-using nation. But how does this affect the American farmer? In this way: The same quantity of silver in silver-using countries will buy as much material or labor as ever, while it takes one-half as much gold to buy the silver as it did in 1873. This gives England an opportunity to buy up the silver product, coin it into rupees, and buy the wheat of India to come into competition with the American wheat in the markets of the world. This, and similar instances, have cheapened the price of our product because it is equal to a bounty on exports to the difference between the price of gold and silver. This is an unjust discrimination against the farmers of this country. It has materially cheapened the price of wheat, and as its price has gone down until the cost of production leaves no margin to the produced, he cannot afford to employ labor.

PROOF TO THE CONTRARY.

He Was Too Fresh for a Man Who Had Been Bathing in the Great Salt Lake.

The prematurely bald young man with a downy white mustache had been doing his best to make a profound impression on his rural relatives. There was no reason why he should do this except in obedience to a natural tendency which is second only to that of self-preservation, the desire to show off. The old gentleman with heavy-soled boots and a black string necktie had listened silently for a long time. He broke in on the series of travelers' tales, with the remark:

"It kind o' beats my time that the west end o' this continent should be so different from the east."

"Oh, if you haven't traveled much and don't know the difference, this part of the world is all right," was the answer.

"Yes. But it oughtn't to be so misrepresented. They ought not to complain that the east has gone an' organized monopolies to gobble everything worth havin' when the west has all the geysers an' the petrified forests and the trees that you can drive a horse and wagon through, if you can find an auger big enough to make the hole. I know it's all true, too, fur I've seen pictures of those things in the geographies. But this lake you was tellin' about—I can't help thinkin' you got imposed on somehow there."

"You mean the Great Salt Lake in Utah. It's there. I saw it with my own eyes."

"The lake that's so salt fish can't live in it?"

"Certainly."

"An when you went bathin' you found the water so salt that you couldn't sink if you tried?"

"Yes, indeed. And what's more—"

"Hold on. I'm not doubtin' your veracity. I don't say you don't tell every bit of this is good faith. I've had the same kind of experiences. One time I was in a room where breakfast had just been set, and although I was a stranger in the house, I walked up and took a fried egg off the plate with a spoon and put it in my mouth. Imagine my surprise when I immediately began to raise up and toward the ceilin'. It was amazin' how fine I floated. My wife an' the girls was just as surprised as I was when they came in, and I'll never forget how funny they looked hopping up into the air, trying to do the same thing. After while I wanted to get down, but I couldn't make it. I began to get worried. I started to call for help and accidentally bit into the egg. As soon as I did so I was gently lowered till I had the use of both feet as usual. And it all seemed so real that when I got up the next mornin' I thought eatin' breakfast an' feedin' the pigs must be a dream."

"But, my dear sir—"

"It's all right. I don't attach any blame to you. It can all be explained by science. But you can't make me believe that anybody could bathe in water as salt as you say that was and come home so uncommon fresh. It couldn't be done."—Washington Star.

The Heaviest Man on Earth.

If greatest were the test of avoirdupois the place of honor would be filled by Maurice Canon, a native of the small frontier town of Stein, in the state of Constance. This man is said to weigh not less than 50 stone, and may claim to be the heaviest man on earth. He measures over 100 inches around the waist and 64 around the thigh. His enormous weight does not apparently inconvenience him, for he is active and in robust health. He is a well-to-do, middle-aged farmer, and, though his gigantic proportions naturally make him an object of curiosity to his neighbors, he has declined all offers to stray from his native fields.—Humanitarian.

PROF. HOAG'S IDEAS.

In a recent paper on highway engineering, Prof. W. R. Hoag, of the University of Minnesota, offered some suggestions on the subject of instruction in road-building, based on his experience as instructor and engineer.

To begin, the students should be brought into sympathy with the subject by developing an interest in it, and to that end a few lectures on the historical development of highway construction are useful. These can be followed by an equal number on transportation in general, with special reference to the part played by the common road. The subject is thus shown to be a broad one, far-reaching in its scope, and not merely a relatively narrow one of grading, draining and stone-laying.

All the forces at work for the betterment of the highways should then be considered, beginning with the national office of road inquiry, national road association, state associations, state institutes, engineering societies, cycle clubs, other organizations dealing with the subject, and the attitude of the press toward the movement. The state laws should be gone over, and carefully studied where efficient and successful systems are established.

A WELL-KEPT ROAD.

Visits to permanently good and habitually poor roads should be made and the causes that have led to the different results should be discussed and identified. Road conventions and other meetings at which papers on road-building and maintenance are read and discussed should be attended. Some good work on the subject should be used as a general guide, and this should be supplemented by studies on special topics, essays and discussions, drawing upon all possible sources of information and constantly observing roads and streets in process of construction and under traffic.

"The instructor should engage actively," says Prof. Hoag, "in all movements in the state having any interest in the cause. . . . Every instructor in civil engineering having in immediate charge this line of work should be a strong political factor in this cause which has already done so much for the material advancement of the world. Correct notions on the administrative side of road-building are sadly deficient in many states. By exercising the power to which his position justly and naturally entitles him, the educator can help create an activity which will soon bring into requisition our graduates who have thus been well prepared for all the duties coming to the highway engineer."

WIDE TIRES ABROAD.

Their Importance Is Fully Appreciated by the Governments of Many Foreign Lands.

The importance of wide tires in preserving the highways is appreciated in many foreign countries, and laws exist prescribing the width of tires that may be used on the public roads. The San Francisco Chronicle says that "Austria requires tires for wagons built for more than 2¼ tons to be at least 4 1-3 inches wide. If for more than 4½ tons, 6¼ inches. Bohemia requires a 4½-inch tire for two-horse wagons. France requires tires from three to ten inches wide; for four-wheeled wagons tires are usually at least six inches, with the front axle shorter than the rear, so that the wheels do not 'track.' Germany requires at least four inches for 'wagons for heavy loads.' Switzerland requires one inch of width for each draft animal, and six-inch tires for wagons for 'heavy loads.' In Canada the agricultural department recommended six-inch tires for loads of a ton or more, and that is probably the law."

A number of states in this country have passed wide-tire laws, but even some states which spend much money in improving their roads fail to see the importance of prescribing the width of tires that will do most to maintain and protect them. It is a short-sighted policy and one that costs money

TARRED MACADAM ROADS.

A New Method Used and Advocated by the City Engineer of Canterbury, England.

A method of laying macadam roads, in which each stone is coated with tar before it goes into the roadway, is used and advocated by the city engineer of Canterbury, England.

In his system the stones are prepared for the tar by heating them, either in the open, or in an oven or kiln. When done in the open, they are spread out on a flat bed, some 12 inches thick, and covered with three or four inches of coke and breeze, with a little wood to aid the fire, and in this way a stack of stone about five feet high is formed. It is frequently made conical and closed at the tops. Then it is fired and allowed to burn for seven or more days. As this method, however, causes the disintegration of many stones, an oven or kiln, with its more equable temperature, is preferable.

Tar of good quality should be used and heated long enough to assure great tenacity. It may be boiled in 50-gallon kettles, for three or four hours and, after half a bucketful of pitch is added, boiled a little longer.

The stones, to receive their coatings of tar, should not be warmer than the palm of the hand can bear comfortably. If they are used when too hot, the value of the tar for building is destroyed, and, if they are not hot enough, the tar will be so thick that it will soften in hot weather.

When the stone is of the proper temperature it is screened, so as to secure three distinct sizes—one to two inch for the bottom layer; one-half to one inch for the middle layer and one-quarter to one-half inch for the top layer. The bottom layer is three or four inches thick and is thoroughly rolled, and a very tin top layer is laid and also thoroughly rolled. A final top-dressing of quarter-inch and smaller granite screenings is put on, and traffic is admitted to work this fine material down into the tarred roadbed.

A road so formed is said to be capable of carrying the heaviest country traffic and to be good for seven years, with an outlay of four cents a square yard for repairs, when more extensive repairs may be required. The cost for a depth of four-and a-half inches is for material 36 cents per square yard, excavating 18 cents; broken brick ballast, 20 cents; labor, 18 cents; rolling, 6 cents; contingencies, 10 cents, a total of $1.08 a square yard.—L. A. W. Bulletin.

OUR COUNTRY ROADS.

Year After Year Vast Amounts Are Squandered in Attempts to Patch Them Up.

The rapid passing of the fall season and the approach of winter brings us face to face with the sad reality of wasted opportunities on our country roads. Hundreds of dollars have been expended upon the highways of Delaware county by the various townships during the past five months, yet many of these roads are now in fully as bad condition as when the spring work was begun.

It is a waste of money to follow the old plan of patching the highways, year after year this method is pursued, only to find the roads quagmires after every rain and morasses when the thawing days in winter come. That all this entails loss upon farmers in new wagons, repairs to vehicles and extra horses is so patent as the presence of the mud, yet road reform for a large part of Delaware county seems as large in the future as ever.

Evidence of the value of a smooth surface is given on the Providence road between this city and Media. Some years ago that highway was a wretched compilation of ruts and hillocks and often two hours were consumed in the journey between this city and the county seat. A good road-bed now reduces the time one-half and likewise cuts down the cost of repairs to a sum less than one-half.

What has been done on that highway is a standing argument for a good surface for every highway, which is not only cheaper than a poor one in the yearly cost of maintenance, but in every item of expenditure for those who travel. More than this; they enhance the value of abutting property and give to the taxpayers something in return for the tribute annually paid for the support of the township government.

It is no small matter to the farmer that he has good highways upon which to haul his products to market. They not only mean return in actual money, but in labor as well. Farmers living only six or eight miles from this city or Media are obliged to rise from their beds long before daylight in order to reach the market in time for the buyers. This loss of sleep and time in going and returning would all be saved if the road surface was smooth, for traveling would be swift and comfortable for the rider and easy of accomplishment on the part of the faithful horses which haul the burden.—Chester (Pa.) Times.

Shale Roads in New York.

Additional roads of shale are being laid in a practical way in Orange county, N. Y. Mr. A. E. Goddefroy, who is roadmaster for the town of Deerpark, has used considerable of the material this season on properly-prepared roadbeds. About nine inches of the coarser rock is first put on, thoroughly wet down, and rolled with a four-ton roller until it is reduced to about six inches, and then a top dressing of finer material is put on and rolled. The result is a surface that is smoother than any macadam and most delightful to ride upon. These stretches of good roads must in time convince the farmers that hard roads, built in a scientific way, and properly maintained, are a benefit to them.

PULL-AND-BE-DAMNED POINT.

There Are Several of Them in Maine, and the Ill-Sounding Name Means Something.

The Pilgrims and their descendants who traveled over Maine in the early days of its settlement had a great reputation for piety in the parent colony, but when they got away from home and beyond the hearing of the ministers some of them seem to have acted and talked as wickedly as people do nowadays. Maine is a large state, with a great number of mountains, lakes and rivers, so that many exploring parties felt compelled to take good quantities of New England rum along in order to help out their vocabulary in giving appropriate names to newly-discovered territory. Tradition says that whenever the voyagers got out of rum or ran short for names they borrowed all sorts of words from the Indian language and tacked them onto the map wherever they seemed to fit; but in spite of good intention and praiseworthy effort not a few places in Maine now bear names that should make the Pilgrim of 200 years ago hold up his hands in horror.

Just across the river from Bucksport is a high headland that has been known as Pull-and-Be-Damned Point for more than a hundred years. After the granite bastions of Fort Knox were built upon the headland the truly good people tried to change the name to Fort Point, but as there was a place five miles below bearing that name it never held, and the ancient and irreligious title is still popular.

The meaning of the term is apparent to everybody who has attempted to row a boat past the point at ebb tide. The river, which is nearly a mile wide opposite Bucksport, contracts to a few rods here and rushes through Penobscot Narrows like a millrace. At such times men who have tried to row or scull seaweed-laden boats past the point have found that they could do as the name suggested and still make no headway.

Down at the mouth of the Kennebec, near Squirrel island and east of Castine, on the Sedgwick shore, are points which bear the same name. There is another in Moosehead lake, and still another in Schoodic lake, in Washington county. In fact, if local tradition can be trusted, there are dozens of places in Maine with titles indicative of their great resistance to the propulsive power of oars.

Up in Sysladobsis lake, in Lakeville plantation, is a small bay which has been known as Hell-Before-Breakfast cove for more than half a century. The name was born from a dramatic incident which took place there when the big Princeton tannery was started. Some men with scow loads of bark had landed on the shore for breakfast, and while they were eating one of the boats went adrift. Sam Hall, a young fellow of the company, plunged in to rescue the boat. When the boss of the crew told him to come back and not make a fool of himself he made answer that he would get that boat before he came back or take his breakfast in a region where drowning accidents are unknown. A minute later he sunk and never came to the surface again. Wishing to record the dramatic fitness of things, his companions erected a rough wooden monument at the edge of the cove, which still bears the name of the rash young man and of the place where he perished.—N. Y. Sun.

SHEDDING THE BLUE.

The Uniforms of Uncle Sam's Soldiers Will Continue to Do Good Service.

Soldiers who have returned home and been mustered out are shedding the blue uniforms of Uncle Sam. But the uniforms will continue to do service even after being discarded by the men who wore them to the front. Occasionally a blouse, a pair of leggings or a cavalry boot is to be seen in the stock of a pawnbroker. Some of the soldiers get rid of the garments by giving them to their own children or their neighbors' boys. These youngsters delight in the blue clothes. They wear them regardless of fit, adjusting them as well as they may, with pins and bits of string. They are particularly fond of leggings, and a boy with a pair of them is the envied of all the juveniles in his circles. He can trade them for any other valuables any of the envious may possess.

A canteen is another favorite article from the soldier's kit, but it is not always put to good use. Over on the West side one day last week the police raided a can-rushing soiree in a secluded alley. The receptacle the guests were using was a canteen that went through the campaign.

The slouch hats are also in demand, especially amongst teamsters, or young fellows who desire to put a tough edge on themselves. Besides being a serviceable article of dress Uncle Sam's hats are capable of being pressed into wonderful and startling shapes. Some of the decorated hats command fancy prices, and many have been offered for sale, which the venders are willing to guarantee had seen service in the battles before Santiago. They point to holes in them as passages made by Mauser bullets.

Of course the soldiers are not allowed to retain their arms, but what they are allowed to keep they generally part with quickly, usually in a spirit of generosity, but occasionally as a means of profit.—Chicago Chronicle.

HARDSHIPS OF ARMY LIFE.

From the Press, Milroy, Ind.

One of the first to offer their services for the country in the Civil War, was A. R. Sefton, of Milroy, Rush Co., Ind. He made a good record. The life of every soldier is a hard one, and Mr. Sefton's case was no exception. "We were in Tennessee, penned in on all sides. Our rations were very scarce," said he, "and we had begun to go on quarter allowance, and as the rain was not enough to replenish the wells or streams, our canteens went empty. We were hurried on, and the only way to quench our thirst was to go down on our hands and knees and drink from the hoof tracks made by the horses.

Our Canteens were Empty.

"Some of us were taken sick from the effects of this. I was laid up several weeks in a field hospital from fever. From that time I was always afflicted more or less.

"About four years ago I became much worse. Our family doctor seemed puzzled over my case, and it began to look as if there was no hope for my recovery, and that the inevitable end was near.

"Last November I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The physician said they were an excellent medicine, but would do no good in my case. But I tried them, and am glad I did for I became better at once. Eight boxes, taken according to directions, cured me. I used the last of the pills about a year ago, and have not been troubled with my ailments since."

The power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the vast number of diseases due to impure or poisoned blood, has been demonstrated in thousands of instances as remarkable as the one related above.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. A MUCH-MOURNED MOTHER.

Col. Shafter Thought Twice in One Month Was Too Often for Her to Die.

When Shafter was senior colonel of the army he was temporarily in charge of some western post, and numbered in his command an exceedingly bright, capable fellow whose cleverness was continually getting him the noncommission stripes, and whose escapades were just as frequently getting him reduced to the ranks. One day this soldier turned up at Shafter's quarters with a long face and applied for leave to attend the funeral of his mother, who had died the previous night, he said, in the town. The request was granted, but later on, in looking over the same records, the colonel discovered that the same man had been granted leave the month before on the identical pretext. Shafter said nothing, but a couple of days afterward encountered the bereaved warrior on the parade ground. "Look here, my man," said Fresco Bill, solemnly, "I want to ask you a question. Were you good to that mother of yours while she was alive?"

"Well, sir—yes, sir—that is, I hope so," stammered the culprit, not knowing what was coming.

"I hope so, too," replied the colonel. "I've heard of mothers dying for their sons, but never of one dying twice in 30 days for one. You may go in mourning for a month—at the guardhouse."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

A trade between Prof Voshell and R. T. Clementa was closed one day this week, that had been hanging fire for over eight months. The interests involved in the trade were of such vital importance that to be in haste was out of the question. However, about ten o'clock Wednesday, the deeds were drawn up—stamped, signed, sealed and delivered, so that each party could hold forever against all comers and everybody else. Prof. V. as party of the first part delivered one kitchen clock of ancient pattern with a John Hancock face on it, one school clock with a Strasburg chronometer balance movement and built on the Tom Thumb order with free lectrue departments on the ground floor, 1 bantam rooster 11-years old, bliud in one eye and drawing a pension of $6 a month and back pay. R. T. Clements as party of the second part delivered a museum of ornithology known in every day grammar as a coo-coo clock—the coo-coo had cooed its last coo; the face had lost its charming smile and looked like a shorthorn cow without any kinfolks; it had a pendulum of alabester and hands chisled out of Italian marble, inlaid with dust of remote centuries.

Julius Hoffman was passing along the river front the other day when he discovered a human skeleton protruding from the bank. He began an investigation, and when he got through he had three skeletons laid out on the bank in front of the postoffice, one of a man who was seven feet tall, one of a woman who was six feet tall, and the other, a skeleton of a dog, all having been buried in the same grave. They can be seen at Everett Helm's barber shop.

When Elder Ira M. Boswell came here three weeks ago from Junction City, Ky., a total stranger to the people of this place and vicinity, to conduct a protracted meeting at the Christian church, no one could be made believe that to exceed five or six persons would unite with the church, but he began firing facts at his congregations right at the start, and in a few nights the house was packed from wall to wall, while the rostrum was occupied by the small boys. He preached alone, Elder Buchanan, the pastor, being called away on the third day of the meeting. Bro. Boswell made no statement which he could not back up with the scripture, and his sermons abounded in truths interspersed with wit and sarcasm. The following persons united with the church and were baptized: Chas. Cox, Lizzie Walton, Alean Chambers, Scott Chambers, Nattie Carpenter and wife, Lucy Wells, Lon Akin, Earl Theetge, Cordia Rector, Mamie Buchanan, Mamie Rector, Lizzie Hartman, Edith Davis, Mary Evans, Dalsey Nixon, Lon Nixon, W. The protracted meeting at Bullittsville is over, and we feel a little lonely, so will pass a few minutes in writing a few items for the RECORDER. The correspondent from Bullittsville will report details of the meeting at that place and although he has a rare gift in such matters and an imaginatiou as fertile as any one, he will be taxed to his utmost to do full justice to the occasion.

Miss Lizzie Graddy will start in a few days, for Lexington, to remain until Christmas. She will be missed very much here, as her friends and admirers are numerous.

We miss our old correspondent, Mr. Tolin, from this place, and having looked over the paper ever since he left for some items from here, but [illegible] we will endeavor with your kind permission to furnish a few items each week. We cannot promise to fill Mr. Tolin's place, but will do what we can in giving the news where it will do no harm.

The hunters gun is heard on every hand, not from Monday morning to Saturday night, but from Monday morning to Sunday night. This thing of a lot of idlers and loafers prowling around over the farms, scaring stock in many ways, rendering themselves a nuisance, ought to be curtailed in some manner if possible. A lady is not safe to drive on the public roads unless her horse is extraordinarily gentle and cannot be frightened by a gun. There is no use of a game law, because they have been shooting quails here ever since they were hatched out. We have people here who do not regard law and violate it daily and boldly.

The farmers are busy gathering corn. A good yield is reported, and not so much rot as was thought there would be. Tobacco stripping is also progressing as rapidly as the weather will permit. The late tobacco has proven best this year, a thing that is seldom ever the case.

Mr. Terrill, our obliging mail carrier, is able to be at his post again. He will make an effort to have his time of starting from Ludlow changed to a half hour earlier so that he will not be out so late. A decided improvement.

The protracted meeting at Bullittsburg has been postponed for a short time on account of Rev. Hoover's being engaged in a meeting at Erlanger. The time will be anuouuced as soon as ascertained.

The Election.

The county board of election commissioners, James N. Pearson, James W. Allen and Owen S. Watts met at the County Clerk's office, last Friday, and proceeded to canvass the vote of the county cast for Congressman on the 8th inst. The returns from all the precincts, except Verona, were in, and it was received by mail at noon. The following shows the official vote by precincts in the county:

	Berry.	Donaldson.
Burlington	162	65
Bullittsville	149	8
Petersburg	171	44
Bellevue	76	44
Rabbit Hash	113	10
Big Bone	121	24
Beaver	72	9
Verona	132	17
Walton	126	62
Union	122	7
Florence	125	25
Constance	61	71
Total	1429	386

Berry's majority, 1,043.

Burlington reported 11 ballots spoiled—none rejected.

Petersburg reported 1 ballot spoiled and 4 rejected and not counted, and failed to return the rejected ballots.

Rabbit Hash reported 2, Walton, 2, and Florence, 1 ballot, spoiled.

Constance reported and returned six ballots rejected and not counted. Four of these ballots were for Donaldson and two for Berry, and were so counted by the commissioners, they considering the intention of the voter clearly manifest in each instance.

For Police Judge—S. A. Dulaney, 26; A. M. Thomas, 24.

James Aberan and R. P. Rice tied for councilman, and it devolved upon the commissioners to decide which should have the office, and they proceeded to do so by writing the name of each on a slip of paper which was deposited in a hat, when one name was drawn out, and that being R. P. Rice, he was given the certificate.

The work of the board was easily performed, there being no complications to annoy it in the least, passing upon the rejected ballots from Constance being the only duty other than mere clerical, and that only required a look at the ballots by the commissioners for them to decide what to do.

Mr. W. P. Holton, who died of kidney and bladder trouble on the 7th inst., was 76 years old. He was born December 11th, 1822, on the farm where he died. He lived many years in Gallatin county, and about ten years ago he purchased and moved to the old homestead, where he spent the remainder of his days. He leaves a widow, one son, John, and one daughter, Mrs. Enoch White, of Gallatin county. The remains were placed in the vault at the Bullittsburg cemetery, from which they will be interred. Mr. Holton was a clever gentleman, an indulgent husband and father, and leaves many friends to mourn his death.

The writer asserts that on an average about forty nobilities are actually manufactured in the republic annually.

THE last private house directly connected with the episode of the Boston tea party in the great struggle for liberty is being torn down to make room for a business block. The old Bradlee house, for as such it is known, has stood at the corner of Tremont and Hollis streets for 127 years, and the land, which when the building was built was a part of a pasture, is to-day worth $100,000.

THE total number of paupers in Ohio according to Secretary of State Kinney's report is 39,038. Of this number 10,325 males and 5,356 females were supported in infirmaries, at a cost during year ending the first Monday in September, of $836,048. Paupers kept otherwise, to the number of 22,757, cost the state $388,728. The number of paupers credited with a higher education is 268 males and 144 females.

DR. A. J. HARRISON, chairman of the Bristol and Clinton zoological society, in a recent reading, showed that snakes did not really have any fascinating or charming power over their prey. The doctor comes to this conclusion after a lengthy study of the matter. He cites the fact that rabbits, rats, ducks and hens, even after seeing their companions crushed or swallowed, showed no signs of alarm.

HERR NEUFELD, set free at Omdurman after 13 years' captivity, is almost like the prisoner of the Bastile, who asked to be taken back. He has found his way to Cairo, but only to poverty and neglect. The German consul has money in hand for him, but it is money given for his "rescue," and, as he no longer requires to be rescued, it is not available for his support. He is friendless, or thinks he is; he has almost forgotten his native tongue, and is in danger of losing his reason.

BUSHELS of pearls have been found during the past few years in the mounds built by the ancient Americans who occupied the Mississippi valley. Ohio has been the especially lucrative field for investigation concerning the mound builders. More than a gallon of pearls were found with two skeletons in the Effigy mound near Chillicothe. All of the pearls were perforated, probably done with a heated copper wire, and probably for the purpose of attaching the pearls to belts or clothing.

ACCORDING to the report of the general superintendent of the railway mail service, 8,074 clerks are employed in that department. Pieces of mail which could not be delivered, or which require special attention before delivery, because badly addressed, numbered 13,503,486, of which 7,655,585 pieces were sent to their destination or returned to the writer. The remaining number were sent to the dead letter office. The casualties numbered 597, the greatest number on record. Seven clerks were killed, 34 seriously injured, 146 slightly injured.

THE per capita consumption of wine in 1885 was .38 gallon in Great Britain, .39 gallon in the United States and 1.06 gallons in Germany. In 1896 the per capita consumption had decreased to .34 gallon in Great Britain and .28 gallon in the United States. The consumption of wine in France was enormous, 29.50 gallons per capita in 1896. Bavaria drinks proportionately more beer than any other nation, the per capita consumption there being annually no less than 50 gallons. Belgiums follows with a per capita consumption of 43 gallons.

THE first paper mill in Montana will soon be erected at Manhattan, in that state. The material to be used in the manufacture is the white barley straw grown in the Gallatin valley, thus utilizing a product of the states which heretofore has gone to waste. The plant will be the only one of its kind in the United States, as at the present time there are no paper mills in this country converting straw into pulp and paper. In Russia there are a few mills of this sort, while Germany has more than 100 mills which manufacture pulp and paper from the German barley straw.

ANOTHER BLUFF.

Sagasta Says the Cortes Alone Can Consent to Abandon Territory.

Spain Finds the Elections in the United States Resulted in Nothing to Aid Spanish Diplomacy—Emperor William's Visit to Spain.

MADRID, Nov. 14.—The result of the United States elections came as a surprise and disappointment to Sagasta, who had confidently expected that the republicans would at least have lost control of the house of representatives. The Spanish cabinet is convinced that the election upon which it had been counting to obtain better terms at Paris have resulted in nothing that can aid Spanish diplomacy.

The intended visit of Emperor William, in honor of which Adm. Camara's squadron is under orders to proceed to Cartagena, now furnishes another straw to clutch at. The queen regent, whose health is visibly impaired by the strain of the last eight months, thinks the wisest course to be for the cabinet to instruct the Spanish peace commissioners frankly to concede the American demand of the Philippines and to work honestly and expeditiously to frame a treaty.

Not so, however, Sagasta, who is still sparring for time and hopes to succeed in one more gigantic bluff. He now says that the cabinet requires the authorization of the cortes before it can consent to abandon the Philippines, and he is reported to have informed the Spanish commissioners that they have no mandate to discuss such eventualities.

The marked sympathy for Spain expressed almost unanimously by the German newspapers, coupled with the purchase at Berlin and Frankfort of Spanish exterior and Cuban bonds, the German holdings of which have been quadrupled during the last three months, give an exaggerated significance to the intended visit of the German emperor and empress. It is not yet known what the emperor's plans may be on his arrival at Cartagena on November 19, but as soon as the Hohenzollern reaches that naval station the imperial pair will be invited by an autograph letter from the queen regent to visit Madrid.

Lord Salisbury's reference to the American republic as a factor in Asiatic and possibly European diplomacy which might not conduce to the interests of peace, is widely commented upon here as strengthening the prevailing impression that Germans wish to intervene in the Philippines. All but the extreme Weylerites dread the consequences of a resumption of hostilities by the United States, which they are aware would probably involve the loss of the Canaries, and this in spite of the present German lining to the cloud, remains the irresistible motive that must eventually determine the cabinet to reconsider the instruction that it is now believed to have sent to the Spanish peace commissioners.

The ministry of finance has in hand a project for the conversion of the Spanish exterior bonds and the funded debts of Cuba and the Philippines, the idea being to maintain the treasury guarantees of Philippine bonds and Cuban bonds of the six and five per cent. denominations, but to reduce the intetest to 3½ and 3 per cent., respectively. This partially accounts for the firmness of Cuban bonds in Paris and Berlin, where speculation in them is unusually active.

MADRID, Nov. 14.—El Imparcial says the government has forwarded instructions to Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission at Paris, and that Monday's conference may be the last but one, "unless the American commissioners moderate their claim."

According to El Imparcial, a member of the cabinet has virtually declared as such.

WAS NOT ON THE PROGRAMME

Tenor Collenz, at the Century Theater, St. Louis, Accidentally Wounds Prima Donna Nedda Morrison.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.—At the Century theater, in the course of the presentation of "I Pagliacci," Tenor Francesco Collenz carried out a finale in one of the acts by a bit of realism that was not down on the programme. With unwonted ardor Mr. Collenz wounded Miss Nedda Morrison, the prima donna, in the arm with a dagger. Blood spurted forth from a wound in the left forearm, the actress fainted and the curtain was rung down. Manager Levering called for a physician from the audience. Dr. Thompson responded and speedily revived Miss Morrison, who was forced to retire to her hotel. The wound is not serious.

WINCHESTER, Ky., Nov. 14.—Patrick Kleen, for years a railroad watchman, was Sunday morning found dead in bed. He was about 60 years old and without a family.

SPANISH TROOPS MUTINY.

Nearly 10,000 Soldiers Clamor for Back Pay—They Refuse to Return to Spain and Promise to Cause Trouble.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—An interesting lot of news has reached the war department from Havana. Arrangements have been made by the Spanish authorities to send back to Spain the Spanish troops, numbering 8,500 men, upon the arrival of the American garrison. It was expected that they would sail next Tuesday or Wednesday, but an unexpected obstacle has arisen among the men themselves. They are on the verge of mutiny, openly declaring they will not return to Spain until they receive their pay, now far in arrears, for service in Cuba. The mutiny extends not alone to the enlisted men, but to their officers, and is directed against the executive officials of the Madrid government on the island. Some of the men have not been paid for nearly a year, and to all of them several months pay is due.

AN INSANE WOMAN'S DEED.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 14.—Ida E. Arola, 23 years of age, early Sunday threw herself through the window of the Houghton express, on the Michigan Central railroad, when the train was a short distance from Columbiaville. She was an insane woman who was being deported to Finland in accordance with the immigration law, she having resided here less than a year. Immigration Inspector Williams and the matron of the Sault Ste Marie custom house had the girl in charge. Williams stated Sunday night that she had made no outbreak at any time during the journey from Marquette, where she had been detained in jail. The first her custodian knew of the sad affair was when they heard the breaking glass. Mr. Williams said the dead girl was suffering from extreme melancholia.

THE FOOTBALL PROGRAMME.

The Harvards Will Practice on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and Leave for Meriden Thursday.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 14.—The football programme at Harvard this week is briefly as follows:

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday there will be the usual practice, only it will be stiffer than ever.

On Wednesday evening there may be another mass meeting in Sander's theater to give the men a send-off, such as was given them just before the Pennsylvania game. If it is definitely decided to hold such a meeting it is probable that Governor-elect Roosevelt, '80 of New York, will address the boys. On Thursday morning the Harvard team will breakfast early and leave for Meriden, Ct.

Maj. Marchand, With Capt. Baratier, Left Cairo, Egypt, for That Point—His Expedition Will Retire.

CAIRO, Nov. 14.—Maj. Marchand, commander of the French expedition at Fashoda, started Sunday for that point with Capt. Baratier, who carried Marchand's report to Paris and brought the reply of the French government.

On their arrival at Fashoda the expedition will immediately retire by way of Sobat, southwest of Fashoda at the junction of the Sobat river and the White Nile, from which point they will move overland to Jibutil, the French post in the Eesa district, on the west coast of the gulf of Aden.

THE PRINCETON-YALE GAME.

The Princeton Football Team Defeated the Yale Team in a Score of 6 to 0 in a Hotly Contested Game.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 14.—The football game between Yale and Princeton teams Saturday afternoon ended in a score of 6 to 0, in favor of Princeton.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 14.—The Yale football eleven returned from Princeton Sunday night. They were a disappointed looking lot of men and refused to discuss Saturday's game at all.

None of the men who played in Saturday's game is any the worse for it. They are all more or less bruised, but were fit to go into practice Monday.

Heaviest Snow of the Season.

LARNED, Kan., Nov. 14.—This section of the state was visited by the heaviest snow of the season Saturday night and Sunday. The ground was covered to a depth of three or four inches, and it is said the snow was much heavier in the counties north and west of here. The snow was wet. The winter wheat will be benefited.

"Dewey" Put Out the Fire.

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., Nov. 14.—Wm. Hunt, baggagemaster at the Pennsylvania depot, has a dog named Dewey. Saturday evening, while the family were at dinner in the dining room, a peculiar noise was noticed in the sitting room. An examination revealed the fact that a burning coal had fallen from an open grate stove to the carpet below and had already ignited it. The dog in making the peculiar noise was dexterously using its fore paws in scratching out the fire, which it succeeded in doing.

ANNUAL REPORT.

Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance Tells of His Department.

Recommends That the General Government Arm the Volunteers Instead of the States—The Coast Defenses—Work of the Arsenals.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Gen. D. W. Flagler, chief of the bureau of ordnance, has made his annual report to the secretary of war. It shows that there were expended during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, $7,348,795, and that there still remains of the appropriations made for the ordnance bureau, $19,793,359. This large sum is derived from the appropriations for the fiscal year which were made for war purposes amounting to $21,504,592. Regarding the equipment of volunteers, the general thinks it would be as well as to have the government equip them instead of their bringing their state arms into service, saying that it could be done as quickly owing to the condition of the arms of state troops.

He speaks in terms of praise in the manner in which work has been performed at arsenals and ordnance factories in the rush that was made in putting the country on a footing for war with Spain. As to the equipment of an army, he says:

"So long as the principal dependence in this country in time of war is in a large volunteer force, newly levied, it is impracticable to keep on hand large supplies of cavalry, artillery and horse equipments, as these in the course of a few years will not only deteriorate, but will have to be materially modified to keep pace with improvements. The major part of such material can, by taking advantage of the resources of Rock Island and the other arsenals and the numerous private establishments capable of producing it, be supplied as rapidly as troops can be raised, mustered into the service and prepared for campaign. There should, however, be on hand field and siege artillery, with carriages, and a portion of the harness required for 500,000 men. Such guns and carriages can not be turned out in large numbers until about six months after initiating the work."

For equipping an army with a supply of small arms he thinks there should be a supply of 100,000 on hand of any new arm and the arsenals kept in a condition so as to produce 2,500 per day.

An interesting feature of the report is that which treats of coast defense. The general says:

"Attention is especially invited to the experience of the last few months in attempting to provide quickly a coast defense. It is believed to be impracticable, and we will always be forced, in any emergency, to rely upon what has been provided in time of peace. I think it fair to state, though not in the way of complaint, that this has been urged upon congress each year for the past ten years. The situation is very simple. A plan has been adopted for providing a complete coast defense. With the present facilities of the department this work can be carried on economically and in the most efficient manner in such a way as to complete the present plan in about seven years. Estimates ought to be submitted each year for so much of the work as the facilities for its production will permit. It rests with congress to determine how much of the work can be provided for each year consistently with the resources of the country. But the work can not progress faster than the appropriations provide for."

"It is probable that there must be added to the plans and estimates for the coast defense some provision for the defense of added possessions."

Gen. Flagler does not claim for the 45 caliber Springfield rifle an equality with the new 30 caliber magazine rifle of the army, but says that it is a very good arm and possesses many merits. This feature has heretofore been commented upon in discussion of small arms used during the war. The machinery for the maufacture of small arm and ammunition was none the best yet the department turned out 90,000,000 rounds for the war. For years past, the report states, the appropriations for equipments of infantry, cavalry, artillery and horse have been barely sufficient to meet the consumption of the regular army and although there were buildings there was not machinery with which to manufacture these supplies.

Details are given of what was done to rapidly increase the coast defenses when the war began. He calls attention to the fact that congress has never appropriated what was asked for powder and projectiles, and in consequence the supply at the beginning of the war was inadequate, and he gives some instances of the work done by the department to make good the deficiency.

Jerry Simpson Done With Politics.

TOPEKA, Kas., Nov. 14.—Congressman Jerry Simpson, who was defeated in the Seventh district for re-election by Chester I. Long, concludes a statement in explanation of his defeat as follows: "As for myself I shall seek office no more. I shall, at the expiration of my term in congress, retire to my cattle ranch at Medicine Lodge and participate in politics only to help out the populist party whenever my services are in demand."

HE GOT EVEN

His Customer Beat Him at the Start, But He Got Back at Him in Good Shape.

There is an old retired merchant in Detroit who delights in recalling his experiences when an active man running a general store in one of the northern cities of the lower peninsula.

"I used to reap a harvest when the men were coming out of the woods," he relates. They were not up in styles, and about any old thing would suit them provided the color was right and the fit even passable. But there were tricksters among them and I had to have my wits about me in order to keep even with them.

"How much is this hat?' asked a strapping six-footer who arrived from camp one day with a pocket full of money.

"'Two fifty,' I replied.

"Then he informed me that he always had the crowns of his hats punched full of holes in order to keep his head cool, and his hair from coming out. I soon had this attended to, and then he asked what the hat was worth. "'Two fifty,' I responded, in surprise, but he laughed at me for asking such a price for damaged goods. He had me and got his hat for a dollar while the jolly crowd with him had a laugh at my expense. He wanted to look at some 'fiddles,' and after prieing one at $10 concluded to take it.

"'Where's the bow?' he asked, as I was doing up the package.

"'You only bought the fiddle,' I laughed. The others saw the point and laughed, too. The giant tried to bluff me, but I kept good humored and got even on the hat by charging him $1.50 for the bow. I not only got even, but the others were so pleased with my 'Yankee trick' that they spent plenty of money with me."—Detroit Free Press.

Activity of Vesuvius.

Much anxiety has been caused in Naples by the renewed activity of Mount Vesuvius. An overwhelming danger of this description produces universal terror. As a matter of fact there is little likelihood that Mt. Vesuvius will do any serious damage. On the other hand thousands die daily from stomach and digestive disorders, who might have survived had they resorted to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It is the greatest of known tonics for stomach and digestive organs. It cures kidney, liver and blood disorders.

Mary Was a Mineralogist.

A teacher in one of the local schools was instructing a class of small children in mineralogy the other day, endeavoring to make clear to their young minds what a mineral really is. Standing before them, she began in her clear voice: "A mineral is an inorganic, homogeneous substance of definite, or approximately definite, chemical composition found in nature. Do you understand me? Come now, you have all seen minerals. And your mothers and fathers have told you the names of them, haven't they? Of course, they have. Now, can any one of you tell me the names of three minerals?" There was no response, and she continued: "Have not some of you been out and seen minerals on exhibition?" One little girl raised her hand. "I thought so. Mary will name three minerals." Mary arose, and, putting her hands behind her, lisped: "Apollinaris, Vichy and seltzer."—Chicago Chronicle.

THE HOUSE

Republicans Claim It by 13 Majority.

Two Districts are in Doubt and Will Require an Official Vote to Decide.

The Senate Will Have a Republican Majority of 14.

Gov. Roosevelt Elected Governor of New York by a Good Majority.

Massachusetts Re-Elects Gov. Wolcott by a Majority of 83,348—Stone Elected Governor in Pennsylvania by More Than 125,000—Democratic Make Gains in Many States.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—At a late hour Friday night Chairman Babcock, of the republican congressional committee, said that the latest advices received by the committee made no change in the political complexion of the next house of representatives. The republicans, he said, would have 185 members certainly, giving them a clear majority of 14. These figures were the same as those he gave out early in the day.

Secretary Kerr, of the democratic congressional committee, has gone to Pennsylvania. No additional statement from him, therefore, could be obtained.

In a statement Wednesday evening Chairman Babcock said: "There can be no longer any reasonable argument over the political complexion of the next house of representatives. It will be republican beyond the shadow of a doubt. Our advices show the certain election of 185 republicans, six more than enough to give us control. These are straight republicans and our majority will be over the combined opposition. Our information induces us to place nine districts in doubt.

At the headquarters of the democratic congressional committee confidence is expressed that the democrats will control the next house of representatives. Secretary Kerr will not concede many of the claims made by Chairman Babcock, of the republican committee, and says that in a large number of districts it will require the official count to determine definitely the result.

"It seems certain," said Secretary Kerr, "that we have elected 183 members of the next house, the republicans 163, and that 11 districts are in doubt. In New York we will have 21 members; in Pennsylvania nine and perhaps ten; in Kansas four at least, and perhaps five; in Nebraska four; in North Carolina nine, and in California two or three. Information is slow coming in, because the count in so many of the districts is very close. Our figures are based upon definite returns and I am satisfied that they are entirely accurate."

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Revised returns as they come in early Wednesday made practically no change in those of Tuesday night, which showed the election of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, rep., for governor, by a plurality of from 18,000 to 20,000 over Augustus Van Wyck, dem. As compared with the election of 1896, when Black defeated Porter, this shows a republican loss of from 100,000 to 160,000.

Roosevelt came to the Harlem river with 150,000 plurality, and Van Wyck had but 85,000 in Greater New York, with which to meet him. An analysis of the vote outside of the city shows that Roosevelt lost 61,500 as compared with Black. In the city his vote was 61,000 smaller than Black's. In the country districts Van Wyck ran about 20,000 and in the city about 54,000 ahead of Porter.

The state's congressional delegation will probably stand 17 republicans to 9 democrats, a democratic gain of 12. In old New York City (Manhattan borrough) no republican has been returned, and notable feature of the election was the defeat by Wm. Astor Chanler of Hitt. Quigg for congress in the Fourteenth district, where the former overcame a republican plurality of 11,700 two years ago, and won by about 3,000. The state legislature will be republican on joint ballot by 22 votes, insuring the election of a republican to succeed Senator Edward Murphy, jr., on the expiration of his term on March 3, 1899. The state senate will stand 27 republicans to 23 democrats, a democratic gain of 9. The republicans will have 80 members of the general assembly and the democrats 61. This is a republican gain of 11.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Practically complete returns on the vote for governor in the entire state give Roosevelt, rep., a plurality of 19,833.

OHIO.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 10.—Complete returns show Weaver, rep., is elected to congress in the Seventh district by 87, and Brenner, dem., in the Third district by 71.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 10.—Unofficial returns from all but one county Wednesday night make the plurality of Kluney, rep., for secretary of state, 89,000.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12.—As the official returns began coming in pretty rapidly Friday, a scare was started at the way Food Commissioner Blackburn was running behind his ticket. Reports received Saturday showed he was 5,461 behind Spear. Somebody computed that at that rate Blackburn would be found to have ran from 20,000 to 30,000 behind. Then, if this loss was reproduced by votes for Baker, the democratic candidate, and if the republican plurality was only 60,000, it was very possible to conceive that Blackburn might be defeated and Baker elected.

But closer examination shows that Baker is not running along even with his ticket in a number of counties, and while Blackburn is running behind men on his own ticket in every republican county reported, he has a plurality over Baker, while Baker's plurality over Blackburn in democratic counties is only normal. In other words people who scratched Blackburn voted in considerable numbers for Ellis, the orange candidate, while many other Blackburn scratchers didn't vote for any candidate. There is no reason to anticipate Blackburn's defeat.

INDIANA.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 10.—Advices received up to late hour Wednesday night indicate the following congressional results in Indiana:

First district, T. A. Hemenway, rep.; Second, Robert W. Miers, dem.; Third, W. T. Senor, dem.; Fourth, J. M. Griffith, dem.; Fifth, in doubt; Sixth, James A. Watson, rep.; Seventh, Jesse Overstreet, rep.; Eighth, Geo. W. Cromer, rep.; Ninth, C. B. Landis, rep.; Tenth, E. D. Crumpacker, rep.; Eleventh, Geo. W. Steele, rep.; Twelfth, Dr. C. B. Stevens, rep.; Thirteenth, A. L. Brick, rep.

The Fifth district is claimed by both Hamill, dem., and Faris, rep., for congress. It will require a recount to determine the contest. The vote is almost a tie.

The republicans have carried Indiana by a majority between 15,000 and 20,000. Chairman Martin, of the democratic state committee, figuring Wednesday night upon official and estimated returns from all but three of the 92 counties, conceded a republican plurality of 14,500. He states upon the returns at hand that the democrats have made a net gain over the presidential vote of 1896 of 1,962. Later and authentic returns, however, may change the present indicated result from 15,000 to 5,000. The republicans claim the state by 23,000.

The legislature will be republican, and the estimates, based upon the latest returns, show that in the senate the republicans will have 28 and the democrats 22; in the lower house the republicans will have 56 and the democrats 44. This will give the republicans a majority of 18 on joint ballot, and means the election of a republican to the United States senate to succeed Mr. Turpie. The official returns from all over the state may change these figures some, but it is a result that both parties have practically agreed is true.

KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 10.—The latest returns from the Ninth congressional district indicate that Mordecai Williams, dem., of Catlettsburg, has defeated the incumbent, Samuel Pugh, rep., of Vanceburg, by a majority of about 180. However, Mr. Pugh has not yet conceded his defeat and claims he has a majority of 41 but this seems to be offset by belated returns from Harrison county, which gives Williams a substantial majority.

This gives the democrats 10 of the 11 congressmen from Kentucky, a gain of 3 of three congressmen for the democrats in the state. The Fifth, Eighth and Ninth are the districts that were classified into the democratic camp.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 11.—The official count re-elects Congressman S. J. Pugh by a majority of 12 votes over Mordecai Williams. The official majorities in the 13 counties are as follows:

It is said that Williams will make a contest. But the official count means that Mr. Pugh will go back to congress.

In the Louisville district the official count was begun Friday and will be finished Saturday. Turner (dem.) gained more than Evans as far as the count went. His election is certain. The Kentucky delegation will stand 9 democrats and 2 republicans.

WEST VIRGINIA.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 10.—The republicans have elected two congressmen in West Virginia sure, Dovener in the First (Wheeling) by 1,800 majority, and Freer in the Fourth by 1,100 majority. Both parties claim the Second and Third. Mr. Dayton, rep., claims his election in the Second by 897, and Edwards, rep., claims 700 in the Third.

Chairman Dawson, of the republican state committee, Wednesday night claimed the election of seven republicans and six democrats to the state senate and 40 republicans and 24 democrats to the house of delegates. With the hold-over senators this will give the republicans a majority on joint ballot of 13, and insure the election of a republican United States senator as successor to Faulkner, democrat.

Chairman Dilley, of the democratic committee claims the legislature on joint ballot.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—The delegation from Pennsylvania to the next congress will comprise 21 republicans and 9 democrats, a democratic gain of 8. The present delegation is composed of 27 republicans and 3 democrats. The districts gained by the democrats are the Eighth, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Seventeenth, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—The complete vote of the state, with four counties missing, gives Stone, rep., 405,782; Jenks, dem., 333,783; Swallow, pro., and honest government, 124,67, a plurality for Stone of 122,089, which will be increased to above 125,000 by the complete returns. The total vote in the state will approximate 863,000.

WISCONSIN.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 10.—Election returns though far from being complete indicate that Gov. E. Ward Schofield, rep., is elected after by at least 20,000 plurality. Republican Chairman Treat still sticks to his claim of 40,000, the Sentinel says at least 30,000. While National Democratic Committeeman Wall says Schofield might have from 5,000 to 10,000 plurality, though he would not concede this, having heard from but ten per cent. of the precincts in the state. Milwaukee county complete, with the exception of the village of Cudahy, gives Schofield 32d plurality. This county also elected a republican ticket, with the exception of a sheriff, which went to the democrats.

Republicans elect congressmen in every district except the Second, which is still in doubt. The legislature is overwhelmingly republican, the senate consisting of 21 republicans and 2 democrats and the assembly 77 republicans and 21 democrats.

TENNESSEE

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 10.—The majority of McMillan, dem., for governor over Fowler, rep., is estimated at from 10,000 to 20,000. The democrats have a majority of the legislature. The republicans have carried the First and Second congressional districts, the other eight giving democratic majorities.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 10.—Congress, First district, Walter P. Brownlow, rep., elected; majority less than a 1,000, loss 3,500. Second district, Henry F. Gibson elected; majority about 4,000, loss 14,000.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 10.—Complete and partial returns from 81 out of 96 counties received Wednesday night give McMillin, dem., an estimated majority of 38,000 for governor. The figures will, however, be reduced by full returns, and it seems that his majority will be between 25,000 and 30,00 . The decrease in the republican vote is so phenomenal that an accurate estimate of the total vote in the state is impossible.

KANSAS.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 10.—The latest returns indicate that the plurality of Stanley, rep., for governor, will probably reach 13,000. Taylor Riddle, the populist state chairman, practically concedes the defeat of Vincent for congress in the Fifth and Jerry Simpson in the Seventh. The republican leaders confidently claim that Chester I. Long has defeated Simpson in the Seventh, and that W. A. Calderhead has defeated Congressman Vincent in the Fifth. If these claims prove correct, Edwin Ridgely of the Third district, will be the only populist congressman from Kansas.

The republicans elect two state senators which gives 11 members in that body. They also elect 97 representatives out of 125. This gives them a majority of 82 on joint ballot in the legislature and insures the election of a republican state printer.

MICHIGAN.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 10.—According to more complete reports Gov. Pingree's plurality will reach about 70,000. This will be a proportionate increase over his plurality of 33,493 of two years ago, the vote cast having been probably about four-fifth smaller this year. The republicans have elected a solid representation of 12 congressmen by majorities of 1,100 for Corliss in the first district to 1,500 for Sheldon in the Twelfth Upper Peninsula district. The democrats will have a dozen senators and representatives in the legislature about equally divided between the two houses. Senator Burrows' re-election now seems absolutely assured, notwithstanding Gov. Pingree strongly favors the candidacy of Albert Pack. Gov. Pingree's railroad taxation measures are regarded as certain of enactment.

NEBRASKA.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 10.—Belated precinct returns Wednesday continue to indicate that Nebraska has turned a political summersault and landed in the republican column. Three hundred and seventeen precincts outside of Lincoln and Omaha gave Hayward, republican, for governor, 39,404, Poynter, fusion, 39,362, a net republican gain of 4,787. If this gain is maintained Hayward will carry the state by over 40,000. Figures on legislative candidates are not such as to make comparison possible but know that they shared equally with the governor. In a few counties which went fusion on the state ticket the republican legislative candidates are elected, which makes the claim that the legislature on joint ballot is republican, a conservative one. The First and Second congressional districts are republican, the Third and Sixth fusion, and the Fourth and Fifth in doubt.

MISSOURI.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—Returns from all over Missouri came in very slowly Wednesday, and though far from complete, everything received points to the election of the entire democratic state ticket by at least 30,000 majority and the election by a majority of members of the legislature, ensuring the re-election of United States Senator Cockrell. Three republican congressmen in the St. Louis have been re-elected and it is probable that all the 13 congress-local districts outside the city will be represented by democrats, though final returns may change this somewhat.

In St. Louis the republicans elected their city ticket by majorities ranging from 4,000 to 7,000.

COLORADO.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 10.—The entire fusion state ticket, headed by Governor Thomas, dem., for governor, is elected by a majority approximating about 50,000. This is by far the largest majority ever given a candidate for governor in Colorado, but is less than half of Bryan's majority for president. Arapahoe county including Denver, gave about 10,000 fusion majority, and El Paso county, including Colorado Springs, 4,000. The republicans won in only one county in the eastern part of the state. Of 17 holdover state senators it appears the republicans have secured two and in three districts the result is doubtful. The fusionists have an overwhelming majority in the legislature.

FLORIDA.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 9.—The vote Tuesday, judging from returns now in, is from 10 to 20 per cent lighter for both parties than in 1896. The whole democratic ticket is elected. The light vote is due to the feeble resistance offered.

The constitutional amendment requiring that bonds of state officers be in sound surety and guarantee companies were carried overwhelmingly. The republicans and populists will not offer a fight over the election of members of the legislature, if that many. The legislature elected Tuesday will choose a successor to Senator Samuel Pasco.

CALIFORNIA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—Republican gains are reported from every legislative district, sufficient in many cases to change entirely the political complexion of the district. There is no doubt, although the count is yet incomplete, that the republicans will have a large majority in the legislature and that a republican senator will be elected to succeed Stephen M. White.

California has elected a republican governor and probably the entire state ticket by pluralities estimated at from 5,000 to 20,000. Complete returns will not be in for 24 hours at least, but the election of Gage, republican, over James G. McClure, democrat, is conceded.

MINNESOTA.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 10.—Unofficial and incomplete but apparently reliable returns indicate that John Lind, fusion candidate, has been elected governor of Minnesota by a plurality of 10,000.

Five out of seven congressmen are surely republican. Sixth and Seventh districts close and claimed by both sides.

James Gray, fusionist, is elected mayor of Minneapolis by perhaps 5,000, the largest plurality ever given in this city to a candidate not a republican.

DELAWARE.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 10.—Detailed returns from Kent and Sussex counties were not received until Wednesday morning. They are sufficient to show that the next legislature of this state is almost surely republican in each branch, and certainly republican on joint ballot. According to complete returns from the state, with the exception of a few districts, the next legislature will stand, Republicans, 29; democrats, 23. The republicans will thus elect a successor to United States Senator Gray, dem.

NORTH DAKOTA.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 10.—Returns from the state Wednesday swelled the republican majority. Spaulding, rep., for congress, will probably have a majority of 5,000 and the remainder of the ticket 3,000 less. Twenty-one out of 71 state senators are sure republicans, while in the house 54 republicans out of 62 have been elected with four more doubtful. This gives the republicans 46 on joint ballot, making a republican successor to Senator Roach certain.

NORTH CAROLINA.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 10.—Later returns indicate that the democrats have elected all nine of their congressmen, all 12 solicitors, 44 out of 50 state senator-, 85 out of 120 representatives and the state official ticket by 20,000.

In the Eighth district it looks like Linney, rep., is defeated by Lovell, dem., and in the Second it seems that Fountain, ind. pop., has defeated White, the Negro congressman.—Later returns may change this result.

IDAHO.

BOISE, Ida., Nov. 10.—For the first time in the history of this state women have voted for a congressman and state officers. They took the liveliest interest in the proceedings. In view of the isolation of many places accurate returns not yet available. It is therefore difficult to say what effect the vote of the women has had on the general result. It is known, however, that the women have not voted along partisan lines.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Reports up to 10 o'clock Wednesday night from 886 of the 957 congressional districts show that the republicans have elected 179, the democrats 130 and the populists and fusionists 4. There are still 21 doubtful districts, several of which official count will be necessary to determine the result. Of these 21 districts called doubtful ten now have republican, nine democrat and 2 fusion representatives.

IOWA.

SIOUX FALLS, Ia., Nov. 10.—Almost complete returns from the state give Phillips, rep., for governor, a majority of 1,200. Later returns will not materially alter this majority.

Gamble, rep., is elected to congress by 4,000 and Burke, rep., by 3,500. The entire state republican ticket is elected. The legislature will have a republican majority.

NEVADA

CARSON, Nev., Nov. 10.—The election in this state, according to the latest returns, has resulted in the election of McMillan, rep., for governor, over Boyle, dem., by a small majority. Frank G. Newlands, silver, is re-elected to congress. The legislature, which will be republican, is believed to be favorable to the re-election of Senator Stewart.

CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 9.—The result of the election in this state Tuesday was a general victory for the republican ticket. Complete returns from 165 towns of the 168 in the state give Lounsbury, rep., 75,057; Morgan, dem., 58,466. The same towns in 1896 gave Cooke, rep., 100,099; Sargent, dem., 51,386.

MARYLAND.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 9.—Full and semi-official returns from the city of Baltimore and partial returns from the balance of the state make it reasonably certain that Maryland has returned four republican and two democratic congressmen, after an extraordinary close but entirely listless election.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—With only two small towns to hear from Bruce, dem., for governor has 107,989; Wolcott, rep., 190,338; Wolcott's plurality 83,343.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—The total vote for governor was: Wolcott, rep., 190,346; Bruce, dem., 106,998; republican majority 83,348.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 10.—Returns from 27 precincts in the Black Hills show a net republican gain of 600—so far the net republican gain in the state is 1,400. The fusionists still claim the state, but it is almost certain the republicans have it on the entire state and congressional ticket.

NEW JERSEY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The New Jersey returns with a few districts missing show a plurality for Voorhees, republican, of 5,002.

The New Jersey legislature stands exactly as it stood last year. On joint ballot the republicans will have 51 votes against a total democratic vote of 30.

OKLAHOMA.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Nov. 10.—Dennis T. Flynn, rep., is elected delegate to congress by probably 6,000 plurality. Both branches of the territorial legislature are safely republican, and the republicans claim to have elected their local tickets in a majority of the counties.

UTAH.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Nov. 10.—Enough returns are at hand to indicate beyond doubt that Hoskin, dem., for supreme court judge, has been elected over Zane, rep. According to the latest returns the legislature will stand 41 democrats, 18 republicans and 4 fusionists.

WYOMING.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 10.—There appears to be no reason to change the estimates of the republican state chairman, except that the republican majority in this state will increase. This is indicated by surprising returns from new precincts.

MONTANA.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 10.—Campbell, dem., is elected to congress by a plurality exceeding 4,000. The legislature is democratic by a decided majority. Complete returns will not alter materially the situation as stated.

ALABAMA.

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 9.—Returns up to this time indicate the election of every democratic congressman in the state. Vote exceedingly light in all districts except the Fourth and Seventh.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Returns from New Hampshire show the election of these congressmen: First district, Cyrus A. Sullowa, rep.; Second, Frank G. Clarke, rep.

WASHINGTON.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 9.—Three precincts in Pierce county, two of them fusion strongholds, show an average gain of 30 per cent. for the republican ticket.

TEXAS.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 9.—Sayers, dem., for governor, carries the city by about 2,100 plurality. Estimated he will carry state by 250,000.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 8.—The democratic state ticket was elected without opposition. A very light vote was cast.

VIRGINIA.

LOUISIANA.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 9.—Reports received assure the election of six democratic congressmen from Louisiana.

Missing Schooner Brought In.

PORT HURON, Mich., Nov. 12.—The missing schooner Holland, of the Curtis tow, was brought in Friday by the tug Thompson. The mate, James W. Green, of Buffalo, N. Y., was washed overboard and drowned while the Holland was running before the gale. The Reid is at anchor about six miles from the Fort Gratiot light. This accounts for all of the consorts of the Curtis, the Fassett being ashore near Sand beach.

An Orden Public Demonstration.

HAVANA, Nov. 12.—As an extra precaution, in order to prevent a possible demonstration by the mounted division of the orden publico, Gen. Arolas stationed two field pieces in front of their barracks Friday morning. Friday afternoon the entire force accepted a peaceful solution of the difficulty and laid down their arms. The orden publico will be disarmed and dissolved immediately.

Bank Robbed of a Large Amount.

MACON, Mo., Nov. 12.—The Kirksville savings bank has been entered by burglars and robbed of $14,000 in government bonds, belonging to Samuel Reed, president, and something in the neighborhood of $18,000 in gold and greenbacks. Two or three thousand dollars in silver was left, evidently being too heavy, and $2,400 in the vault was overlooked by the robbers.

Poisoned Water.

CARBONDALE, Col., Nov. 12.—Six section men employed on the Rio Grande railway have been poisoned by drinking water from the Roaring Fork river and two are in a critical condition. A child, which died in convulsions, is believed also to have been poisoned. An analysis of the water showed that it contained much arsenic and other poisonous minerals.

Philippine Insurgents Active.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Advices have been received at the office in this city of the Philippine commercial Co., saying that the insurgents have taken the island of Negros, one of the Philippine group, separated by narrow channels from Panay and Zebu, and that they are besieging Iloilo, capital of the island of Panay and the second largest port in the Philippines.

The Wyoming Legislature.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 12.—The incoming legislature, which will elect a United States senator, appears from latest returns to be constituted as follows: Senate, 13 republicans, 6 democrats, 1 doubtful, probably republican. House, 37 republicans, 1 democrat.

WAR ON BLACKS.

Armed Whites Destroy a Colored Newspaper Plant at Wilmington, N. C.

A Number of Killed on Both Sides—Several Wounded—A Complete Change of Municipal Government Restores Order—Distubers Held in Restraint.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Nov. 11.—A riot took place here Thursday morning. Eight Negroes and one white man are reported killed. A score or more are wounded. South Carolina has been telegraphed to for help.

Negroes are attempting to burn the city and a reign of terror prevails. The mayor and city administration have escaped. "Red shirts" are disarming the Negroes everywhere as they meet them.

The mayor and other city officials who were notified to surrender the city have either left or can not be found. The committee of Negroes, who were notified to remove the printing press of the Recor (Manley's Negro paper), failed to reply to [illegible] within the prescribed time.

Fifteen hundred armed white men, with ex-Congressman Waddell leading them, marched to the printing office Thursday morning, broke it open, smashed the press with sledge hammers and burned the building to the ground.

While the building was in flames 1,000 rifles were turned on it, and the hail of bullets riddled and tore off the weather boarding and roof. Every citizen was sober and deliberate and wore no disguise.

A few Negroes attempted resistance, but, after one was shot, the remainder were dispersed. Fire engines were hurried to the scene in response to a fire alarm bell, but the firemen were ordered not to play a stream on the fire, but to prevent any spread of the flames.

White citizens interviewed here by your correspondent since the burning of the Record building say that the fire in the building broke out after the crowd had assembled, and was not started by any one.

Several ministers of the city stood on guard Thursday with Winchesters. There were few able bodied white men in Wilmington who failed to do guard duty Wednesday night. Excitement broke out afresh at 9 p. m., when Negroes fired into a street car filled with people.

Almost before the noise of the volley died out armed whites began to gather. In a few minutes 300 men with Winchesters had arrived, but the blacks had fled. A red shirt parade took place shortly after.

News was received Wednesday night that a Negro knocked down John L. Hare, a white man, at Wilson, N. C., and then fled, firing a revolver as he ran. He was joined by other Negroes, all armed.

In a few minutes 200 armed whites charged down the street, scattering the Negroes.

Another Negro was killed Thursday night at Tenth and Mulberry streets. He was hailed by a guard but refused to halt, and continuing to advance, was shot by the guard.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Nov. 12.—This disturbed and long perturbed community seems at last to be entering upon a new era of peace and order. The complete change in the municipal government, effected Thursday night with some suddenness but great unanimity, has placed men in control of local affairs representing the best elements of the city. The firm hand of the law is being laid upon the town and is holding in restraint all classes which might threaten disorder.

The first act of the new government was to swear in 250 special policemen. Cool headed men were selected for these positions and were instructed to prevent any attempts to terrorize the Negroes, as well as to frustrate acts of lawlessness by the latter.

Good government was put to a test immediately and the new officials were called upon almost before they had taken their seats to make good their promises to preserve order. A big lynching party was planned for the night and it required all that the mayor and his associates could do to prevent it.

There were six Negroes in jail who had been arrested during the excitement of the day and whom some of the town people thought should be summarily dispatched. One was a prominent leader, Thomas Miller, who was charged with declaring that he would wash his hands in a white man's blood before night. Another was A. R. Bryant, charged with being a dangerous character; the others were less prominent, but who had been under the ban of the whites for conduct calculated to incite trouble.

A Reported Killing.

LONDON DEPOT, Ky., Nov. 12.—It is reported from Leslie county that Adrian Duff, a well known character, was killed at Bad Creek precinct by Constable Hence Farler. Duff was troublesome through moonshine whisky.

Caught at Youngstown.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov. 12.—W. A. Jones, alias Marcellus Rae, wanted in Scranton, Pa., on the charge of grand larceny, was arrested here Friday morning. He will be taken back to Scranton at once.

LIEUT. COL. WILLIAMS DEAD.

The Deputy Quartermaster General, U. S. A., Succumbs to Yellow Fever at Havana, Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Adjt. Gen. Corbin received a message Friday morning from Gen. Wade, chairman of the Cuban evacuation commission at Havana, announcing the death from yellow fever of Lieut. Col. Charles W. Williams (not W. A. Williams), deputy quartermaster general.

Lieut. Col. Williams was the youngest officer in his grade, being only about 45 years of age, and was regarded as certain of becoming quartermaster general in the course of a few years. He was a native of Kentucky and was appointed to the military academy from that state.

In Havana he held the rank of colonel. Mrs. Williams and family are now in Washington. She is a daughter of Gen. John B. Gordon, of Georgia.

HAVANA, Nov. 12.—The body of Col. Williams will be embalmed and will be carried directly on board the Ward line steamer Segurancia, which was expected here Friday afternoon from Vera Cruz, for shipment north. The remains of Mr. Stewart were buried here Friday afternoon. The deaths have caused a profound sensation. It is a strange coincidence that the only cases of yellow fever among foreigners here lately have been those of the members of the American commissions and staffs.

THE CRUISER MARIA TERESA.

British Authorities Claim Her as a Derelict, But Their Claim Will Be Contested by the Government.

NASSAU, N. P., Nov. 12.—The British admiralty authorities here are going to take possession of the Marie Teresa as a derelict. The American consul has protested against this course, claiming everything less the salvage.

The steamer Antillia is leaving here for Cat island with customs officers and police on board.

Opinions differ as to the chance of saving the cruiser. Although she has been aground since Thursday, the Maria Teresa rests in an easy position and the water is moderate.

Wreckers who have arrived here have brought with them stores from the stranded vessel off Cat island, which established beyond a doubt that she is the Infanta Maria Teresa.

ONLY A MATTER OF COURTESY

The Queen Regent Will Invite the Emperor and Empress of Germany to Visit Madrid.

MADRID, Nov. 12.—It is understood that as a matter of courtesy the queen regent will send an autograph letter inviting the emperor and empress of Germany to visit Madrid. In the unlikely event of acceptance, their German imperial majesties would naturally be shown special attentions. The German ambassador will confer on the subject Saturday with Duke Almodovar de Rios and nothing definite will be known regarding the matter until after the interview.

Two Persons Perish and Four Others Injured in the Mill District, New Bedford, Mass.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 13.—Two persons perished in a tenement house fire in the mill district early Saturday morning and four others were badly burned, two of whom will die. The house was owned by Adelaide Gondreau, whose family lived on the second floor and the others on the third floor. All the parties were asleep when the fire broke out in a barn adjoining and rapidly communicated to the house. The barn was destroyed and the house gutted. It is remarkable that anyone escaped.

She was afflicted with a weak heart.

W. P. Nevins went to Jessamine county and secured work on the farm of John Hargate last July, and a month later he married Hargate's niece. One night last week his wife opened a letter addressed to him and found it to be written by another alleged wife living at Lima, O., and having a son in school. He was arrested and is now in jail.

The first instance in the history of Kentucky remembered by the oldest citizens when a circuit court was opened with prayer, song service and sermon by a local minister was the opening of Circuit Court at London. Rev. G. W. Berryman, by request of Judge W. L. Brown, asked the large crowd in the court room to join in the hymn and later to kneel after which the minister preached a sermon to the court, lawyers and juries.

Mr. W. T. Routt, undertaker at Salvisa, has an interesting relic in the way of a tea kettle. It is made of copper and will hold about two gallons. A hundred or more years ago this kettle was carried on horseback by Mr. Routt's grandfather, Griffin, from the settlement in Virginia. The kettle is in a perfect state of preservation and has been in constant use as far back as Mr. Routt can remember.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Not long ago, a swarm of yellow jackets took possession of an empty beegum on Sam Miller's farm near Hawesville, and proceeded to make themselves at home All efforts to dislodge them failed at the time and the task was abanoned. Finally Mr. Miller grew desperate and one day last week he made a raid upon the yellow jackets and, after a determined effort, succeeded in exterminating them. After the yellow jackets had all been killed, Mr. Miller examined the hive and found that it contained five gallons of honey. The honey was as white as snow, and it is said that it has a delicious flavor.

[News]

Last Saturday a cyclone struck the barn on the Crawford farm between New Liberty and Dallas and tore it all to pieces. Albert Hunt who was passing along the road saw the storm approaching and took refuge in the barn. He had hardly got in before the wind struck it, and it fell with a crash. He was seriously bruised by the falling timbers and it is almost miraculous that he escaped with his life.

A little four year old child of Lan Layton's near Hesler, was bitten by a rabid dog last Thursday afternoon. The parents took it to the mad stone owned by W. D. Beck, and it stuck several times. The dog bit several other dogs and some stock and was finally killed.

The protracted meeting at the Harrisburg Baptist church under the preaching of Rev. Hunt closed last Sunday with over twenty additions, seventeen of whom were by conversion. The baptizing took place Sunday, an immense crowd being present.

Damage suit of Lou Malcomb vs Allie Frazier, judgment for plaintiff for $1500. This suit arose from the shooting of Malcomb by Frazier in 1897, at New Liberty.

The case of S. M. Sebree vs Mollie Sebree for divorce was dismissed by the court Saturday. The plaintiff paying the costs of the suit and it is reported $500 alimony, without a decree of divorce.

It is rumored that Hon. Ras. Bainbridge is soon to wed a pretty Louisville widow.

The grand jury returned 31 indictments.

[Courier.]

The examining trial of Henry Jones was held on last Saturday before the county Judge. After hearing all of the evidence the court fixed the defendant's bond at $2,500 which he gave with his father J. H. Jones as surety for his appearance to answer to any indictment that the next grand jury may find in the premises.

Mr. Robt. Penick, of Texas, after a residence in that state for twenty years has returned to his native state to make it his future home. Bob says the hills of Ky., have grown some since he left.

Tobacco buyers of this county will soon be shaking hands with the farmers and inspecting their crops. Good prices will likely be offered this year, and this prospect is encouraging to the tillers of the soil.

FROM GALLATIN OUNTY

Last Friday Richard Weldon, proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, was robbed of $11 which was taken from his bar till during his absence. Omer Dickerson, a young colored man, was suspected as the thief. Sheriff Newt. Winn arrested him, and when searched the money was found on his person. He was taken to jail to await trial. Saturday evening as jailer Speaks went into the jail, Dickerson who was in the corridor, knocked him down and escaped, and has not yet been apprehended.

The First Kentucky Regiment now stationed at Ponce, Porto Rico, will sail for the United States Nov. 24th. In this regiment are several Gallatin county boys, viz. Robert Wood, Arthur Vanice, Jas. Connley, of Napoleon, and Bert Allphin, son of Albert A. Allphin, of South Fork. The boys will be glad to get home and their relatives and friends will feel thankful over their safe return.

There is not a great percentage of tobacco house burned, but much of the corn has been injured by the warm wet weather.

A private in an Ohio regiment now in Porto Rico, writes. "If you want to know what a grand, glorious and sugar-coated thing a woman is, join the army, as I did. See nothing but men from morning till night. Join the army and loaf with men, eat with men, talk with men, help men, shoot men, succor men, men, men, and nothing but men. Live in a perpetual atmosphere of suppressed profanity, boot smell and tobacco smoke, and at the end of three weeks you would be passionately enamored with the mummy of an Egyptian servant girl and give her an electric kiss that would burn 3,000 years of dried hide into flushed and velvety animation.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Nov. 18th, 1898.

Each week since our commissioners demanded the Philippine Islands, friends of the administration have informed the public that an ultamatum had been sent to Spain that would end the business, but the business isn't ended, and the answer submitted by the Spanish commissioners this week, is every bit as unsatisfactory as their first. There has been quite enough talk about ultamatums; it is now high time to actually send one. The Peace Commission has been sitting seven weeks and absolutely nothing has been settled. It is time for this government to show whether it or the influence of the Spanish bondholders is the strongest. There isn't the slightest doubt in the world that the delay has been caused by the bond holders, who want to come in somewhere in the game,

There was a pointer as to the probable time that Gen. Fitz Lee's corps will go to Cuba in Mr. McKinley's answer to the delegation of Savannah business men who invited him to come to their city and review Gen. Lee's troops, when he goes to the Peace Jubilee at Atlanta. He told them he would be in Atlanta Dec. 15, and would gladly come to Savannah and review Lee's troops, if they were not sent to Cuba before then. It was evident to his hearers that he thought Lee's corps would be in Cuba before then so evident that they asked him if he could not come to Savannah before going to Atlanta. He told them he could not. But plans as to sending troops to Cuba have been changed so often that they are as likely to be changed again as to be carried out.

Senator Caffrey, of La., says he will oppose the ratification by the Senate of a treaty annexing the Philippine islands but upon one condition would gladly support it—that all the negroes be deported to those islands and never allowed to return to the United States. Mr. Caffrey said: "If the South could be rid of the negro problem, it would prosper beyond the dream of man. With its great natural advantages of climate and of soil, with its coal and iron hidden away in its mountains and with the vast inducements for capital which it would offer, if the negro problem was settled, it would take a great stride forward."

The presence of Boss Platt and Representative Odell, chairman of the New York State Republican Committee, at the same Washington hotel, this week, was hardly accidental. Mr. Odell is a candidate for the Senate, and although Boss Platt has apparently sanctioned Chauncey Depew's senatorial aspirations, this Washington meeting has added to the number of those who believe that Odell is the man Platt wishes to have for his colleague in the Senate, or that they are setting up the pins for dark horse.

Senator Morrill, of Vt., came very near to sizing up the situation in connection with the high jinks—beg her pardon, high joint connection that is trying to agree upon a treaty that will smooth out all the kinks between this country and Canada, when he said: "The trouble with the situation is that Canada has nothing to give. She had her houses all painted new by the agreement of 1854 to 1864. Now they have grown weatherbeaten and dingy; she wants them to have a new coat of paint."

Those Republicans who talk about the recent election having an overwhelming endorsement their party are merely indulging in pipe dreams. There was nothing overwhelming about the election. On the contrary, it was only by the skin of their teeth, as the saying is, that the Republicans escaped defeat. It was such a close shave that a change of 300 votes, distributed among eight Congressional districts would have put the Republicans in a minority in the next House, instead of a majority. It should not be forgotten, either, that the Republican majority in the next House will be forty less than their majority in the present House. To blow about such an "endorsement" as that is simply to exhibit gall.

Senator Faulkner says it is by no means certain that the Republicans will control the West Virginia legislature that will elect his successor. The result will depend upon the official count in a number of districts, and Mr. Faulkner expresses confidence in Democratic control of the legislature.

Although Representative Grosvenor and other friends of the administration have been industriously denying that there was any lack of harmony between Czar Reed and the administration, or that there was any intention on the part of the administration to try to prevent Reed's election as Speaker of the next House, there are other facts, such as the public statements respectively made by Boss Hanna, and by Representative Dingley, who was made Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee by Reed, and who is Reed's man, which offset those denials. The two statements are directly opposed to each other. Hanna says the tarifl has got to be revised and more money provided for; Dingley says no revenue legislation of importance is needed and that there will be none by Congress. By many who make a study of the intricate undercurrents of politics these two opposite statements are regarded as the first guns in a fight between Reed and the administration.

SPAIN has agreed to quit Cuba entirely and for good on the first day of next January.

IT is doubtful if the government will be able to secure as a trophy either of the Spanish warships sunk in the battle at the entrance to Santiago harbor.

THE Indiana Supreme Court has decided that a drunk contracted at a private house does not constitute a public drunk, one for which a man can be fined in that State.

THE action, or rather nonaction, on the part of the Harrison county Democrats on the 8th inst., will not be any advantage to their candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Auditor.

THE city government of Louisville compromised with the banks on the delinquent taxes they owed the city, giving the banks a big per cent. off, and the citizens there are protesting with all their might.

THE Democrats of Harrison county have been kicking themselves ever since the 8th inst. They stayed at home that day and Mr. Williams, their candidate for Congress, will have to follow their example.

JUST after the recent election a defeated Republican candidate wired a Republican lawyer at Louisville to know when he should file his contest and what he thought of his prospects, and the return message is said to have read: "File contest in thirty days, chances slim."

GOV. JOHNSON, of Alabama, will ask the Legislature of the State to reduce the salaries of all State officials, including his. Gov. Johnson is an exception in the way of an official, as an officer generally thinks his salary is low enough but is ready to see the other fellow's reduced.

Pith of the Press.

Teddy Roosevelt will find that the climate at Albany is fully as warm as that at Santiago.—Wichita Beacon.

POLITICAL.

The Stanford Interior Journal says: Notwithstanding there were 800 negroes who voted a week ago to-day, there are only 563 on the Assessor's books and as a consequence not over a third will pay taxes.

The Hopkinsville Kentuckian says: There have been some quiet elections in Christian county, but none to equal that of Tuesday. The apathy was simply without precedent. In 1896 the total vote was 7,800 and when it fell in 1898 to 6,100 it looked like a great loss of interest in politics, but this time the entire vote of the county, with a home candidate for Congress, will be only about half of the vote of 1897.

The talk of contest by Kentucky Republicans and charging their undoing to the iniquitous election bill passed by the late Democratic Legislature, is an aggravation of party suicide. The authors and administrators of the election law carried out its provision for the most part with honest impartiality last Tuesday and the Republicans must blame themselves, not the election law, for their defeats of this year.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribuue.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald.]

"Aunt" Polly Rodgers, who has reached the good old age of 97 years was in Owenton last Monday, the first time in thirty-five years, although she has lived within 5 miles of the town for more than half a century. She had her picture taken for the first time in her life and visited the Herald office to see how newspapers are made. When asked if she had ever been to Louisville or Cincinnati she replied: "Bless your life, no, and I wouldn't ride on a steam car for anything."

Several horses have died during the past week or ten days on Dickey's Fork, in the eastern part of the county, the cause of which is puzzling the people of that community. One man lost all he had, and John Russell Gaines has one that is in a bad condition. The symptoms are blindness for a few days and then blind staggers, which almost invariably result in death.

At the conclusion of the regular three-weeks' term last Saturday Judge Green found that it was necessary to extend the term in order to rid the docket of some cases that he wanted to dispose of, so he ordered that this be done, and court has been held this week.

Owenton is to have a flour mill and probably an electric light plant in the near future.

Hopkins county has one of the finest tobacco crops in years. The yield is extra large and the farmers expect to get high prices.

The Anderson county News says that Dr. A. Caldwell, of that county grew a fine crop of corn this year on land that had already produced a crop of wheat. The corn was planted on June 23d, and was well matured and of excellent quality. It averaged ten barrels to the acre.

At Richmond court-day there were 2,000 cattle on the market and prices ranged from 3 to 5 cents, the latter price being paid for several bunches. About 50 mules were on the market, but sales were slow. Large mules brought from $70 to $100; small mules from $40 to $60; suckling mules from $15 to $25. —Richmond Register.

E. Renaker & Co., have slaughtered and shipped to Eastern markets for the Thanksgiving trade about 5,000 turkeys. The bulk of these were bought in Jessamine, Scott and Bourbon counties at 6 to 6½ cents per pound on foot, while in Clark only a few were purchased, the prices ranging from 8 to 8½ cts per pound.—Winchester Sun.

If you do not rake up the leaves and lay in a supply of dry earth before winter you will make a mistake Dry earth is an absorbent and a disinfectant, as well as permitting of easily cleaning the poultry house. If a large supply of leaves are obtained in which the hens can scratch in winter the result will be less liability to disease and more eggs. Leaves on the floor makes excellent protection from the cold drafts of air that come from below, and thus assist in keeping the poultry house warm and comfortable. —Ex.

It is understood upon good authority that Mr. J. B. Haggin, the well-known millionaire horseman of California, has purchased the 600 acre farm of Mr. Thomas Muir on the Paris pike, says the Lexington Herald. The price paid is about $60,000. The farm is about five and one-half miles from this city, adjoining Elmendorf, a farm of some 600 acres bought by Mr. Haggin from Mr. C. J. Enright, and formerly owned by Mr. Dan Swigert. Mr. Haggin will now have one of the finest stock farms in Fayette, if not in Kentucky.

Cows when expected to be fresh should not be allowed to have any grain for several weeks prior to calving. It is often the case where a farmer has an extra butter producing cow that he overfeeds her at this critical time, or gives her such quantity of grain in hopes of making her "do a little better next time," that she is liable to have milk fever or any one of many diseases that cause a speedy death. It is better to be on the safe side and not feed any grain until after she has been fresh at least three days, when a small ration can safely be given. There is no question but that a cow will make just as much butter in the long run when not fed grain until three or four days after dropping her calf, as she will when stuffed before the laetation period begins, even if she will not, the risk is much less and I, for one prefer to be on the safe side although it may seem a little slow sometimes.—Ex.

The Danville Advocate says: "John Embry, one of the most extensive cattle buyers in the State, was in Danville Wendesday in quest of exporters. He said that he bought about 400 fat steers Tuesday in Montgomery and Clark, at from $4 40 to $4 65, and also paid $4 75 for an extra good bunch of 40 which he bought from Bill Simpson, of Jessamine. Mr. Embry said that the bulk of the best cattle in Kentucky have been moved. Bourbon county this year fed about 10,000, Clark 5,000, Montgomery 5,000, while Boyle and Madison followed with between 3,000 and 3,500 each. One of the largest individual feeders in the State is James E. Clay, of Bourbon, who every year puts on the market about eleven hundred. Banker C. Alexander, of Paris, usually gets the top price on account of the fine shape in which he gets his stuff ready, but this year the Centrys of Boyle, were at the top of the heap, getting 5 cents a pound for 207 head while Alexander, according to report, got $4 90 for his 600. Farris & Whitley and Jerry C. Caldwell, of Boyle, are among the largest and best feeders in the State."

The revival being conducted at the Christian church in Petersburg, by Rev. Bosswell, came to a close last Thursday night with a total of 51 additions to the church. The interest in the services kept up to the close, there being two joiners at the last meeting. There would, doubtless, have been more additions had the meeting continued, but owing to pressing engagements the minister was compelled to leave. This was the biggest religious out pouring for many years in this part of the county, and will doubtless, do much good. It is generally admitted by those who heard Rev. Boswell's sermons that they were the most eloquent and convincing ever delivered in Petersburg. His appeals to sinners to come forward and join the church were certainly the most touching and irresistible your correspondent ever listened to. Among those who united with the church was ex-county clerk A. B. Parker, now in his 61st year.

As the disposition of the Philippine Islands is giving the Administration much concern, principally on account of their great distance from this country, we suggest that Hobson be employed to dig them up and float them over to the Pacific coast and anchor them there, though we admit it would be a big undertaking, much bigger than Lansing (lancing) Michigan or Wheeling, West Virginia.

SOME years ago Boone, Ia., was suffering from an epidemic of typhoid fever. Col. George Waring, who died of yellow fever in New York recently, came west and projected a sanitary system for that town, which is regarded as equal to that of any city of the same size in America. Just when he was commissioned to go to Havana he had about completed arrangements to practically duplicate the Boone system in several other Iowa cities.

A GERMAN dentist, Dr. Herz, proposes to put microbes in our mouths to steal away our pains. His discovery consists in an inoculant prepared from microbes he cultivates for the purpose. When applied in the case of a decayed tooth it stops the pain, but does not destroy the nerve; further, it again fixes the tooth and makes it possible to put in a lasting stopping. He has already treated a number of cases with it, and they have proved most successful.

IF a child in Switzerland does not attend school on a particular day the parents get a notice from the public authority that he is fined so many francs; the second day the fine is increased and by the third day the amount has become a serious one. In case of sickness the pupil is excused, but if there is any suspicion of shamming a doctor is sent. If the suspicion proves to be well founded the parent is required to pay the cost of the doctor's visit.

A SUBSTITUTE for tobacco has been discovered by an eastern chemist. The appearance, odor, taste and effect on the system are all reproduced, it is claimed, and the sham can only be told by a microscopical examination. The one essential difference between the leaf tobacco and the substitute is the absence of nicotine in the latter. The cost of producing the substitute is said to be small, and a promise of the best perfectos of to-day at a price within the reach of all is made.

A COMPANY has been incorporated in Pittsburgh to abolish the razor. Instead of shaving a man, the barber will daub over his face a lather that will remove the bristles. The company has a capital of $200,000, with which to start business. As soon as it gets its charter it will open a "parlor," where practical demonstrations will be given. Specimen men will sit in a show window on a crowded street and have their beards publicly and painlessly removed by a gentlemanly lecturer.

MEDICAL men of Plainfield, N. J., are deeply interested in the discovery of a man with two distinct and separate hearts and two breast bones, all of which he can move about at will. The man who is thus generously endowed by nature is William King, colored, who claims to be 100 years old. His home is in New Bedford, Mass., and he has been visiting his cousin, Thomas Martin, the jail warden in that city, for several days. That he has two hearts Dr. M. H. EXPERIMENTS with aluminum as a substitute for paper are now under way in France. It is well known that the paper used to-day in the manufacture of books is not durable. It is now possible to roll aluminum into sheets four-thousandths of an inch in thickness, in which form it weighs less than paper. By the adoption of suitable machinery these sheets can be made even thinner still, and can be used for book and writing paper. The metal will not oxidize, is practically fire and water proof and is indestructible by the jaws of worms.

IN one of the streets of London there has for some time been carried on an industry peculiar even to that city of curious and crowded occupations, namely, an eelskin leather factory. Here are prepared and manufactured an interesting variety of articles from the skin of the common eel. By means of numerous complicated processes the skins are manipulated until they resemble and would be easily taken for leather, although of a more glutinous and pliable nature. In one specialty this strange substance is cut into long, thin strips and plaited together for whiplashes.

QUARANTINE CONVENTION.

Papers Read in Opposition to a National Quarantine—Adoption of Modern Sanitary Regulations Advocated.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 19.—At the quarantine convention Friday Secretary Rush read a paper by Dr. Holbrick, of Charleston, S. C., opposing national quarantine. A paper was next read by Dr. Sanders, president of the Alabama state board of health, in opposition to federal control of quarantine.

The annexation of Cuba and the adoption of modern sanitary regulations there for the purpose of eradicating disease, was the solution offered by Dr. S. D. Robbins, of Vicksburg, Miss., in a paper offered to the convention. He went into the details of the subject, and advocated giving the whole matter of cleaning up things in Cuba to the United States Marine hospital service. He thought congress ought to be memorialized to take proper action under the circumstances. If the fever is eradicated in Cuba it will solve the problem for this country, he contended.

The committee on resolutions, after careful consideration of the many valuable resolutions offered by the various members of the convention, have decided upon the following as embodying the ideas expressed in the majority of the said resolutions:

Therefore, that for the purpose of protecting and improving the general health of the people of the United States, co-ordinating and harmonizing the action of the state and national sanitary authorities; framing regulations for the treatment of infected vessels and material at all infected or suspected foreign ports of shipment preventing unnecessary interference with commerce, the United States mail or through traffic by land or water, and for adopting a uniform system of quarantine for all ports of this country, be it resolved:

1. That there be established on a broad and comprehensive basis a national bureau of public health in the department of the treasury of the United States; that the administration of all the public health functions now exercised by authority of the United States be placed in charge of this bureau.

2. That the sanitary authorities and commercial interests of the several states of the union be brought into immediate relations with the bureau, and be given a due share in the power and responsibilities of the central board through the agency of an advisory council consisting of one member from each state to be appointed by the authorities of the several states.

LABORING MEN RUN DOWN.

Terrible Accident on the Pennsylvania Road Near Jersey City, in Which Eleven Men Were Killed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—While a gang of 20 track hands were at work on the Pennsylvania railway's line over the Hackensack, near Jersey City, Friday, they were run down by a local passenger train. Eleven of the workmen were killed outright and six were seriously injured. Only three escaped unhurt.

The fog delayed the train and Engineer John Van Ostrand was endeavoring to make up time. His train was running at a high rate of speed, he believing there was nothing to obstruct a quick run to Jersey City. The first he knew that his train had run into the men was when the engine jarred. Then the cries of the men fell on his ears and as soon as possible he brought his train to a stop. The male passengers got out and aided the trainmen in searching for the bodies of the victims. This was not an easy task in the thick fog.

Dougherty, the man supposed to be on the lookout for approaching trains, was a considerable distance up the track from the gang of laborers, and he evidently did not see the train, for he gave no warning. His body was hurled 90 feet through the air.

An unknown man who was killed had only been put to work Friday morning.

MUNCIE, Ind., Nov. 19.—The unraveling of the mystery surrounding the tragic death of little Andy Bodenmiller bids fair to terminate in a much more difficult task than was expected when Fred Olan was arrested. An Echo of the Johnstown Flood.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 19.—Joseph La France, one of Johnstown's best known citizens, dropped dead while at work in the Gautire machine shops. All of these are now in the possession of the police, but no arrest has yet been made.

PANAY ISLAND.

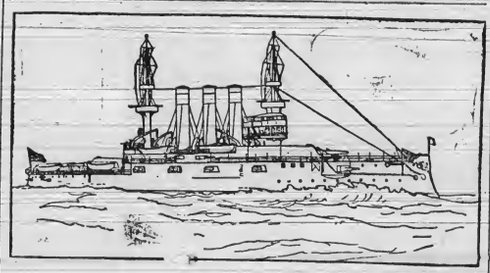
The Island of Negros Has Declared Independence and Desires American Protectorate—Administration Doing Nothing to Check the Insurgents.



WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—News of a mixed character came to the navy department from Adm. Dewey touching the situation in the Philippines. The admiral sent two of his war ships, the Charleston and the Concord, some time ago, to the southward from Manila to ascertain whether there was truth in reports that the insurgents had extended their activities in that direction. Friday he cabled as follows:

"MANILA, Nov. 18, 18.8.

"Secretary Navy, Washington:

"Charleston and Concord arrived to-day from Iloilo. Glass reports that the entirely of Panay is in possession of insurgents except Iloilo which is defended by 500 Spanish troops. All foreign citizens there beg for American protection. The island of Negros has declared independence and desires American protectorate. DEWEY."

Glass is the commander of the Charleston. So far nothing has been done by the administration toward curbing the insurgents in their operations save verbal representations from the American commanders to Aguinaldo, in which it has been pointed out to him that it would be good policy, in view of the probability of the annexation of the islands by the United States, to pursue a course that would not be obnoxious to the United States.

THE NEW "MAINE"

After a Drawing in Harper's Weekly. Copyright, 1898, by Harper & Brothers.

The accepted plans for the new battleship Maine, and her sister ships, the Ohio and the Missouri, call for a ship of approximately 12,150 tons, with a water-line length of 388 feet, beam, 72 feet, and draught 24 feet 6 inches, with full stores, supplies and ammunition, and a guaranteed speed of 18 knots, at a cost of $2,385,000. In appearance, according to Harper's Weekly, the Maine, Ohio and Missouri, up to the top of the superstructure, and as far as the armament is concerned, are identical with the Illinois, Wisconsin and Alabama. They will carry four 18-inch breech-loading rifles, paired in elliptical turrets forward and aft, 14 6-inch rapid-fire guns in the broadside batteries, and 24 rapid-fire and machine guns in the secondary battery, mounted at various points throughout the ship. For armoring these ships the original 16½-inch Harveyized armor plating will be superseded by 10-inch Kruppized plating, which admits of a broader and longer belt for the same weight of steel.

But, the situation is now realized to be critical. So far as the Spaniards are concerned perhaps they can be left to take care of themselves, but the foreign residents at Iloilo are differently regarded. The difficulty in the situation is that with the best intentions to intervene to protect the European and other foreigners and to save the city of Iloilo, the second in importance in the Philippine group from looting, the United States forces appear to be estopped under the rules of war from moving from their positions. Such is the construction placed upon the clause in the protocol relating to the suspension of hostilities.

The immediate effect of this state of affairs may be to hasten action in the Paris conference, for it is only by the termination of that tribunal that the United States can come to the relief of the beleagured Spaniards in Iloilo and at other points. It is said to be a fact, however, that a total disagreement at Paris may result in speedier action than if the commissioners agreed upon the main principles of the Philippine cession, for in such case several additional sessions would be required in order to arrange the details of the treaty. It is now thought to be certain that the commission at a meeting next Monday or Tuesday will do one of two things, i. e., either agree to the cession of the Philippines or note a disagreement and dissolve the meeting, for the administration is not disposed to tolerate further delay and has so instructed the United States commissioners.

Only Two Got Ashore.

NEWPORT, Ore., Nov. 19.—News has been received from Alsea bay, 16 miles below here, that the sailing vessel Atlantic is ashore. She had a crew of 30 men on board and only two got ashore alive. The vessel is dismantled. She was bound from Tacoma for an African port with wheat. The vessel broke in two. Life saving crew have gone to the scene. The Atlantic was of about 2,800 tons.

School Girl Uses a Knife on a Teacher.

WASHINGTON, Ind., Nov. 19.—Because Miss Mary Bobbitt talked too much during school hours, Benjamin Bean, teacher of a country school 15 miles north of here, refused the young lady the accustomed morning recess. This angered Miss Bobbitt, and, drawing a knife, she attacked the teacher with the fierceness of a wounded bear. She slashed at him several times before she could be overpowered and the knife taken from her. Mr. Bean was not seriously injured.

PITTSBURGH MINE OWNERS.

Movement on Foot to Form a Combination of All Ohio River Mines and Floating Property.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 19.—A movement is on foot among the river coal operators to form a combination of all the river mines and floating property, and if the deal is consummated it will make one of the most powerful business organizations in the country. It will have a capital of millions of dollars and will control the coal shipping industry of the Monongahela valley, as well as all of the markets between Pittsburgh and Cairo, Ill. The purpose of the consolidation is to ship all of the coal mined in the Monongahela valley to Cincinnati and Louisville under one management, thus doing away with a lot of office expenses. Nearly all of the Pittsburgh river operators are said to have been invited to take a part in the proposed consolidation.

THREE SPANISH WAR SHIPS.

Adm. Dewey Makes a Contract for the Raising of a Pair of the Fleet Sunk in the Battle of Manila Bay.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The United States navy will soon possess more than a sprinkling of foreign-built war ships. Adm. Dewey has informed the navy department that he has contracted with a Hong Kong firm of wreckers to raise three of the Spanish war vessels sunk in the battle of Manila last May day. The cost of raising the ships and putting them in thorough repair will be $500,000. The vessels to be raised are gunboats

HAD FUN WITH HIM.

The sailor man, when in deep water, cannot conceal the feeling of superiority with which he regards the untarred landlubber. Some of the noncombatants who sailed the gulf and the Caribbean during the war learned to keep an eye on the mariners, and others gained painful experience before they got their sea legs.

An artist who boarded a grimy tugboat clad in white linen found his coat covered with coal dust when he was a day from port and decided to wash it. He filled a bucket with sea water and fell to work. When he had scrubbed the garment for 20 minutes he was satisfied.

Then it occurred to him to starch the coat pockets. He did so, and pulled out—his gold watch.

He was perturbed. The crew laughed and he rebuked them. They bided their time. Then one of them told the artist that the proper way to restore the coat to its normal color was to tie a line to it, heave it overboard and tow it for a few hours. The artist did so.

When he went below a deck hand hauled the coat aboard, untied the line and hiding the coat made fast a ragged piece of white duck and threw it overboard.

When the owner of the coat pulled in his line he was the angriest man on the tug. And he didn't know just how to accept a deck hand's glibly made explanation, which was that a shark had seized the coat, until the garment was restored to him.—N. Y. Herald.

BEST TIME TO KICK A MAN.

First Save His Life and Then You May Apply Your Boot with Impunity.

Perk and Quirk were walking along the crowded street, feeling very kindly toward themselves and the rest of humanity. Just as they reached the middle of a crossing one of those aggravating individuals who walk one way and look another stepped directly in front of a cable car which was rounding the corner. Of course the car had no fender on it. Nearly everybody in the vicinity yelled, and naturally the bewildered man looked in the wrong direction.

Quirk didn't yell, though. He jumped to the side of the track and grabbed the man by the collar and yanked him clear of the tracks and almost out of his shoes. Then he gave him another ferocious jerk to get him out of the way of an express wagon, and, getting him at proper range at the same time, he gave the poor man a kick that must have driven his spine up into his hat. And with the kick Quirk roared:

"Confound you, keep your eyes open when you are on the street!"

Quirk looked unutterably savage, but Perk tottered to the curb, sat down and laughed until the tears came. Then he said:

"You are the only big enough idiot on earth to save a man's life and then kick him for it."—Chicago Times-Herald.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The cabinet session Friday was devoted to a large extent to consideration of complaints that have reached the war department alleging that a state of practical anarchy prevails in Porto Rico. These complaints asserted that the lawless elements in Porto Rico are committing depredations of the gravest character, and that the seriousness of the situation is increased by reason of the fact that United States troops stationed in the island likewise have been guilty of gross misconduct. The cabinet took cognizance of the reports and on adjournment Secretary Alger, at the instance of the president, cabled Gen. Brooke inquiring as to the accuracy of the complaints.

How to Get Strong

A system which has become run down by the trying weather of the past summer is not in a condition to meet the severe winter of this climate and will easily fall a prey to disease unless a proper tonic is used.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best medicine in the world for building up and strengthening an enervated system.

Do not confuse these pills with ordinary purgative pills. They do NOT act on the bowels, thereby further weakening the body. They build up the blood and strengthen the nerves.

Major A. C. Bishop, of 215 Third Ave., Detroit, Mich., is a well-known civil engineer. He says: "When I had my last spell of sickness and came out of the hospital I was a sorry sight. I could not regain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks. I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and I bought two boxes. I did not take them for my complexion but for strength. After using them I felt better, and know they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic or to build up a shattered constitution."—Detroit Free Press.

ALTERNATIVES.

Spain Must Accept a Sum of Money for the Philippine Islands.

Or Lose Them by Conquest, With the Possibility of Other Territorial Losses to Indemnify the United States for Added Expenses.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The American peace commissioners Saturday were closely engaged in formulating the terms of the important communication to be made to the Spanish commissioners next week. It is impossible at present, however, to determine whether the work will be completed for presentation on Monday or Tuesday, though it is believed the Americans will be ready on Monday. While the Americans fully appreciate the necessity of making progress they are also under the necessity of taking great care in the preparation of what may possibly be the conclusive record of these negotiations. The Spanish commissioners consumed a week in the preparation of the last memorandum, but the Americans will not require so long a time to complete the work in hand and any present delay will ultimately prove to have been advantageous.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The postponement of Saturday's meeting of the peace commissioners until next week is explained at the state department as necessary to enable the American representatives to formulate the precise heads of the treaty of peace, which will mark the final stage of the proceedings. Many minor details will be left for subsequent agreement, but it is confidently declared that the next session will result in the formal enunciation of exact terms regarding the payment which Spain is to receive for relinquishing sovereignty over the whole Philippine archipelago, as well as the mutual declaration regarding the transfer of Porto Rico, Cuba and the Ladrone islands.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The American commissioners, in a written communication, will declare that the third article of the protocol regarding the Philippines is capable of only one fair construction, that no arbitration is needed to elucidate its terms, and that the United States can not admit any other power to figure here purely as a lexicologist. They will maintain that the two commissions are charged to determine whether Spain or the United States shall in future own the Philippines.

This will be accompanied by the clear declaration that the United States will possess the Philippines.

Following this declaration the American commissioners will lay before the Spaniards two alternatives.

First—To accept a sum of money from the United States and to cede and evacuate the Philippines.

Second—To lose the Philippines to the United States by conquest, with the possibility of other territorial losses to indemnify the United States for the added expense of conquest.

MORE RIOTING AT PANA, ILL.

PANA, Ill., Nov. 21.—Fourteen Negroes, employed by the Penwell Coal Co., armed with rifles, at 8 o'clock Saturday morning opened fire on a frame cottage which was occupied by union miners. One of the white men was shot in the side. The Negroes then rushed inside the stockade of the Penwell Coal Co.

The mineowners are denounced, as they furnished the Negroes with the firearms. It is believed that a repetition of the South Carolina riots will take place here soon. The white people of the county are aroused. Lynching will be the order of things before long if the imported men fail to leave. Great excitement prevailed here Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—President McKinley does not intend to take any action concerning the race rioting in Pana. VERY DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Miles and Miles of Territory on the Ozark Mountains Being Devastated by Forest Fires—Heavy Loss.

MACOMB, Mo., Nov. 21.—The largest and most destructive conflagration that has ever swept the Ozark mountains since 1884, is now circumscribing this town for miles and miles, north of and parallel with the Memphis railroad. The autumn heavy foliage has rapidly fallen since frost and are supposed to have been fired from sparks of freight engines Sunday afternoon, a scope of country 13 miles long is in flames, miles of fences, orchards, plantations, farms and dry pasture fields, stocked with cattle and other animals, and many old settlers' homes lie directly in the line of the ravaging monster, while neighborhoods are advancing to the scene, but find themselves totally unable to check the flames, their only remedy is to hurriedly turn out stock ahead of the flames and desert premises. The altitude being 1,700 feet above the sea and a terrible southwestwardly wind prevailing, great destruction is imminent. The town of Macomb will probably be destroyed.

ATALANTA SUNK

The Ship Was Destroyed Five Miles South of Alsscad.

The Atalanta Struck on the Breakers and Commenced Settling at Once—Crew Took to the Rigging But Soon Went Down With the Ship.

YAQUINA, Ore., Nov. 21.—Additional particulars of the wreck of the British ship Atalanta, Capt. Charles McBride, from Tacoma to Cape Town, Thursday morning, five miles south of Alsscad, were brought here by a correspondent who went to the scene. Twenty-three lives were lost, including all the officers of the ship, and only three sailors survived to tell the terrible story of the wreck.

The body of Jacobson was recovered and buried Saturday.

Wednesday morning the ship stood of the starboard tack, the course being southeast, 12 east, until Wednesday night about 12 o'clock. She kept backing off, steering southeast by east and running under full sail, when suddenly the lookout sang out "Breakers ahead."

Almost at the same time the ship struck with a tremendous crash. She rose again on the heavy ground swell, lurched forward, struck again, was carried further by the seas, struck a third time and commenced settling at once. The seas by this time were washing over the vessel and the decks were quickly cleared of everything movable.

The crew had taken to the rigging, most of them to the mizzen mast. Within half an hour after striking the hull broke in two. The main mast fell and this started the mizzen mast, in which nearly all the crew had taken refuge. At this moment George Frazer, a sailor, plunged overboard, preferring to take his chances by swimming to be carried over by the tottering mizzen mast. He succeeded in catching hold of the main hatch and held on for a few minutes when he was told that the port life boat was near him. Frazer swam to the boat after a desperate struggle and succeeded in climbing into it, his shipmates in the rigging giving him three cheers. After helping McMahon and Webber into the boat they soon drifted on shore.

THE LOCOMOTIVE EXPLODED.

The Firemen Hurled Seventy-Five Feet and Killed—Two Tramps Supposed to Be Buried in the Debris.

CONVERSE, O., Nov. 21.—The Chicago & Erie road had a disastrous wreck near this city Sunday morning about 9 o'clock. The wrecked train was the second section of west bound freight train No. 83, which was being pulled by Engine 709. The train was a heavy one and the engine one of the big moguls used on the Erie for heavy traffic. The train was running at the rate of about 40 miles an hour when the engine suddenly blew up. The engine was manned by Engineer Walter Shirtliff and Freman David Little. Conductor Ed Quick and Head Brakeman Frank Smith were also on the engine, having gone to the front of the train when it pulled out of Spenceerville, so as to be ahead when they reached Ohio City, and thus facilitate doing the work there. Firman Little was in the act of throwing in some coal when the engine let go. He was hurled about 75 feet by the explosion and buried beneath a flat car, from which his dead body was afterward dug out. The big engine was raised about five feet from the rails, dropped back on the ties and ran about 75 feet, then rolled over into the ditch.

Engineer Shirtliff, Conductor Quick and Brakeman Smith were carried over with the engine, and it was some time before they got out. Strange to say, they were not injured very badly, but it is thought Engineer Shirtliff, who complains about his back, may have been injured internally. About ten cars were piled up and completely wrecked, so that the track was blocked until late Sunday evening, trains being transferred around the wreck by way of the C., H. & D. and the Pennsylvania at Lima to Delphos, then over the Clover Leaf to Ohio City.

I. Albaugh, of Spenceerville, a line walker for the Buckeye Pipe Line Co., who was on his way to Elgin, a short distance west of here, was riding on top of the third car from the engine and escaped with a few bruises by jumping when he saw the engine raise into the air and felt the cars jerking. He says there were two tramps riding on a car loaded with stone, the second car behind the one he was on. A box car ran up onto the car they were on and is still wedged there, and they have not been seen since and are undoubtedly killed.

DOCKS WANTED.

Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks Makes Annual Report.

Coaling Station Established at Pago Pago—The Port of San Juan, Porto Rico—Estimates for the Various Navy Yards for Next Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—In his annual report to the secretary of the navy, Chief Endicott, of the bureau of yards and docks, makes a strong point of the necessity for ample docking facilities, not only for small vessels but for the battle ships upon waters near Key West. He said this place was, during the war and may be in the future, an important base of naval operations, able strategists having pronounced Key West and Dry Tortugas the key of the Gulf of Mexico. The small showing we make in dock accommodations is very marked as compared with the other naval powers of the world and although the expenditures for dry docks by the United States will be large in the next few years, Chief Endicott says he can not fail to ask a continuance of the liberal policy in this particular until the country is well fitted for handling its fleet in the dock yards without compelling vessels to perform long sea voyages to reach docking ports. The estimates submitted for the next year provide for only one new dock, which is to be of the largest type, constructed of granite and concrete, and located at the Norfolk navy yard.

Under the head of coaling stations the report tells what has been done toward establishing such a station at Pago Pago, on the island of Tutuila, Samoa, showing that the United States has acquired 15 acres of land at Swimming point and Observatory point, and has contracted for a steel pier, coal-shed and other improvements necessary to store 5,000 tons of coal and other supplies.

The report states that the United States has come into possession of the port of San Juan, of a naval arsenal, founded in the year 1800, containing a number of substantial concrete buildings and three good piers. The total value of the buildings and arsenals and grounds is about $100,000, and it has been erected into a United States naval station.

The estimates of the various navy yards for the next fiscal year are as follows:

Portsmouth, N. H., $800,000; Boston, Mass., $367,000; New London, Ct., $25,000; New York, $613,063; League Island, Pa., $755,976; Washington, D. C., $205,000; Norfolk, Va., $2,000,000 ($1,500,000 being for a new dock); Port Royal, S. C., $145,000; Key West, $112,520; Mare Island, $851,750; Puget sound, $53,500.

Treating of this last station, Puget sound, Chief Endicott says that if it be important to equip a first class naval station in that vicinity, a new site should be selected, for the present has none of desiderata of a good naval station. There is no near-by population to draw upon for skilled labor; no available market and no direct railroad connection with a trunk line. Under these conditions, it is said to be doubtful if it be wise to build up a large station at this point. The report also comments upon the fact that no battle ships or heavy draught cruiser has yet approached the wharves at Mare Island and says it remains to be demonstrated that this precise location as a navy yard was a fortunate one. Attention is called to the fact that the Oregon was compelled to go 800 miles north of Puget sound to be docked. While the government could construct the amplest dock facilities on San Francisco bay, this would still be 450 miles north of the southern boundary of the United States, where it is quite as important to have a naval station as on the northern boundary at Puget sound. Therefore, it is recommended that a board of experienced officers be directed to give attention to the establishment of such a station near the southern limits of the Pacific coast.

The total estimates of the bureau for the next fiscal year aggregate $6,347,421.

THE REVISED PEACE TERMS.

The Maine, Our Losses in Commerce, Pensions Roll, Our War Debt, Etc., Placed Against the Philippines.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The United States commissioners are devoting Friday as they did Thursday, to formulating their next presentation for the consideration of the Spanish commissioners.

While the Americans are reticent as to their intentions, it may be said without reserve that the occasion is near upon which the exact peace terms acceptable to the American peace commissioners will be laid before the Spaniards with a time limit for their acceptance.

As previously indicated in these dispatches, the American commissioners will not involve the United States in any obligation to the creditors of Spain in any shape or form. In other words, the Americans will not guarantee any of the Spanish bonds, even though Spain may have mortgaged as security the revenues of territory to be taken by the United States.

As set forth in these dispatches on October 31 and previously, the United States may now balance its war ledger, debiting to Spain the value of battle ship Maine, the cost of the naval and military operations, the losses incurred by American commerce and the future pension roll, etc., while on the other side of the sheet may be placed Spain's equities and values in the Philippine islands. If a difference is found to exist in favor of Spain this amount, in cash, may be offered her by the American commissioners at the next joint session here. What this balance may be is not definitely known, but it may be about $20,000,000, or possibly less. The Americans may also require until next Monday or Tuesday to prepare the final presentation of their case, which was understood at the adjournment of Wednesday last.

One evening last week 437 head of cattle were unloaded at Richwood, belonging to Cincinnati firms. They exercised themselves after getting out of the cars by tearing the stock pens to pieces; then they were driven to Union where Prof. Voshell agreed with the owners to keep them all night. He put them in a large field of grass and expected them to eat all they wanted and then to lie down and rest quietly. The Prof. was guided to this conclusion by the men who drove the cattle and were expected to know all about them. "All's well that ends well," but in this case there was no end—one long horned, ring-leader of the gang, with a two busbel appetite and 24 square feet of emptiness inside of him, spied a cornfield near and decided to fill up. The effects of this dicision was made plain next morning, after 70 shocks of corn had disappeared along with several acres of wheat. J. W. Conner and Jas. A. Huey assessed the damages at $103.34 and the Cincinnati men have agreed to pay every cent.

Marshall Hance had an attachment on a horse belonging to Frank Howard near Verona, and left the animal in Howard's care, who promised to bring it in on the day of trial. He came not and the horse was not produced. Judgment was given against him. Hance went over on Thursday and as soon as the Howards saw him they made for the barn, old man Howard with a big knife in his hand; Frank with a pistol; George Howard with a double gun and old Mrs. Howard, who was very prominent. The old man stood in the doorway, knife in one hand and bar ring the door with the other. The old woman said it was her horse and she had given it to Frank. Hance brought the critter to Walton and put it in a livery stable to await the day of sale. Now we think that Petersburg is a dear old precinct, and when Tom Mathews is not running, she is pretty Democratic, but when it comes to banners, Bullittsville should carry them.

Our tobacco men are busy stripping their tobacco. A few have sold and delivered at 8 and 2, the 2 cents being for the trash. The buyers seem to have quit and are not taking hold any more. We are afraid that the combine entered into by the leading [illegible] will seriously injure the tobacco growing industry, and hope that the movement now on foot to protect the interest of the shippers and growers will be encouraged and supported by all who are interested. It is nearly time for farmers to wake up and wage war on the trusts and combines that threaten to ruin their business.

For Mothers!

THE discomforts and dangers of child-birth can be almost entirely avoided. Wine of Cardui relieves expectant mothers. It gives tone to the genitalorgans, and puts them in condition to do their work perfectly. That makes pregnancy less painful, shortens labor and hastens recovery after child-birth. It helps a woman bear strong healthy children.

has also brought happiness to thousands of homes barren for years. A few doses often brings joy to loving hearts that long for a darling baby. No woman should neglect to try it for this trouble. It cures nine cases out of ten. All druggists sell Wine of Cardui. $1.00 per bottle.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. LOUISA HALE, of Jefferson, Ga., says: "When I first took Wine of Cardui we had been married three years, but could not have any children. Nine months later I had a fine girl baby."

THE REUNION.

THERE are forty of us Robinsons, all thriving, hale and sound,
And we always get together when Thanksgiving comes around.

It takes a week for some of us to make the journey here;
But we wouldn't miss Thanksgiving if we traveled all the year!

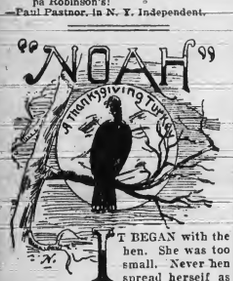
We run the dear old homestead to the attic rafters quite,
And the bees could scarce hive closer than de we, Thanksgiving night.

We bring a host of children, but there's no distinction found;
We're all a pack of children when Thanksgiving comes around.

You ought to see us playing tag behind the old red barn,
All running, twisting, tangled, like a living skein of yarn.

And then we all go coasting on the slope of Mutton hill,
And, like as not, get "slewing" round and take a jolly spill.

Oh, what an appetite we have when mother blows the horn!
How good the crisp, brown turkeys smell, all fattened up with corn!



The puddings and the pumpkin pies, the jellies white and red—

When dinners over, all round the wide old hearth we sit,
And live our youthful pleasures o'er, and crack our nuts and wit.

O happiest day of all the time that through the hour-glass runs,
Thanksgiving in the old-time was at Grandpa Robinson's!

"NOAH"

IT BEGAN with the hen. She was too small. Never hen spread herself as did this one, but it was of no use; she wasn't equal to it.

"Melvira," remarked Mr. Dassy to his wife, as he looked into the coop, "Melvira, if I didn't know different, I should say you was a natural-born fool."

"William Henry," snapped Mrs. Dassy, "I am a natural-born fool, or I'd never married you."

"Mebby you're right, Melvira," he said, uneasily. "But I wish you'd explain why you didn't pick out a bigger hen."

"That hen was the biggest one on the place that wanted to set," returned Mrs. Dassy. "I suppose you'd have set those eggs under a hen that didn't want to set, wouldn't you?"

"Well, not exactly that, Melvira. A hen that hasn't fully and thoroughly made up her mind to set isn't a very stationary critter. But why didn't you keep the eggs till a more sizable hen got the setting notion into her head?"

"Would you have kept those eggs on ice, or would you have boiled them, William Henry?" inquired Mrs. Dassy, with vigor.

"Well, I dunno what I'd have done," sighed Mr. Dassy, "but I'd have done something 'fore I'd set nine turkey eggs under a little speckled hen like that. You'd better sew a fringe on that hen so she can cover the outside eggs. Though what do we want a lot of turkeys gawking round for anyhow?"

"Well, you'll see what we want of them about next Thanksgiving, William Henry, if you don't eat your share of those turkeys, then I lose my guess."

"All right, Melvira, all right," assented Mr. Dassy, cheerfully, as he went back to the pump. "Only I don't like the gobble of the pesky things. Makes me want to choke them."

The Dassys lived on the northern edge of Nebraska. Their farm lay on the open prairie, but right at the head of Lone Tree canyon, an abrupt crack on the ground which ran down to the Niobrara river. The lone tree which gave the name to the canyon was a high and spectral pine standing a dozen yards from their barn.

Never was tree so deserted by its kind before. There was not another in sight anywhere, although there were others down the canyon and along the river; but as you stood on the prairie you looked over them, and over the river and canyon as well, so that in whatever way you turned your eyes from the Dassy ranch you saw nothing but treeless prairie; though of an evening the wind sighed through the top of the lone tree quite industriously, and did what it could to suggest a forest. The Dassy boys, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and George Washington, often talked about climbing the lone tree, but they never did so.

One day a month later Mrs. Dassy came out and said: "Well, she didn't do so bad, I think."

"How many?" inquired Mr. Dassy.

"Seven."

"No, that isn't bad, considering. Are they likely-looking critters?"

"Well, they don't handsome much now, of course. Young turkeys never do. But I'm reckoning that next Thanksgiving the biggest one of 'em, stand to a turn, on the blue platter, with his legs sticking up in the air, will be just about as pretty a sight as you'll see, William Henry!"

Her husband smiled and rubbed his hands. "Oh, I'm not saying a word against juicy young turkeys on platters 'bout Thanksgiving time. What I object to is their gobbling and strutting around and feeling so big."

"Don't say anything, William Henry," replied his wife; "I've known you to gobble and strut around and feel big."

It was still early in the spring, and the weather was cold. Perhaps it was from this cause that the next day one of the young turkeys died. But the careful nursing of Mrs. Dassy, together with the good care of their foster mother, the little speckled hen, brought the other six through to warm weather. By this time they were able to make excursions about the near-by prairie.

But their troubles were not over. At the first rain the whole flock crowded under a haystack, and they pressed forward so hard that one of them was smothered to death. A fortnight later a chicken-hawk swooped down and carried off another, although the little hen fought desperately and lost half her feathers in the struggle. There were but four left now.

But the worst was yet to come. A week later there was a great rainstorm. Shortly before its coming Mrs. Dassy had seen the turkeys under the barn, so she supposed them safe; but, in point of fact, when it began they were twenty rods out on the prairie. At the first drops the hen began to flutter and cluck wildly in an attempt to lead them back, but they refused to budge. There on the open prairie they weathered it out, and when the rain ceased and Mrs. Dassy discovered them and spattered out through the puddles she found three of them drowned.

"There the fools were," she cried, coming back, carrying the only live one left, "all drowned standing up, with their mouths open so's to get the most of it. There never was such fools as young turkeys!"

"I always said it, Melvira," replied Mr. Dassy, gloomily. "They're the biggest fools in all creation. That ends our plans for Thanksgiving."

"No, it don't, William Henry," returned his wife, vigorously. "This one's alive, and he's going to stay alive!" And she rolled him in a flannel cloth and put him in the oven to dry. Mr. Dassy shook his head.

"No hope, Melvira, no hope," he answered. "He'll turn up his toes inside of a week. It's bound to come! I've felt it in my bones all along. Why, if that turkey can't die any other way, he'll up and go off and commit suicide!"

"Stop your croaking, William Henry," said Mrs. Dassy, sharply. "This turkey is going to live till Thanksgiving, and then he'll die a natural death—for turkeys."

"Oh, well, I hope so, of course. He did pull through the flood first-rate, there's no denying that. Almost as well as Noah did through his flood. That's what we'll call him, Melvira—Noah."

"All right, William Henry; his name is Noah."

Mrs. Dassy was right about Noah's chances for living; a half-hour in the oven made him as sprightly as ever. In fact, he wriggled out of the oven himself and went plaintively peeping away out of the open door to the speckled hen, who was delirious with joy at the sight of him.

The storm seemed to mark a turning-point in Noah's life. There was no more trouble. The rains either ceased or he defied them. The chicken-hawks never made any more attacks. Indeed they would shortly have had trouble in carrying him off, since he grew with the most astonishing rapidity. The speckled hen was soon the smaller of the two, and found herself following behind as he wandered here and there. Then he began to ignore her entirely, and at night took to roosting on the ridge-pole of the barn.

This was too much for the hen; she gave him up, and he went his own way in the world. The grasshopper season came on, and he developed wonderful skill in catching these insects, to the great delight of Mr. Dassy.

"I tell you what, Melvira," he one day remarked, "there isn't another turk in Nebraska that can gather in a hopper like that Noah of ours! You ought to watch him. He sees a hopper sitting on a blade of grass and not thinking about anything, and he just up and points him like a pointer dog, and creeps closer and closer, steady, never saying a word, his head getting a little lower all the time, till he's just right; then he makes one shoot and puts up his head sort of like this, and swallows the hopper." And Mr. Dassy twisted his neck about in a ludicrous attempt to look like Noah.

"Well, I've got something else to do besides watch a turkey catch hoppers!" answered Mrs. Dassy. "Though I hope he'll get a right smart lot of them, because we don't need the hoppers, and they do say there's nothing like a hopper-fattened turkey for tender eating and flavor."

"That's so, Meivira." But you ought to watch him snatch them. I've lived in five states and two territories, and I've never seen anything like it! Never knowed him to miss. I calculate he gobbles 400 of them every day."

The hot, dry Nebraska summer wore away, and Noah continued to thrive. The grasshopper crop was good—better than any other crop—and Noah never failed to get his daily share of it. Each week Mr. Dassy grew more enthusiastic in his praises of Noah. He finally came to boast that Noah was the finest turkey in the United States, if not in the whole world, and that he habitually caught and ate 1,000 grasshoppers each day. Dassy, without intended it, exaggerated; but Noah certainly was a fine bird.

It was one evening early in September, just after sundown, while Mrs. Dassy was finishing getting supper and her husband and two of the boys were in their places at the table waiting expectantly, that a wild shout was heard from George Washington outside.

"He's done it, pop, he's done it! Noah's done it! Come and see!" cried the boy, in huge excitement. They all rushed out.

"There he is—see him!" went on George Washington, leaping around like a kitten. "Look at him! I saw him do it!"

The others looked up in the direction the boy pointed. Far out on a long and scraggy limb of the pine tree, a dark blot against the red of the western sky, sat Noah, craning his neck this way and that as he gazed at the world below.

"Good gracious alive, Melvira," cried Mr. Dassy, when he fully took in the situation, "he has done it, sure's you're born! Noah's flown into the lone tree to roost! Who'd have thought he could have done it!"

"It was a big fly, and that's a fact," assented Mrs. Dassy.

"Big fly!" roared Mr. Dassy, "I should say it was a big fly! It's the biggest fly any turkey in America ever made. That Noah is the most—"

Just then the turkey stretched out his neck and gave a loud gobble, the first he had ever been heard to utter. Mr. Dassy stopped short, struck one fist against the other, and went on:

"There, it's begun! I knew that pesky gobbling would have to come. Nothing else but gobble, gobble, gobble, now!"

"Well, come in before supper all gets cold. Let him gobble if he wants to. You'd gobble, too, if you'd just flown up into the lone tree."

They went in, and Mr. Dassey seemed to forget, or at least to forgive, the gobble, and said: "No, sir, Melvira; there isn't another turkey like that there Noah in America. I wouldn't take a quarter section of the best land in Keyapaha county for him."

"You'll get so took up with him," answered his wife, "that you can't kill him when Thanksgiving comes."

"Oh, pshaw," retorted her husband. "I'll show you. Think I'm a woman, hey? What are we raising Noah for? I like him, of course, and I've got respect for him, but we raised him for Thanksgiving—that's what he's for—and when the time comes, whack! off goes his head."

Mr. Dassy paused and seemed lost in thought; then he continued: "Of course, to kill Noah—just to kill him plain, you know, in cold blood, as they say—might be a little hard, but I'll just wait till he's gobbled at me, sassy like, once or twice, and then you'll see—snap!—head's off and we've got him on the blue platter!"

From this time on Noah roosted each night in the lone tree. The flight seemed in no way to disagree with him, for he waxed bigger and bigger and fatter and fatter. He gobbled occasionally, but no more than was necessary to keep him in good voice.

Through the fall he continued to range the prairie and gather belated grasshoppers. Nothing ever ruffled his dignity, and only once did he become excited, and that was when Mr. Dassy and his sons one afternoon burned a circular firebreak a quarter of a mile out around the buildings. When Noah saw the flames and heard the crackling of the dry grass, he uttered an alarmed gobble and flew into the pine, where he gobbled some more and stayed till the next morning.

The sason advanced and the weather became wintry, but all efforts to induce him to enter the coop with the other fowls were useless. Even the cold winds of November did not seem to disturb him. To be sure there was no snow, or only a few flakes, even up to Thanksgiving week, but the winds blew chill, and tossed the top of the pine about and threatened sometimes to sweep him off; but he clung to his perch.

It was late Tuesday afternoon before Thanksgiving. Mrs. Dassy had been bustling about with the work since dinner time, but her husband had sat by the fire and scarcely spoken. She knew that he was thinking of Noah, but she said nothing. She had her own private feelings about Noah, but she knew that he had got to die.

After some time she said: "Well, William Henry, I'm waiting for that turkey now."

"You are, are you?" snapped the man, impatiently. "Well, why didn't you say so? What am I here for? What have I been setting around all the afternoon for? Andrew Jackson, you and George Washington go out and catch the critter."

The boys started out, and Mr. Dassy went on: "Melvira, when you want a turkey killed you want to speak about it, not go around thinking I can read your pesky thoughts. I'm ready to kill that turkey any time you want it killed."

He turned to the other boy and said: "Thomas Jefferson, you go out and chop his head off when you get him. You'll find the ax by the grindstone. It's time you boys learned to do such things."

Thomas Jefferson disappeared, and Mr. Dassy peeped cautiously out of the window. Mrs. Dassy said not a word. Andrew Jackson and George Washington were having a good deal of difficulty in capturing the turkey. They had at first tried to approach him and pick him up as they had often done, but something unusual in their manner alarmed him and he walked off.

After several attempts they gave up and Andrew Jackson said: "We've got to run him down, George," and they both started after him. They were good runners, but Noah was also a good runner.

Around and around the barn they went twenty times, the boys two steps behind the turkey, who had his head lowered, his wings tight folded, and was taking steps quite as long as they were. At last, however, the boys gained a little upon him.

"Fall on him, fall on him!" shouted Thomas Jefferson, from the grindstone. Andrew Jackson fell forward on his face, with George Washington on top of him.

But they counted without their host—Noah was not there; with a fierce beat of his wings he shot out, and then sailed away to the top of the lone tree. There he stood up and uttered a defiant gobble.

"Hear that!" cried Mr. Dassy, in a rage. "I'll fix him now!" and he snatched down his rifle from the wall.

"Now you put that gun right back," said his wife, firmly. "You know perfectly well if you shoot at him so far off that you are liable to wound him, and I won't have him suffering. Wait till morning, when you can get up close to him and shoot him right and so he'll never know what hits him."

Mr. Dassy snorted once or twice and put up the rifle.

It was just before the first sign of dawn next morning. The house was dark, and the only sound to be heard was the sharp rush of the wind through the pine.

Suddenly there came in the morning stillness the jangling gobble of Noah. No one heard it. Then it came again, louder.

Mr. Dassy half awoke and said: "Consarn that turkey!" and turned over. There was another gobble; Mr. Dassy half opened his eyes and saw a strange light playing on the ceiling, and then one of the boys began pounding furiously on the stovepipe, and shouted excitedly from above:

"Fire! fire! There's a prairie fire coming! It's right on us; it's got inside the firebreak!"

In two minutes the entire Dassy family were out fighting the approaching fire. It was a long hour's work. But the grass had been grazed on and trampled down, and at last with much beating of brooms, shovels, pieces of boards and old blankets they subdued the flames and saved their stacks and buildings. Then, tired but happy, they returned to the house.

It was then too late to return to bed and Mrs. Dassy got breakfast. After they had eaten they sat around the stove for an hour. The sun was well up. Noah was walking about cautiously outside, carrying his head high and still somewhat alarmed. After awhile he gobbled. Mr. Dassy arose and took down his rifle.

"William Henry," said his wife sharply, "what are you going to do?"

"What am I going to do? Well, I reckoned I'd take a turn along the edge of the canyon and see if I couldn't knock over a jack-rabbit. To-morrow's Thanksgiving. Do you think we can have a Thanksgiving without any fresh meat?"

Then he went out.

It was the next day and they were all gathered round the table. Mrs. Dassy's brother from Sand Lake was with them. He looked at the blue platter and said: "'Pears to me, William Henry, that's a powerful queer-looking Thanksgiving turkey you've got. I'll bet a dollar there ain't any wishbone in it."

"You've hit it right, Hiram," returned Mr. Dassy. "Our Thanksgiving turkey ain't much to brag of, but we've got a right smart heap of Thanksgiving. Hear that rascal Noah gobbling out there! I tell you he's got the clearest and the musicalest gobble of any turkey in the whole pesky world!"—Hayden Carruth, in Youth's Companion.

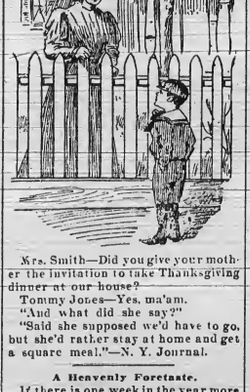
"NOW YOU PUT THAT GUN RIGHT BACK."

FIRST THANKSGIVING FEAST.

How the Colonists Prepared for the Event and Hospitably Entertained Massasoit and His Warriors.

The first Thanksgiving was appointed by Gov. Bradford, at Plymouth, Mass., in 1621, the year following the landing of the Pilgrims, in order that the colonists in a more special way could rejoice together at having all things in good and plenty, writes Clifford Howard in Ladies' Home Journal. In preparation for the feast "gunners were sent into the woods for wild turkeys, which abounded there in great numbers; kitchens were made ready for preparing the feast—especially the large one in Dame Brewster's house, which was under the immediate direction and charge of Priscilla Molines, she who afterward became the wife of John Alden—while a messenger was dispatched to invite Massasoit, the chief of the friendly tribe, to attend the celebration.

"Early on the morning of the appointed Thursday—about the first of November—Massasoit and ninety of his warriors arrived on the outskirts of the village, and, with wild yells, announced their readiness to enjoy the hospitality of their white brethren. The little settlement, which now consisted of seven dwellings and four public buildings, was soon astir with men, women and children, who gave the Indians a hearty welcome as they filed into the large square in front of the governor's house. Soon the roll of a drum announced the hour of prayer, for no day was begun without this religious service. Then followed a holiday of feasting and recreation, which continued not only that day, but during the two succeeding days. The usual routine of duties was suspended; the children romped about in merry play; the young men indulged in athletic sports and games in friendly rivalry with the Indians; the little American army of 20 men, under the leadership of Miles Standish, went through its drill and manual of arms, to the great delight and astonishment of the natives, while the women busied themselves in the careful preparation of the excellent meals, which were eaten in the open air."



Coming of Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving enters through the gate,
The morning gate of red and gold,
A-tremble 'neath the season's weight
Of fruitage, that his shoulders hold:
The grain from broad luxurious fields,
And garden's wealth of root and vine,
The treasure that the forest yields,
And richest output of the mine.

In gala dress the children stand
To bless the first of holidays,
And age lifts up a feeble hand
In benison of thankful praise:
The weary pause for needed rest,
The sad forget their bitter woe,
While north and south and east and west
Their hymns of gratitude o'erflow.

Come in, O blessed, blessed day,
With hallowed memories of the past;
Beside our altars while we pray
Teach us God's graciousness at last;
Make us the joy of life to know,
The gifts He sends to prize aright,
And bear our praises when you go
Beyond the sable gates of night.
—Lalla Mitchell, in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

THAT TERRIBLE KID.

Mrs. Smith—Did you give your mother the invitation to take Thanksgiving dinner at our house?

Tommy Jones—Yes, ma'am.

"And what did she say?"

"Said she supposed we'd have to go, but she'd rather stay at home and get a square meal."—N. Y. Journal.

A Heavenly Foretaste.

If there is one week in the year more than another, when our burdens and cares, and vexations, and complaints ought to be forgotten, and our mercies counted, and talked, and sung, and prayed over, it is this Thanksgiving week. In Heaven every day will be Thanksgiving day; but there ought to be for us, at this season of the year, at least, a foretaste of the Heavenly joy. — United Presbyterian.

Why So Large.

If you haven't a family large enough to fit a turkey, invite some one in. That's why the Lord made the turkey so large; so that you will have to invite some one in to help eat it. If you invite some one who is friendless and homeless you will rank very high with the angels when they look down on the Thanksgiving dinner.—Atchison Globe.

THE TRUSTS TO FIGHT.

Republican Success Gives the Monopolists a Fresh Hold on the Nation's Finances.

Now that the republicans have gained entire control of the law-making machinery of the government, the reign of trusts will continue with added splendor.

For the next two years there will be a grand rush on the part of what McKinley calls "our best business interests" to get into combines which will kill competition and lower the wages of the workingmen.

When the news of republican success was received in New York all the trust stocks went up with a bound and this fact demonstrates what the money power thinks is going to be the result of unrestrained republican power.

To the transportation trust, the Standard Oil trust, the sugar trust and the other trusts controlling $2,000,000,000 of capital will be added next winter the money trust—the king of all the combines.

Already the administration newspapers are demanding the passage, in extra session, of the "reform" currency bill. When that measure becomes a law there will be one great central bank and 10,000 branches. Competition in the money market will be slain. Business will be entirely at the mercy of the enormous and merciless money power.

What can the people do under such circumstances? They can fight the slavery of the trusts as the opponents of human slavery fought that institution.

They can insist that such laws as now exist against the trusts shall be enforced, and if these laws are not enforced they can call attention to the venality of those in power and denounce the rascals who thrive by robbery.

There is a tremendous struggle impending. Democrats should gird themselves for the conflict. The fight will be bitter, the odds are tremendous, but in the long run the right must and will prevail.—Chicago Democrat.

A LIVING QUESTION.

It Will Engage the Attention of the People During the Next Two Years.

The currency question will probably engage the attention of our statesmen and the public generally in the next few years more than any other subject. It therefore behooves everybody to study both sides of it, because each voter has a voice in determining whether the United States shall have a single standard of gold or whether it shall have the bimetallic standard of gold and silver adopted by our fathers in 1792 and which was the settled policy of this country until the 12th day of February, 1873. This is all important because our very existence as a nation depends upon a normal supply of money. This question is too important to be studied with a view of sustaining the platform of any political party. It should be studied with the single idea of determining whether bimetallism is best for the people. If so, then it ought to be adopted, and anyone who opposes it through selfish or sinister motives is a traitor to his government and an enemy to mankind. It is conceded by some writers that money has three functions. It is a medium of exchange, a measure of value and a standard of value. Stability of value and portability are two important qualities of money. If this be true, the question then naturally arises: Do gold and silver, or either of them, possess these two qualities? Both possess portability, but are they stable in value? Jevons, who was a gold standard writer, says: "Gold fell in value from 1789 to 1809 46 per cent. From 1809 to 1849 it rose 149 per cent." From 1849 to 1873 it fell at least 20 per cent., and from 1873 to 1897 it has certainly risen in value 85 per cent. Both metals are subject to the great economic law of supply and demand. Their value constantly fluctuates according to the uses to which they are put.

Gold as a Standard.

The monetary commission appointed at Indianapolis, in presenting its currency scheme, assumes the invariability of gold as a standard, and then proposes to open wide the doors for the issue of paper money. It says: "The standard must have a market value as a commodity independent of any government fiat and of all legal tender laws. That is, it must have the same value as a commodity, independently of any value derived from its use as money, that it has both as a commodity and as money." That is simply impossible. There never was a time and never can be when the value of gold as a commodity was separable from its value as money. Its value results from the demand for it not only as a commodity, but for money, and the greater demand has always been for money, for that is from everybody and for everything. To say that demand for gold for money does not contribute to its value, but only demand for it as a commodity, is as absurd as it would be to assert that the value of pig iron is determined entirely by the demand for it for making iron and not at all by the demand for making steel. The value of gold, like everything else, is determined by the total demand for it for all uses (chief among which is its use as money) on the one hand, and the supply on the other.

—A dispatch from Chicago announces the completion of negotiations for a tin plate trust. The Chicago promoters say the $50,000,000 of capital stock has already been oversubscribed. The organizers have figures showing that the output of the tin industry this year is 8,000,000 boxes, and on estimate places the product of next year at about 9,000,000. How brief is the period it takes to conform a tariff-fed infant into a club-wielding trust!—Utica Observer.

Spiritual Blessings and the Glories of the World to Come Compared with the "South Land" of This Life.

[Copyright, 1898.]

Taking for his text an oriental scene seldom noticed, Dr. Talmage discusses the supernatural advantages of religion for this world and the next; text, Joshua, XV, 19: "Thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs and the nether springs."

The city of Debir was the Boston of antiquity—a great place for brain and books. Caleb wanted it, and he offered his daughter Achsah as a prize to anyone who would capture that city. It was a strange thing for Caleb to do, and yet the man that could take the city would have, at any rate, two elements of manhood—bravery and patriotism. Besides, I do not think that Caleb was so foolish in offering his daughter to the conqueror of Debir as thousands in this city who seek alliances for their children with those who have large means without any reference to moral or mental acquirements. Of two evils I would rather marry for happiness by the length of the sword than by the length of the pocketbook. In one case there is sure to be one good element of character; in the other there may be none at all. With Caleb's daughter as a prize to fight for, Gen. Othniel rode into the battle. The gates of Debir were thundered into the dust, and the city of books lay at the feet of the conquerors. The work done, Othniel comes back to claim his bride. Having conquered the city, it is no great job to conquer the girl's heart, for however faint hearted a woman herself may be she always loves courage in a man. I never saw an exception to that.

The wedding festivity having gone by, Othniel and Achsah are about to go to their new home. However loudly the cymbals may clash and the laughter ring, parents are always sad when a fondly cherished daughter goes off to stay, and Achsah, the daughter of Caleb, knows that now is the time to ask almost anything she wants of her father. It seems that Caleb, the good old man, had given as a wedding present to his daughter a piece of land that was mountainous, and, sloping southward toward the deserts of Arabia, swept with some very hot winds. It was called "a south land." But Achsah wants an addition of property; she wants a piece of land that is well watered and fertile. Now it is no wonder that Caleb, standing amid the bridal party, his eyes so full of tears because she was going away that he could hardly see her at all, gives her more than she asks. She said to him: "Thou has given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs and the nether springs."

The fact is that as Caleb, the father, gave Achsah, the daughter, a south land, so God gives to us his world. I am very thankful He has given it to us. But I am like Achsah in the fact that I am not satisfied with the portion. Trees and flowers and grass and blue skies are very well in their places, but he who has nothing but this world for a portion has no portion at all. It is a mountainous land, sloping off toward the desert of sorrow, swept by fiery siroccos; it is "a south land," a poor portion for any man that tries to put his trust in it. What has been your experience? What has been the experience of every man of every woman, that has tried this world for a portion? Queen Elizabeth, amid the surroundings of pomp, is unhappy because the painter sketches too minutely the wrinkles on her face, and she indignantly cries out: "You must strike off my likeness without any shadows!" Hogarth, at the very height of his artistic triumph, is stung almost to death with chagrin because the painting he had dedicated to the king does not seem to be acceptable, for George II. cries out: "Who is this Hogarth? Take his trumpery out of my presence!"

Brinsley Sheridan thrilled the earth with his eloquence, but had for his last words: "I am absolutely undone." Walter Scott, fumbling around the inkstand, trying to write, says to his daughter: "Oh, take me back to my room! There is no rest for Sir Walter but in the grave!" Stephen Girard, the wealthiest man in his day, or at any rate only second in wealth, says: "I live the life of a galley slave. When I arise in the morning, my one effort is to work so hard that I can sleep when it gets to be night." Charles Lamb, applauded of all the world, in the very midst of his literary triumph says: "Do you remember, Bridget, when we used to laugh from the shilling gallery at the play? There are now no good plays to laugh at from the boxes." But why go so far as that? I need to go no farther than your street to find an illustration of what I am saying.

Pick me out ten successful worldlings—and you know what I mean by thoroughly successful worldlings—pick me out ten successful worldlings and you cannot find more than one that looks happy. Care drags him to business; care drags him back. Take your stand at two o'clock at the corner of the streets and see the agonized physiognomies. Your high officials, your bankers, your insurance men, your importers, your wholesalers and your retailers as a class—as a class, are they happy? No. Care dogs their steps, and making no appeal to God for help or comfort many of them are tossed every whither. How has it been with you, my hearer? Are you more contented in the house of 14 rooms than you were in the two rooms you had in a house when you started? Have you not had more care and worriment since you won that $50,000 than you did before? Some of the poorest men I have ever known have been those of great fortune. A man of small means may be put in great business straits, but the ghastliest of all embarrassments is that of the man who has large estates. The men who commit suicide because of monetary losses are those who cannot bear the burden any more because they have only $50,000 left.

Blessed be God, we have more advantages given us than we can really appreciate! We have spiritual blessings offered us in this world which I shall call the nether springs and glories in the world to come which I shall call the upper springs.

Where shall I find words enough threaded with light to set forth the pleasures of religion? David, unable to describe it in words, played it on a harp. Mrs. Hemans, not finding enough power in prose, sings that praise in a canto. Christopher Wren, unable to describe it in language, sprung it into the arches of St. Paul's. John Bunyan, unable to present it in ordinary phraseology, takes all the fascination of allegory. Handel, with ordinary music unable to reach the height of the theme, rouses it up in an oratorio. Oh, there is no life on earth so happy as a really Christian life! I do not mean a sham Christian life, but a real Christian life. Where there is a thorn there is a whole garland of roses. Where there is a groan there are three doxologies. Where there is one day of cloud there is a whole season of sunshine. Take the humblest Christian man that you know—angels of God canopy him with their white wings; the lightnings of Heaven are his armed allies; the Lord is his Shepherd, picking out for him green pastures by still waters. If he walk forth, Heaven is his bodyguard. If he lie down to sleep, ladders of light, angel blossoming, are let into his dreams. If he be thirsty, the potentates of Heaven are his cupbearers. If he sit down to food, his plain table blooms into the King's banquet. Men say: "Look at that odd fellow with the wornout coat." The angels of God cry: "Lift up your heads, ye everlasting gates, and let him come in!" Functionless people cry: "Get off my front steps!" The doorkeepers of Heaven cry: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom!" When he comes to die, though he may be carried out in a pine box to the potter's field, to that potter's field the chariots of Christ will come down, and the cavalcade will crowd all the boulevards of Heaven.

I bless Christ for the present satisfaction of religion. It makes a man all right with reference to the past; it makes a man all right with reference to the future. Oh, these nether springs of comfort! They are perennial. The foundation of God standeth sure having this seal: "The Lord knoweth them that are His." "The mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord, who hath mercy upon thee." Oh, cluster of diamonds set in burnished gold! Oh, nether springs of comfort bursting through all the valleys of trial and tribulation! When you see, you of the world, what satisfaction there is on earth in religion, do you not thirst after it as the daughter of Caleb thirsted after the water springs? It is no stagnant pond, scummed over with malaria, but springs of water leaping from the Rock of Ages! Take up one cup of that spring water and across the top of the chalice will float the delicate shadows of the Heavenly wall, the yellow of jasper, the green of emerald, the blue of sardonyx, the fire of jacinth.

I wish I could make you understand the joy religion is to some of us. It makes a man happy while he lives and glad when he dies. With two feet upon a chair and bursting with dropsies, I heard an old man in the poorhouse cry out: "Bless the Lord, oh, my soul!" I looked around and said: "What has this man got to thank God for?" It makes the lame man leap as a hare and the dumb sing. They say that the old Puritan religion is a joyless and joyless religion, but I remember reading of Dr. Goodwin, the celebrated Puritan, who in his last moment said: "Is this dying? Why, my bow abides in strength! I am swallowed up in God!" "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." Oh, you who have been trying to satisfy yourselves with the "south land" of this world, do you not feel that you would this morning like to have access to the nether springs of spiritual comfort? Would you not like to have Jesus Christ bend over your cradle and bless your table and heal your wounds and strew flowers of consolation all up and down the graves of your dead?

'Tis religion that can give Sweetest pleasures while we live,
'Tis religion can supply
Sweetest comfort when we die.

But I have something better to tell you, suggested by this text. It seems that old Father Caleb on the wedding day of his daughter wanted to make her just as happy as possible. Though Othniel was taking her away and his heart was almost broken because she was going, yet he gives her a "south land;" not only that, but the nether springs; not only that, but the upper springs, O God, my Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast given me a "south land" in this world and the nether springs of spiritual comfort in this world; but, more than all, I thank Thee for the upper springs in Heaven!

It is very fortunate that we cannot see Heaven until we get into it. O Christian man, if you could see what a place it is we would never get you back again to the office, or store, or shop, and the duties you ought to perform would go neglected! I am glad I shall not see that world until I enter it. Suppose we were allowed to go on an excursion into that good land with the idea of returning. When we got there and heard the song and looked at their raptured faces and mingled in the supernal society, we would cry out: "Let us stay! We are coming here anyhow. Why take the trouble of going back again to that old world? We are here now. Let us stay!" And it would take angelic violence to put us out of that world if once we got there, but as people who cannot afford to pay for an entertainment sometimes come around it and look through the door ajar, or through the openings in the fence, so we come and look through the crevices into that good land which God has provided for us. We can just catch a glimpse of it. We come near enough to hear the rumbling of the eternal orchestra, though not near enough to know who blows the cornet or who fingers the harp. My soul spreads out both wings and claps them in triumph at the thought of those upper springs. One of them breaks from beneath the throne. Another breaks forth from beneath the altar of the temple. Another at the door of "the house of many mansions." Upper springs of gladness! Upper springs of light! Upper springs of love! It is no fancy of mine. "The Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water."

O Saviour Divine, roll in upon our souls one of those anticipated raptures! Pour around the roots of the parched tongue one drop of that liquid life! Toss before our vision those fountains of God, rainbowed with eternal victory! Hear it! They are never sick there; not so much as a headache or twinge rheumatic or thrust neuralgic. The inhabitant never says: "I am sick." They are never tired there. Flight to farthest world is only the play of a holiday. They never sin there. It is as easy for them to be holy as it is for us to sin. They never die there. You might go through all the outskirts of the great city and find not one place where the ground was broken for a grave. The eyesight of the redeemed is never blurred with tears. There is health in every cheek. There is spring in every foot. There is majesty on every brow. There is joy in every heart. There is hosanna on every lip. How they must pity us as they look over and look down and see us and say: "Poor things away down in that world!" And when some Christian is hurled into a fatal accident they cry: "Good! He is coming!" And when we stand around the bier of some loved one whose strength is going away and we shake our heads foreboadingly they cry: "I'm glad he is worse. He has been down there long enough. There, he is dead! Come home! Come home!" Oh, if we could only get our ideas about that future world untwisted, our thought of transfer from here to there would be as pleasant to us as it was to a little child that was dying. She said: "Papa, when will I go home?" And he said: "To-day, Florence." "To-day? So soon? I am so glad!"

I wish I could stimulate you with these thoughts, O Christian man, to the highest possible exhilaration! The day of your deliverance is coming—is coming, rolling on with the shining wheels of the day, and the jet wheels of the night. Every thump of the heart is only a hammer stroke striking off another chain of clay. Better scour the deck and coil the rope, for harbor is only six miles away. Jesus will come down the Narrows to meet you. "Now is your salvation nearer than when you believed."

Man of the world, will you not to-day make a choice between these two portions, between the "south land" of this world, which slopes to the desert, and this glorious land which the Father offers thee, running with eternal water courses? Why let your tongue be consumed of thirst when there are the nether springs and the upper springs—comfort here and glory hereafter?

You and I need something better than this world can give us. The fact is that it cannot give us anything after awhile. It is a changing world. Do you know that even the mountains on the back of a thousand streams are leaping into the valley? The Alleghenies are dying. The dews with crystalline mallet are hammering away the rocks. Frosts and showers and lightnings are sculpturing Mount Washington and the Catskills. Niagara every year is digging for itself a quicker plunge. The sea all around the earth on its shifting shores is making mighty changes in bar and bay and frith and promontory. Some of the old seacoasts are midland now. Off Nantucket, eight feet below low-water mark, are found now the stumps of trees, showing that the waves are conquering the land. Parts of Nova Scotia are sinking. Ships to-day sail over what, only a little while ago, was solid ground. Near the mouth of the St. Croix river is an island which, in the movements of the earth, is slowly but certainly rotating. All the face of the earth is changing—changing. In 1831 an island springs up in the Mediterranean sea. In 1866 another island comes up under the observation of the American consul as he looks off from the beach. The earth all the time changing, the columns of a temple near Ilizoli show that the water has risen nine feet above the place it was when these columns were put down. Changing! Our Colorado river, once vaster than the Mississippi, flowing through the great American desert, which was then the Eden of luxuriance, has now dwindled to a small stream creeping down through a gorge. The earth itself, that was once vapor, afterward water—nothing but water—afterward molten rock, cooling off through the ages until plants might live and animals might live and men might live, changing all the while, now crumbling, now breaking off. The sun, burning down gradually in its socket. Changing, changing, an intimation of the last great change to come over the world even infused into the mind of the heathen who has never seen the Bible:

PROGRESSIVE SENTENCES.

I do not care about garden parties, although receiving numberless invitations periodically.

I am not very sorry Walter tumbled headlong, screaming alarmingly unutterable maledictions.

"I go," was that hero's answer, dashing forwards, Napoleon's battalions immediately surrendering.

I go ten miles every Monday, through pleasant woodlands, oftentimes judiciously accompanying excursionists mountaineering.

I am sad when fancy brings mocking memories returning; detestably importunate, occasionally disappointing, unquestionably disembarrassing, unreasonableness, conscientiousness.

I do not feel slaru, having happily overcome jaundiced prejudice's innumerable traduements, determinately unrestrainable, notwithstanding unextinguishable misinterpretation, characteristically Intercommunications' incomprehensibleness.—Golden Days.

FACTS FOR A SCIENTIST.

At its present rate of combustion it is thought the sun will last from 7,000,000 to 15,000,000 years before burning itself out.

Heretofore it has been possible to dissolve gold only in a mixture of strong acids. In Liebig's Annalen der Chemie Prof. Zeigmondy now describes a way he has discovered of dissolving gold in distilled water.

The poison of bees has heretofore been supposed to be formic acid. The German chemist Langer has found, however, by gathering the poison of 135,000 bees and subjecting it to analysis and experiments that though formic acid is present, the poisonous principle is an alkaloid.

H. Kessler has determined that the best results in flashlight photography are obtained by using a mixture of two parts of persulphate of potash to one part of magnesium, in this case the combustion occupying one-thirtieth of a second, and the amount of light and smoke being about the same as the permanganate mixture.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

About 14,000 miles of electric tramways have now been built in this country, giving employment to about 100,000 persons.

The Swiss telegraph business is a branch of the post, telegraph and railway department, and any post office will receive or deliver prepaid telegrams.

A very useful attachment for clocks is an electric battery with a push-button which can be fastened to the bedstead. If desirous of knowing the time in a dark room, pressure on the button will illuminate the dial.

All cable lines in Kansas City are to be made into electric lines. This is the avowed policy of the Chicago stockholders of the Metropolitan street railway. P. D. Armour and Norman B. Ream, the directors of the Metropolitan company, have instructed the operating department to draw plans and estimates for this rebuilding.

USEFUL INVENTIONS.

A Texan has patented a billiard cue which is chambered at the end and fitted with chalk, to be discharged through a small opening to the face of the cue as each shot is made.

A handy hitching post has a spring drum inserted in the top, on which is wound a cord with a snap hook at the outer end for attachment to the bridle, the spring pulling the rope into the post when not in use.

A westerner has designed a wagon which will improve the roads instead of cutting them up as it passes along, the front pair of wheels running on a wider track than the rear ones and all four wheels having broad, flat tires.

An Ohio man has patented an animal trap which sets itself automatically and kills the animals as fast as caught, a tilting platform being arranged over a water receptacle, with bait attached to the platform, the rear bent tipping the cover and falling into the water when he reaches the bait.

DANGEROUS PROBING.

When It Came to Prying Into Family Secrets She Didn't Want to Be Insured.

She had concluded to take out a life insurance policy and appeared before the examining physician.

"What's your name?" he asked in his crisp business way, and she looked indignant as she answered.

"Age?"

"I didn't come here to answer impertinent questions, sir. I came to be insured."

"But we must know your age in order to fix the rate."

"What rate?"

"The amount you must pay annually for being insured."

"Thirty-three, then," she snapped.

"You must be accurate or it will invalidate the policy."

"Forty; but I must say that I never heard such impudence."

"Weight?"

"I don't know. Neither does anyone else, just as though that would make and difference."

"Married or single?"

"Single, thank heaven! Not but what I've had plenty of chan—"

"Of course. Any insanity in your family?"

"Sir!" and she tried her best to congeal him with a look.

"I guess that you don't want to be insured."

"And you guessed it right the first time. I don't propose to be a family encyclopedia for you or any other gossip monger," and she flounced out with a vigor that made the doctor think that she was a pretty good subject after all.—Detroit Free Press.

The "American Boy" Battleship.

Every patriotic American loves the school boy. CONSULTING A WOMAN.

Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Inspires Confidence and Hope.

Examination by a male physician is a hard trial to a delicately organized woman.

She puts it off as long as she dare, and is only driven to it by fear of cancer, polypus, or some dreadful fill.

Most frequently such a woman leaves a physician's office where she has undergone a critical examination with outspoken sick more or less, of discouragement.

This condition of the mind destroys the effect of advice; and she grows worse rather than better. In consulting Mrs. Pinkham no hesitation need be felt, the story is told to a woman and is wholly confidential. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., she offers sick women her advice without charge.

Her intimate knowledge of women's troubles makes her letter of advice a wellspring of hope, and her wide experience and skill point the way to health.

"I suffered with ovarian trouble for seven years, and no doctor knew what was the matter with me. I had spells which would last for two days or more. I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken seven bottles of it, and am entirely cured."—Mrs. John Foreman, 26 N. Woodberry Ave., Baltimore, Md.

Out of 100 men from Lawrence county who enlisted in the army but one, John W. Jones, a private in Company L. First Kentucky, now in Porto Rico, has died.

J. A. Sebree, a well known tobacco buyer of Owen county, was arrested at Gratz charged with counterfeiting. He bears a good reputation and his friends will not believe him guilty.

Mr. J. W. Showalter, of Georgetown, is in New York to meet Janowski, the champion of France in a chess match, which begins at the Manhattan Chess Club Saturday. The match is for $1,000.

There is great excitement at Monday's Landing in Woodford county, over the disappearance of Cabel Fielding, a well-known farmer. He was last seen on Sunday evening about dark near the river. This morning his hat was found floating in the river several miles below, and grave fears are felt that he fell in the river and was drowned.

In Harlan county, at the Harlan court house, Henry Gross shot and killed Frank Renfro. Renfro rode into town on horseback. He saw Gross standing talking to some men dismounted and fired twice at Gross with a double-barreled shotgun, but missed. Gross opened fire with a 44-caliber Colt. The first ball struck Renfro in the breast, killing him instantly. Gross killed Renfro's brother in Harlin county not long since and trouble was over the killing, over which bad feeling had existed ever since.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

It had been hoped by all classes of people that the fair name of Grant county would not be dragged in the dust, and disgraced by any acts of lawlessness as a result of the Free Turnpike election. But it was not to be. On Saturday night a mob cut down all of the gatee on the Owen Line Turnpike road, and a part of the gates on the Stewartsville and Chipman Road. Earlier in the week, the gates were cut off of the Jonesville and Elliston road and the Laton's Chapel and Fork Lick road. On Monday night, the gate near J. P. Brown's on the Dry Ridge and Downingsville road was cut down. This was all done, notwithstanding the fact that the Court was doing all in its power to get the gates off of the roads just as soon as possible. Who composed these mobs of lawless raiders, where they came from, or where they went, is not known. If captured and convicted they will surely be sent to the penitentiary for a term of years.

The Grant County Fiscal Court convened Wednesday morning for the purpose of acquiring the Turnpike roads in Grant county by purchase, gift or lease. The first road dealt with, was the Williamstown and Owen Line Turnpike road. It is more than 13 miles long and has over twenty thousand dollars of capital. The Court and the board of directors soon got together, the county agreeing to pay the stockholders fifty cents on the dollar for their stock amounting to $5,400. The company made the county a deed for the road, including three good gate houses and all of their improvements. The price paid is a very reasonable one. The Court figured that a road that was kept in good condition and paid six per cent interest, was worth par and so on down in proportion. A road that no more than keeps itself up,is not worth anything and will be settled for in proportion.

Sheriff Beall brought a 3 pound, 13 ounce turhip to this office yesterday. It came out of his garden. Who can turn up a larger turnip?

The social given at the Union school house, Nov. 19, for the benefit of Beaver Lick Baptist church, (col.) was quite a success. Therefore be it.

Resolved, That we, the members of the Hopewell Baptist church, extend our most hearty thanks to the whites for their contributions and also to the colored.

Resolved, That we give a list of those who donated. Whites: Mrs. Sallie Meyers, chicken; Mrs. Charles Baker, chicken; Mrs John Garrison, pickles; Mrs. L. H. Voshell, chicken; Mrs. Curb Crisler. 10 cents; Mrs. Ada Conner, 50 cents; Mrs. M. Hadley, Mrs. Perry Utz, Mrs. E. Blankenbecker, Mrs. James Huey, Mrs. E. Utz, each, a chicken; Mrs. Bob Conner, 10 cents; Miss N. Bristow, cake; Miss Emma Stephens, 10 cents; Mr. N. Bristow, 5 cents; Mrs. Gibson, 10 cents; Mr. J.L. Frazier, 25 cents; Mrs. Kennedy, cake; Mr. Sam Houston, 10 cents; Mr. M. Houston, 5 cents; Miss Burkett, pickles.

Colored—Miss Matilda Frazier, chicken; Mrs. Amanda Frazier, cake; Miss Mat Baker, milk and butter; Mrs. Ora Sleet, cake; Mrs. Vina Clark, grapes; Miss Lula Baker, 15 cents; Miss Emma Baker, 25 cents; Miss Alice Sleet, cake; Wm. Baker, 1 pound candy; G. L. Baker, 1 pound candy; Chas. Sleet, 1 pound candy; Jack Piatt, 10 cents; Miss Bertha Jackson, cake; Mrs. Newton Johnson, pies; Miss Mary Johnson, $1.

VOL. XXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1898. NO. 6.

If this country captured the Philippines, why buy them of Spain?

LOUISVILLE has arranged to give the Legion boys a rousing reception upon their arrival home from the war with Spain.

SEVERAL of the Senatorial aspirants in the State of New York are not willing to accept Depew as the only can on the dump.

THE popular motto of this country, "millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute," is to become a back number, it seems.

THE "head hunters" are one of the most energetic tribes in the Philippines, and a fellow is apt to lose his head in "business" transactions with them.

WHEN the Owenton papers are short on news they devote considerable space to reminding their delinquent subscribers of their dire needs of the money due them.

SOME of the counties were slow about sending into the State commissioners their canvass of the last election, but no charges of wrong were made against the derelict officers.

THE antipathy between the Bradley and McKinley factions in this State will not down, and Adjutant General Collier has already boasted how the Bradley faction intends to pull for Roosevelt in 1900.

GOV. BRADLEY is an anti-expansionist. He thinks this country has got enough on her hands in looking after the advancement of the moral and intellectual advancement of a very large per cent. of her citizens.

THE "head hunters" and "missing links," which will belong to the United States upon the acquisition of the Philippine islands, will be two classes of very desirable population to a country that cannot endure the Chinese.

THE Corbett-Sharkey fight was a fake, and Corbett's name is Dennis now and for all time to come. Prize fighting is a brutal calling, but when a pugilist acts as it is claimed Corbett did, at the Lenox Club mill, last week, he is below a brute.

THE long list of delinquent taxpayers advertised in the Courier-Journal indicates that a great many of Louisville's citizens are very slow about appearing at the captain's desk to pay their taxes. There is no compromise for them, however.

THOSE who pretend to have inside information say the President, in his forthcoming message, will recommend that the standing army be increased to one hundred thousand men. They will be needed if his annexation schemes are to be sustained.

THE Chicago bank clerks are opposed to so many holidays during the year. They assign as their reason that all the business houses in the city, except the banks, are open a good part of every holiday, and the bank clerks are required to perform two days' work the following day.

MR. CARNEGIE has very strong opinions on the question of annexation, and they are in opposition to those supposed to be entertained by the President, upon whom the iron king called a few days since, to protest against Philippine annexation, which he opposes as detrimental to the business interests of this country.

HUNGER and starvation are still abroad in Cuba, and the island is dominated by Spain, although it was supposed, several months since, that Uncle Sam had subdued the Spanish and relieved them of the control of the island. If Spain was as slow getting her soldiers to Cuba as she is in removing them it is not surprising that she could not whip the Insurgents.

KENTUCKY is one of the largest contributors to Uncle Sam's Internal Revenue Fund, Illinois and New York being the only States that outclass her in that particular. Kentucky's contribution for the fiscal year ending June 30th last, was in round numbers $18,000,000, one half of which was paid by the Fifth Internal Revenue District. Kentucky is second in the manufacturing of tobacco, her last year's product being 43,000,000 pounds, Missouri being the only State that leads her in that industry, her amount being 63,000,000 pounds.

President McKinley has under advisement a number of suggestions in regard to the establishment of a legal holiday on which the people of the United States can properly celebrate the inauguration of the new policy of American expansion. The President has been advised also to recommend that July 17 of every year be set apart as a national holiday in commemoration of the surrender of Santiago, but the idea does not meet with favor, as the date is too near Independence Day.—Washington telegram to the Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE New York World has just published a list of all the pools and combinations that are endeavoring to dominate over modern civilization, on both sides of the ocean. There are 141 already actively doing business and five more on paper, and two soon to be perfected. The trusts now forming are to have a nominal capital of $240,000,000, a very tidy little sum to be sure. The "World" estimates the combined capital of all trusts at about two and one quarter billions of dollars, a sum so gigantic that the average newspaper reader can have no adequate conception of its vastness.

THE Carroll county tobacco growers are in earnest in their opposition to the tobacco combine, and at their meeting, a few days since, they sprung a scheme which, if successfully developed, will be a great assistance in the fight against the trust. The meeting appointed committees to wait on the retail handlers of manufactured tobacco through the county, and solicit their cooperation by a refusal, on their part, to keep for sale any of the tobacco manufactured by the combine. If the retail dealers in manufactured tobacco will entertain such a proposition and act in good faith with the farmers, they will prove a most formidable element of opposition in the struggle now about to be inaugurated, and their interest being identical with that of the farmers there is but little doubt but what their assistance can be readily obtained throughout the tobacco producing district.

HARRY JOHNSON DEAD.

[Courier Journal]

A telegram received from the Secretary of War yesterday by Mrs. M. E. Johnson, of 1039 Fourth avenue, officially confirmed the news of the death in San Juan of Harry Pinkney Johnson, the last member of the Louisville Legion to fall a victim to disease in foreign service. Mr. Johnson died in the hospital, and as his illness was acute gastritis and it was very brief. His mother was not apprised of his sickness and the first news of his death came in a dispatch to the Courier-Journal. His death occurred November 1.

Harry Johnson was a member of Company E. He enlisted last spring and left with the regiment full of military ardor and hopeful of an opportunity to meet his country's enemies in battle. He was enthusiastic when the Legion was ordered to Porto Rico and invariably spoke in the most cheerful and hopeful manner in his letters to his mother. He was proud of the Legion, proud of his company and his officers, particularly Capt. Colston. In none of his letters was there a word of repining, though the hardships of the service had weakened his health and greatly reduced him in flesh.

The dead man was 34 years old. He was the son of the late Thomas Pinkney Johnson, a prominent citizen of Boone county. His mother, Mrs. M. E Johnson, moved here with her family many years ago and they have resided here ever since. She is living with one daughter, Miss Louise, at 1037 Fourth avenue.

The body will be brought home later by the War Department and will be buried in Big Bone cemetery.

The following is an extract from a letter of one of the comrades of young Johnson:

"On Oct. 28th, Harry was taken to the hospital at Cagua with malarial fever complicated with stomach trouble. He seemed to improve for awhile, and when we moved to Caycy, a distance of 10 miles on Oct. 31st, he stood the trip well, riding in the ambulance. During the night he suffered quite a little with acute gastritis. I sat up with him until hallpast 3 o'clock, and at that time left him resting easy. At 4:30 my assistant awoke me, stating that Harry was sitting up. I hastened to him but found he had expired. He was buried the same afternoon at 5 o'clock, Nov. 1, in the soldiers' part of the cemetery at this place. Major Castleman read the burial service, and in a mahogany coffin, wrapped in the stars and stripes, our comrade was laid to rest.

"Of all our sick men he was the most patient and uncomplaining. Quiet and gentlemanly during his career as a soldier, he will be sadly missed by his company. He was a member of Calvary Episcopal Church, of Louisville, was a Mason and belonged to other benevolent orders."

At the meeting Monday the Farmers were ripe for starting a tobacco manufactory at this place and each of them indicated they would take stock.

Quite a number of Farmers met at the court-house Monday to discuss the interest of the tobacco growers as against the various organizations which have combined to control the market of leaf tobacco of the country. They discussed the situation, but decided on account of the State meeting being postponed until December 5th, to await action until next Monday.

Anent the throwing out of the Bracken county precinct because the officers of the election went to dinner, the Cynthiana Democrat reminds the Republicans that two years ago they threw out two precincts in Boyd county that gave LaRue Thomas, Democrat, over 200 majority. CROP AND STOCK.

R. A. Johnson, of Somerset, had a mule to die which he had worked regularly for 28 years.

A mule that was foaled the night President Lincoln was assassinated died near Mt. Olivet last week, aged 33½ years.

About fifty mules were on the market at Richmond Nov. 14. Large mules brought from $75 to $100; small ones from $40 to $60, sucklings from $15 to $25.

It is said that wheat, corn, potatoes and hay will take the place of cotton in many sections of the South next year, as cotton does not pay the cost of production.

The crop of wheat planted this fall in Hardin county is decidedly the largest ever sown in the history of the county. A number of farmers have determined to plant largely in tobacco.

H. B. Crouch has bought twenty crops of new tobacco, of which he has received thirteen. The prices paid were 9½ cents for the best and 1 cent for lowest grades.—Carrollton News.

In each of the last seven decades the average yield of wheat per acre in France has shown an increase over that of any former years, and it is now probably higher than in any other country.

It is reported from Caracas that samples of Venezuelan Tobacco sent to New York have been thought of so highly that a start is to be made with the exportation of Leaf. The cultivation of the plant will be extended on a large scale.

Samples of Tobacco raised in Upper Galilee have reached London, and seem to point to the development of a profitable source of trade by the newly settled Jewish planters and agriculturists there. Tobacco planting is, however, only in the experimental stage.

Jas. Clark, owner of Camp Hamilton, has received about $4,000 for the use of and the damage to his property. The damage amounted to about $2,200. The land used for the site of the hospital and division headquarters, owned by Major P. P. Johnson was given free.

Iowa's corn crop is but little less than 270,000,000 bushels—enough to give every man, woman and child in the country a great, big barrel, full to overflowing, and then there would be enough left to give everybody two pecks more. The market value of this corn, at the low price of 25 cents a bushel, is $67,500,000.

Peaches and fruits of all kinds are going into winter quarters in excellent shape. Those who have been in the business many years say the peach buds have been held back wonderfully well by the fall weather, and prospects, at this time of the year, for a large crop of this lucious fruit next summer are much brighter than usual.—Trimble News.

There were about 300 cattle on sale Monday and probably two-thirds of them changed hands. A few extra good feeders brought 4¼ cents, but 4 cents was the ruling price. Some went as low as 3½, however. Heifers were slow at 3 to 3½ cents. Butcher stuff was not much in demand, but some sold as high as 3¾ cents. The mule and horse market was dull.—Stanford Journal.

The new crop of burley that has reached this market so far has been most disappointing. The tobacco is thin, with no gum, dingy in appearance, lifeless, and in truth very undesirable for filler purposes. Not a single hogshead of colory or bright has been seen on the market so far this season. Generally, if any brights are in the crop, they appear among the offerings in the shape of trashes or low grades, but this season we have no indication coming from this quarter that brights are plentiful, or even in moderate supply in the '98 crop of burley.—Louisville Weed.

The sweet potato is coming to be considered a staple forage crop in the South. In Louisiana the practice of feeding this root to stock was only comparatively recently introduced by Western farmers, who demonstrated to the native farmers its great superiority over corn as a feed for cattle, horses, mules, hogs—in fact everything alive on the farm. On the rich bottom lands of the South, the sweet potato yields a maximum crop—two or three hundred bushels per acre—and with a minimum of labor expended. The work is principally planting and harvesting.

EUROPE consumed in 1897 from Africa, British India and Ceylon 1,763,680 pounds of ivory. Practically all of this passed through the markets of London, Liverpool and Antwerp. The ivory imported at Antwerp came from Congo Free State. The number of animals killed to furnish this supply is estimated to have been 88,185.

NEARLY one-third of the members of the next house will be men who are not now servinging congress, the number of changes being 110, but some of the new representatives have had legislative experience in former congresses. A REAL Spaniard, of ancient lineage, and thoroughly conversant with both the Castilian and the English tongues, will be reckoned among the republicans of the next house. He is no other than Delegate-elect Pedro Perea, of Bernalillo, N. THEY allow women to wear male attire in France, but they are taxed for the privilege. The French government charges women $10 to $12.50 per year for wearing the trousers. This however, does not give every woman who is willing to pay the tax a right to wear such garments. The government confers the right as a tribute to great merit, and makes it in fact, a sort of decoration given to women, as the ribbon of the legion of honor is given to men.

THE most decorated man in Europe probably is Count August of Eulenberg, the marshal of the German court, who has 68 decorations. This record was not even equaled by the late Prince Bismarck, who had only 54 decorations. Count von Moltke, another much decorated man, had 44. Among living men, Gen. von Hahnke comes after Count August of Eulenberg, with a total of 52 decorations. He is followed by Prince Albrecht of Prussia, who has 44.

MRS. WILLIAM ASTOR has a collection of diamonds worth a fortune. But the finest diamond in the world belongs, it is said, to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. It is a tiny affair, weighing one karat, yet it cost her husband $5,000. As the value of a diamond increases in an increasing ratio with its weight, up to a moderate size, the Vanderbilt brilliant, if as large as the Koh-i-Noor (102¼ karats) would be worth about $3,800,000. Mrs. Vanderbilt's marvelous gem came from Sombulpoor or Golconda.

A MEDICAL scientist is authority for the statement that children and old people especially suffer from a lack of lime in the system. Persons who habitually drink soft water, while they may enjoy immunity from certain of the ills of life, expose themselves to others perhaps quite as much to be avoided. Hard water helps the teeth and the bones by furnishing lime, which is necessary to health, growth and development. Old persons who drink but little lose their teeth more quickly than those who take a reasonable amount of drinking water.

Isidor Straus announced the foregoing at the meeting of the Hebrew Educational Alliance at Temple Emanu El, Fifth avenue. THE BALDWIN HOTEL FIRE.

The Loss Will Be $1,500,000 on Which There Was Not Over $150,000 Insurance at the Outside.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—At 3:28 Wednesday morning the Baldwin hotel caught fire, and it was entirely destroyed. There were 800 people, guests and employes, in the hotel when the fire broke out, and at first a number of these people were thought to have lost their lives. J. W. White is one of the victims, but before he gave up his life the gallant fellow saved the lives of three women.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—A careful estimate of the loss by the Baldwin hotel fire places the total at $1,500,000, on which at the outside there was not over $150,000 insurance. The insurance, $50,000 carried on the hotel, was ridiculously small. The reason for this lay in the high rate charged and the fact that the underwriters did not care to carry a large line on such a building, built of wood and brick, with no brick dividing the wall and but one outside wall of brick. The insurance on the stocks of goods in the burned structure and the store fittings amounts to $72,250. Geo. A. Moss carried $22,800; Hyman & Myers, $30,500; Isaac Grant, drug store, $5,000; J. J. Groom, $3,000; M. A. Gunst & Co., $10,000; J. Edding, $3,500, and smaller sums were carried by other tenants. The smoke and water damaged the adjoining buildings $20,000 so that $150,000 will cover the insurance loss. In the list of missing persons the two chambermaids and Tate Pryor have been accounted for. Mrs. Andrews and two children, guests at the hotel, have not been seen since the fire, and their names have been added to the list of missing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—The body of J. M. Leighthead, purser of steamer City of Sydney, previously reported missing, was recovered from the ruins of the Baldwin hotel Thursday.

The body of Tate Pryor, the missing sheet writer for J. J. Carroll, racing bookmaker, was found in the ruins of the Baldwin hotel Thursday evening. This makes the list of victims four so far as known.

ON THE WAY TO HONOLULU.

The Battle Ships Oregon and Iowa Sailed From Rio de Janeiro for Montevideo Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The battle ships Oregon and Iowa have resumed their long cruise to Honolulu. Capt. Barker, commanding the Oregon, and the senior officer of the expedition, has notified the navy department that his little squadron sailed on last Saturday from Rio de Janeiro for Montevideo, where another stop will be made for coal. After leaving that port the ships will head for Punta Arenas, in the Straits of Magellan, almost at the extremity of South America, which will mark the accomplishment of about one-half of their voyage, unless they are ordered at Honolulu to proceed to Manila. Only a brief reference is made officially to the ceremonies at Rio Janeiro attending the celebration of the anniversary of the creation of the Brazilian government, but it is known that the visit of our battle ships to the Brazilian capital made the most happy impression on the government and people of the great republic, and will tend to cultivate the fraternal relations now existing between the United States and Brazil.

Mrs. Pullman's Allowance.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—By the order of the probate court, Mrs. Hattie S. Pullman, widow of George M. Pullman, will receive $9,000 per month on account of her share of the estate. This amount is declared to be materially less than the actual income accruing to her from her division of the property left by the palace car magnate. In addition to the monthly payment authorized by the court, the account of the executors of the estate, showing that $88,734 had already been paid to Mrs. Pullman, was approved by Judge Kohlsaat.

ROBBED A MISSOURI BANK.

It is Not Yet Known How Much Booty Was Secured—The Night Watchman Was Roughly Handled.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 25.—At Elsberry, Mo., 68 miles north of here on the St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern railroad, robbers made a desperate attempt to rob the Lincoln County bank. It is not known how much, if anything, they obtained. As the result of rough treatment received from the robbers, John Wiseman Waters, the night watchman of the town, who is 60 years old, may die. He was found at an early hour Wednesday bound and gagged lying in the open air, where he had been left by the robbers. He was badly frozen. When President F. E. Harvey arrived at the bank Wednesday morning he found the vault doors wide open. The safe inside, containing $10,000, was closed and he was unable to open it. An expert safe opener was sent from here at the request of the bank officials, but Wednesday evening he sent back for help, saying that he was unable to open the safe doors. Until this is done the bank officials will be unable to state whether they have lost anything or not. The bank was obliged to close for the day, but will reopen Friday after the Thanksgiving holiday.

The Funds Found Intact.

ELLSBERRY, Mo., Nov. 25.—The safe of the Lincoln county bank, which robbers attempted to enter Wednesday was opened by experts Thursday and the funds of the bank found to be intact. The bank reopened for business Friday.

No one was seriously hurt, although some of the crew asleep forward had narrow escapes from drowning.

AN ADMIRER OF WOMEN.

A Matrimonial Repeater Who Got More Enamored with Each Subsequent Wife.

I was riding along the road leading across Hurricane gap, in the Pine mountain range, thinking of the peculiar people who lived in these fastnesses, when I was startled by a voice up the hillside calling to me to come up and give somebody a lift. I had no idea who owned the voice, but whoever it was was in trouble, and I responded and found a man of 60 or more caught by the foot under a fallen tree and unable to get away. He wasn't hurt, and I soon had him on his feet, and he insisted on my stopping further down the mountain and taking dinner with him. He lived in a well-kept cabin with his daughter, and after dinner we sat in the shade of a tree in the yard and he told me about himself.

"Air you married?" he asked, after he told me he was a widower.

"No, but I hope to be some day," I answered, quite sincerely.

"You ought to be; every man ought to be; a man that ain't ain't showin' a right feelin' to'ds what the Lord's done fer him, thar ain't nothin' on the face uv God's green earth is a patchin' to a woman, I don't keer what kind she is."

"You're hale and hearty yet," I said, "and I don't see why you don't take some of your own advice."

"Don't crowd the mourners, mister," he said, waving his hand as if warding off my attack. "Don't you crowd the mourners. I'm figgerin on sevor'l this very minute, and I ain't quite shore yit which one to pick. I've been married four times, and every time my notion uv women has got so much higher that I'll be derned ef I don't kinder look forrerd to losin' a wife jist fer the satisfaction uv gittin' another one."

The idea was so entirely new that I was overcome by it.—Washington Star.

Meanness Personified.

"Did I understand you to say that dress you admired so much to-day was a dream?" inquired Mr. Smokehart.

"Yes," answered his wife hopefully.

"Well," he proceeded very kindly, "you keep your mind on it when you are to sleep to-night and maybe you will dream one of your own."—Washington Star.

"OUR WAR IN TWO HEMISPHERES"

BEING

A HISTORY OF THE WAR WITH SPAIN

by Albert Shaw (editor of the American Monthly Review of Reviews), and many other notable contributors of special chapters.

Over 1,200 pages, over half a thousand portraits and other illustrations. The first edition of this book is printed on the finest enameled paper, and bound beautifully in half morocco, in three large volumes.

Every American, and especially every American who had a relative or friends "at the front," will wish to own this work. It is far more than the mere story of the fighting. It gives a comprehensive account of the condition of Cuba and of Spain before and after the war, of both the outer and hidden causes of the war, and in the field, with carrying on the struggle. It is truthful, well informed, and complete, and forms an ultimate picture of the United States at this critical character sketches, too, by special writers who know their subjects, of Dewey, McKinley and War Presidents, and other notable figures of the war. The naval machine guns, and equipments, and many other special subjects are treated in separate chapters by expert military writers. Dr Shaw (who is the author of "Municipal Government in Great Britain" and other important books) has had the benefit of the official reports and documents issued by the Government, and the history is as authentic as possible. It should stand on the shelves of every American library.

Its hundreds of portraits, maps, scenes in Spain, Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines, are handsomely printed and are selected for their real value rather than for mere ornament. Many striking cartoons are reproduced from Spanish and French papers, showing what the Spanish thought of us, and how they believed they were beating us until the very end.

The history is being published by the Review of Reviews Co., which also publishes the American Monthly Review of Reviews, the monthly magazine. Lawyers, doctors, teachers, clergymen, business men, especially in the country, progressive farmers, and up-to-date people generally rely on this magazine to give them the timely news of the world; it also gives the best that is in the other important magazines all over the world. Its regular subscription price is $2.50 per year.

This edition of the history consists of three magnificent volumes, such as generally are sold for $5 or more each. We make for this month and the next only, a special

SPAIN ACCEPTS.

We Get Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines Under Protest.

Also a Strong Island in the Caroline Group and the Right to Lay Cables on Any of These Islands or Any of the Ladrones.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—It is stated on the best authority that Spain accepts the $20,000,000 for the cession of the Philippine islands, but under protest. The formal signing of the papers in which Spain yields to the American demands will occur on Monday. It is understood here that the Americans have proposed to the Spaniards a tariff for revenue only in the Philippines. Spain wanted special trade privileges. The proposition of the Americans means an open door for all in the Philippines, as it puts all nations on an equal footing so far as trade is concerned.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A Central News dispatch from Madrid says that Senor Montero Rios, chairman of the Spanish peace commission, has informed the government that the Americans include possession of the Sooloo Archipelago in their demands.

The Sooloo, or Sulu, Archipelago, which the Americans are said to have included in their demand on Spain, lies between Borneo and Mindanao, of the Philippine group. It would be of great strategic value in naval operations, and affords opportunities for guarding the southern islands of the Philippine group, that could not otherwise be had.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—The result of the peace negotiations between Spain and the United States will probably be known Monday, when the time limit of the ultimatum delivered by the Americans expires.

Negotiations have been carried on through written communications on the part of both sides. Senor Rios has made a number of counter proposals to the Americans. These are said to be about as follows:

1. Spain will relinquish sovereignty over Cuba and cede Porto Rico and the other islands of the Spanish West Indies, the whole of the Ladrone islands and the whole of the Philippine islands for $30,000,000.

2. Spain will cede a strong island in the Caroline group, give the United States the right to lay cables on any of those islands or any of the Ladrones.

3. Spain will relinquish sovereignty over Cuba, cede the Philippines, Porto Rico and other West Indian islands, and Guam as indemnity for the war expenses of the United States, and the losses to American citizens, and the two countries shall agree to submit to arbitration what debts and obligations of a colonial character ought to be assumed by the receiving country.

The old bluff of a possibility of a cessation of negotiations has also been conveyed, but it will be in vain. The prospects are that all of the counter proposals will be answered Saturday, as the American commissioners have received further instructions from Washington covering the new points. It is intimated that all of the proposals will be rejected, and that the Americans will stick to their demands as formulated in the ultimatum of last Monday.

The belief is general that the Spaniards will accept the situation with the best grace possible.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says:

The cabinet has concluded that the wisest policy is to accept the American terms, leaving to the Spanish commissioners full power to secure the best possible indemnity and to place on record, if the American commissioners will permit, a protest against the American interpretation of the protocol as affecting the Philippines and against the peace conditions generally.

"The decision of the cabinet is approved in political and financial circles. I understand however, that the deliberations of the ministers were very protracted. Senor Sagasta, Duke Almodovar de Rio and Senor Puigcerver had great difficulty in inducing some of their colleagues to accept the small indemnity."

The Storm at Cape May.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Nov. 28.—The northwest snowstorm which has prevailed along the coast since Saturday, accompanied by a wind blowing at the rate of about 40 miles an hour, did no damage on the beach front, but on the Delaware bay shore destroyed a large number of fish pounds and piers. The telephone, telegraph, electric light and fire alarm wires are down and Sunday night the town streets were in darkness.

A Tragedy in Little Rock.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 26.—In North Little Rock Friday morning M. B. Lane, a section foreman, while in a drunken frenzy emptied both barrels of a gun loaded with buckshot into his wife's face, killing her instantly. The woman's son, V. N. Wright, seized the gun and broke it over the murderer's head, crushing the skull. The Lanes came from Evansville two years ago.

A duel was fought in Paris Sunday between Maxime Dreyfus and M. Lepic, a journalist. Neither was injured.

A BLIZZARD IN NEW YORK.

It Caused Widespread Destruction and Death by Its Icy Breath—Many Vessels Stuck.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—A storm began here with a soft, sleety snow on Saturday noon, and increased as the day wore on, with heavier snowfall. The wind blew a gale at midnight.

There was a slight abatement of the wind Sunday morning but the snow still fell and drifted high and the temperature dropped rapidly. At 10 o. clock there was a breaking away in the west, and finally the storm ceased altogether and the severest blizzard since the memorable one of March, 1888, came to an end. The wind blew at the rate of 59 to 60 miles an hour during the height of the storm.

With the brightening of the skies in this city Sunday morning came an increase in the velocity of the wind and the loose dry snow was sent swirling and eddying everywhere. Nearly a foot of snow had fallen, but in places it had drifted to four and five feet.

The terrific blow of Saturday night did much damage to the small shipping in New York harbor. It is reported Sunday night that several tugboats belonging to the Kingston Towing Co., together with a large number of canalboats, were sunk up the river by the force of the gale. The shores of the Hudson are littered with wreckage.

There were a number of casualties, including several deaths from exposure. John Martin was found in the park at Tenth street and Avenue B and taken to Bellevue hospital. Both his legs and hands were badly frozen. He had lain down on a bench to die, he said. He had had nothing to eat for several days.

An unknown woman was found unconscious in a snow drift at 78th street and Avenue A. She was removed to the Presbyterian hospital, where her condition was said to be serious. An aged German, Frank Schneider, of Dutch Kills, Long Island city, was found late Saturday night at 70th street and Second avenue. He was lying on a snow bank almost unconscious and was transferred to the Bellevue hospital. An unknown man discovered in a basement on the Bowery, was removed to Hudson street hospital, died there from alcoholism and exposure. A policeman rescued Dennis Quinn, a letter carrier, who had fallen helpless in the snow early Sunday morning, badly frozen.

In Jersey City the body of Rosanna Cunningham was found on the sidewalk in Van Vorst street. Her skull was fractured. The body was almost covered with snow. It is believed she received her injuries from a fall.

At 7 a. m. a policeman found Charles Schopp unconscious in the snow in Jersey City. Before he could be carried into a house Schopp died. He had started for a butcher shop where he was employed, and his death is attributed to exposure and exhaustion from his struggle through the blinding storm. George Beck and William Allen were also found in Jersey City by the police badly frozen. The former had been drinking and was unconscious and is likely to die.

Julius Hoosberg, a homeless man, who sought shelter in a barn at Stapleton, Staten Island, was found frozen Sunday morning and died shortly afterward.

Unknown Man Killed.

MARION, Ind., Nov. 28.—The eastbound Pan-Handle train struck and killed an unknown man. There was nothing in his clothes to prove identification.

Schooner Sunk and Crew Missing.

GREEN BAY, Wis., Nov. 28.—The schooner Idea lies near Long Tail Point Light, sunk in about ten feet of water. Her bow is just out, and it is supposed that she is a complete wreck. The crew of the vessel is missing, and it is feared they went down with her.

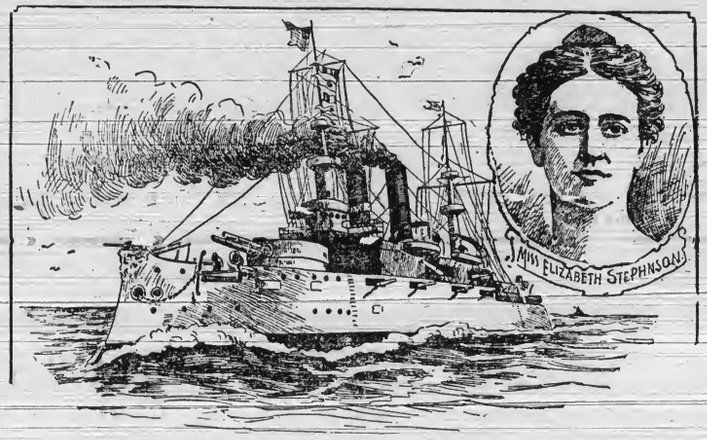
THE WISCONSIN.

Huge War Vessel Launched at Union Iron Works, San Francisco.

Miss Elizabeth Stephenson, Daughter of Ex-Congressman Stephenson, of Marinette, Wis., the Sponsor—Description of the War Ship.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—The big battle ship Wisconsin was successfully launched from the ship yard of the Union Iron works Saturday in the presence of many thousand of spectators.

Miss Elizabeth Stephenson, daughter of ex-Congressman Stephenson, of Marinette, Wis., christened the huge leviathan as she started from the ways, dashing over her bows a bottle of champagne and calling out, in perfectly distinct tones:



"I christen thee Wisconsin."

As soon as the great mass of steel was seen to move the thousands who thronged the yards and neighboring points of vantage burst into enthusiastic cheering, while bells, whistles and steam sirens throughout the city clamored and shriek in concert.

Following is a description of the vessel:

Length, on load water line, 368 feet; beam extreme, 72 feet 2¼ inches; draft on normal displacement of 11,525 tons, 23 feet 6 inches; maximum displacement, all ammunition and stores on board, 12,225 tons; maximum indicated horse power (estimated), 10,000; probable speed, 16½ knots. Normal coal supply, 800 tons; coal supply, loose storage, 1,200 tons; full bunker capacity, 1,400 to 1,500 tons. Complement of officers, 42; seamen, marines, etc., 440.

The main battery will consist of four 13-inch breech loading rifles in Hichborn balanced turrets, oval in shape and placed in the center line of the vessel, and 14 6-inch rapid fire guns. The secondary battery will consist of 16 6-pounder rapid fire guns, 4 1-pounder rapid fire guns, two Colt guns and two field guns. She will carry four torpedo tubes. The 13-inch guns have an arc of fire of 133 degrees on each side of the center line; and the 6-inch on arc of 90 degrees on the broad side, with the advantage of those on the upper deck of a direct fire ahead and astern. An injury to or near either of these 6-inch guns will be confined to its own compartment, as a 1½ inch steel splinter bulkhead separates each of these guns from its neighbor.

UNITED STATES BATTLESHIP WISCONSIN.

The armor belt, which extends from the stem to abaft the after turret, is to be 16½ inches thick at the top, and 9½ inches thick at the bottom. Except at the forward end where it will be tapered to 4 inches at the stem. This belt armor will extend from 4 feet below the normal load line to 3½ feet above it, and will maintain the full thickness amidships between the turrets, and for the distance occupied by the engines and boilers. Diagonal armor 12 inches thick, connecting this belt armor and barbettes and extending from the slopes of protective deck to top of side belt, on each side, is worked to give protection from raking fires.

There will be two sets of triple expansion, twin-screw engines, each in its own separate water-tight compartment; the collective indicative horse-power will be 10,000 with 120 revolutions per minute. Stroke, 4 feet.

There are eight cylindrical boilers, each 15½ feet in diameter by 9 feet 11½ inches long, having a grate surface of 66 square feet, with 31,200 square feet of heating surface, pressure 180 pounds. These boilers are placed, two each, in four separate water-tight compartments. The smoke pipes are two in number and stand abreast of each other.

Two Foot of Snow.

HARTFORD, Ct., Nov. 28.—The storm in this city is the heaviest known since the blizzard of 1888. The snow is about two feet on a level and is drifted badly. John Ahern, an electrician, was killed on the Glastonbury trolley line Sunday while working at clearing the tracks.

A Massachusetts Bank Robbed.

WALPOLE, Mass., Nov. 28.—The vault of the Wrentham national bank at Wrentham, was blown open by burglars early Saturday and rifled. About $2,600 in cash and notes valued at $65,000 are missing.

France Storm-Swept.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—During the last 24 hours storms, increasing in severity, have raged throughout southern France and northern Italy. Much damage has been done at Marseilles, Cannes, San Romo and Genoa. Along the Riviera sea walls and sea fronts have suffered especially.

Esterhazy Sails for America.

ANTWERP, Nov. 28.—The Droits de L'Homme asserts that Maj. Comte Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy has sailed for the United States.

WORST STORM SINCE 1888.

A Violent Blizzard Plays Havoc Throughout Pennsylvania—A Heavy Fall of Snow.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The blizzard which came out of the west reached this city at 11 o'clock Saturday morning and raged furiously until 1 o'clock Sunday morning. Unexpected as it was violent, it wrought great havoc not only here but throughout the entire state. In those 14 hours the snow fall reached a depth of over nine inches and the wind a velocity of 45 miles an hour. These figures are unprecedented in the November records of the local weather bureau, and the officials there say that the storm in general was the worst since the memorable blizzard of 1888.

NEW MAYOR FOR SANTIAGO.

Senor Bacardi, an Old Resident, Appointed—His Clerical Force Are All Cubans Who Served in the Late War.

SANTIAGO, Nov. 26.—Gen. Wood, at his own request, Friday relieved Maj. McLeary of his mayoralty duties. He returns to his military post.

In the opinion of Gen. Wood it is preferable to appoint to the mayoralty a civilian acceptable to the Cubans, and he has appointed as Maj. McLeary's successor Senor Bacardi, an old resident. He is anxious to give the mayor as much authority as is compatible with military jurisdiction. The new mayor will conform to Gen. Wood's ideas, which are to give the Cubans every opportunity to show themselves capable of self-government.

The first official act of Mayor Bicardi was to discharge the entire clerical force in the mayor's office and employ Cubans who had served in the war. He will shortly issue a manifesto to the effect that he intends encouraging the city's development and giving employment as far as conditions will permit to worthy persons. He will promise to look closely to the general interests of the community and will call upon all Cubans to obey the law and thus to promote the prosperity of the country and to insure the happiness of its people.

Gen. Wood has high hopes of this first attempt at civil government under Cuban control.

PRAIRIE FIRES IN OKLAHOMA

Several Lives Lost, 500 Head of Cattle and Hogs, and Millions of Tons of Hay Destroyed by the Flames.

PERRY, Ok., Nov. 28.—Prairie fires have played havoc in Oklahoma and the Indian territory for the last few days.

One farmer lost 1,000 acres of fine hay in the field, several hundred bales of cotton and 500 head of cattle and hogs. He estimates his loss at $30,000. Millions of tons of hay in bale and bulk have been burned in other sections, and no less than 100 residences have been destroyed.

Several lives have been lost in these prairie fires. In the Kiowa Indian reservation a strip of land 30 by 75 miles was burned, causing great damage. These fires have been more destructive owing to the high winds.

Earthquake Shocks.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 26.—Many points in south and southwest Virginia report having experienced an earthquake shock about 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. The disturbance was felt from Nottoway county to the Tennessee line. There was the usual preceding roaring noise. No damage is reported.

RIVER ACCIDENT.

Steamboat Boiler at Stockton, Cal., Explodes—Six Killed and Many Hurt.

The Screams of the Injured Passengers Were Heart-Rending—Deck Hands, Pinned in Their Bunks, Received the Full Force of the Steam.

STOCKTON, Cal. Nov. 28.—The most disastrous river accident in the history of Stockton occurred Sunday morning near Fourteen Mile slough, when a part of one of the boilers of the T. C. Walker, which left San Francisco about 6 o'clock Saturday night was, blown out, killing five and dangerously wounding 11 persons, while probably 15 or 20 were more or less badly hurt. The T. C. Walker is owned by the California Navigation and Improvement Co., and ran between San Francisco and Stockton.

The majority of the passengers were in bed when the explosion occurred and were awakened by the report which was as loud as a cannon's roar. People rushed from their rooms in their night clothes and found the whole forward portion of the steamer's upper works blown away. The electric lights had been put out and the escaping steam enveloped the front portion of the boat till it was impossible to see how much of the boat had been carried away.

The screams of the men who were locked in their rooms near the pilot house were heartrending. Capt. John Tulan had been blown from his bed against the door of the state room and so seriously injured that he could not move. The door could not be forced open as he was jammed up against it. One of the employes of the boat secured an ax and cut the upper part of the room away and finally removed him, but not until he was virtually roasted alive. When pulled out the flesh dropped from his bones in large pieces, and although he was suffering exeruciatingly, he bore it bravely and not a groan escaped him as he was taken out of the steam.

Watson Henry, the chief engineer, and his wife were in their room near the pilot house when the explosion occurred. Mrs. Henry was blown through the roof. The flooring was blown upward and she was hurled with great violence a distance of 20 feet toward the bow of the boat. She was horribly crushed by the fury of the explosion and also badly scalded with escaping steam. Her injuries proved fatal at 12:30 Sunday afternoon. She retained consciousness until a few moments before her death. Her suffering was so intense that she begged the physicians in attendance to end her life but all that could be done was to deaden the pain by the use of narcotics.

Mr. Henry was terribly scalded. He was thrown some distance away but not as far as was his wife. He died shortly after being brought to this city.

Mr. Blunt was instantly killed. He was standing on the lower deck as he intended making a landing a short distance above the place where the explosion occurred.

Jerry Daly, the fireman, was in the fire hold of the boat when the accident occurred. The escaping steam completely enveloped him, scarcely a portion of his body escaping the scorching vapor. He died at the receiving hospital at 12:45 Sunday afternoon.

Underneath the lower deck, where the deck hands slept, groans and screams were terrible, for the unfortunate imprisoned men were receiving the full force of the steam as it came from the boilers. Eight of them were almost roasted alive. Those who were able made their way to the deck as best they could while too more seriously injured were unable to get out. Arms and faces of those near the main entrance were frightfully scalded. Dominici, who was on the lower deck, was blown into the water and had to swim ashore after his back was horribly scalded.

Gens. Shafter and Garcia Meet.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—While passing out of the Fifth avenue hotel Friday night Gen. Shafter and Gen. Calixto Garcia met for the first time since the capitulation of Santiago. The generals saluted simultaneously, then shook hands and conversed pleasantly for several minutes. Each seemed pleased at the meeting.

Blanco Will Sail for Spain December 3.

A Klondike Mastodon Story.

VAN COUVER, B. C., Nov. 28.—J. W. Nee, of Tacoma, is here with an interesting Klondike mastodon story. He says of a big pile of bones found on Sulphur creek one was a tooth between four and one-half and five inches long, and nearly two inches thick at the base. Another was the leg of an animal from the knee to the ankle. It was five feet and a half in length. From the ground to this animal's body the distance was probably oven ten feet.

VERY HEAVY MARINE LOSS.

Freight Steamer Tampa and the Steel Freight Steamer Arthur Orr Lost in Lake Michigan.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 25.—The heaviest marine loss of the year is reported by the Inman tug Castle, which has returned from the wreck of the freight steamer Tampa at Beaver bay. The tug Castle found the freight steamer Arthur Orr, nine miles further eastward from the Tampa, ashore and broken in two. The great blizzard caused the wreck of both steamers. The crew from the Orr had made their way to Beaver bay, where they had found the crew of the Tampa. It took them 24 hours without food to go the nine miles to that place. They suffered intensely with the cold. They were greatly surprised to find the men from the Tampa at Beaver bay, as until then they knew nothing of the wreck of the Tampa.

The Orr left here Monday with 2,300 tons of flour and 500 tons of copper, shipped on account of the Norther Steamship company. The Orr went ashore about the same time the Tampa did. The coast is very rocky, the shore sliding into deep water suddenly, which makes the steamer's position extremely dangerous. The spot where the Orr rests is shown on the charts as Baptism river. The Orr was worth $175,000 and was insured for $145,000. Her cargo was worth $120,000. The Tampa was worth $100,000.

THEIR FIRST THANKSGIVING

SANTIAGO, DE CUBA, Nov. 25.—Santiago, Thursday, celebrated its first Thanksgiving since the American occupation. All the ships in the harbor were decorated with bunting and the officers entertained friends at dinner. The day was practically unobserved by the Cubans, except those employed in the government offices. A football game which had been arranged between the 5th regulars and the 5th volunteers was posponed until Christmas day, the weather being still too warm for such sport.

Several officers stationed at Guantanamo and Manzanillo, who had secured leaves of absence, spent the day with friends here. All the regiments celebrated as well as possible under the circumstances. Turkeys were few, but hopes are entertained by the Americans that their friends in the north will ship turkeys in time for their Christmas dinner.

The Cuban papers make practically no allusion to the day.

AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Executive Departments Closed Thanksgiving Day—The President Attended the Metropolitan Methodist Church.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Thanksgiving day was observed in the usual manner. A snow and rain storm kept people off the streets and reduced the attendance at the churches. All the executive departments and business houses were closed. The president accompanied by his brother, Abner McKinley, attended divine sevice at the Metropolitan Methodist church and listened to a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Bristol, the pastor, who preached from Exodus, his text being "Behold, I send an Angel before Thee." Dr. Bristol referring to the war said that never before had Providence permitted a people to wage a more just and humane war—a war which had brought new honor, new liberties, new life, new responsibilities and new honors to those who now rejoice.

Revolutionary Outbreak Imminent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A dispatch to the Herald from Montevideo says: A number of officials have been arrested in connection with the acts of several raiding parties along the border. It is believed among the best informed here that a revolutionary outbreak is imminent.

Shot in the Lung.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 25.—As the result of George Moore's reckless use of a revolver George Deal, a respectable colored man, lies unconscious with a punctured lung in St. Joseph's hospital. Moore and a party of colored men were going east on Constitution street, while Deal was coming west. Without provocation Moore pulled his gun, and saying, "I hear yo' is lookin' fo' trouble! Well, black chile, yo' sure done got it!" he began firing. Only one of the four shots struck Deal. Moore escaped.

Mr. T. G. Willis, our very efficient Assessor, has been suffering with a severe cold for several days, and has been laid up for repairs. He and his deputy, Elmo Gaines, have very nearly completed their work.

It is thought that some of the hunters that infest these parts are sacking larger game than quails and rabbits. Some are missing their turkeys. One was heard to call to another, "how many have you killed," "three pullets and a rooster," was his response.

The meeting at Bullittsburg still progresses. Up to Sunday night there have been three additions. The people of this neighborhood are having a rare opportunity of listening to a rare man of God as he expounds the holy scripture in an earnest manner, and they are showing their deep interest in the meeting by a full attendance and the most perfect attention.

Hiram Long, of Florence, was in our midst, last week, buying tobacco. He purchased several crops rauging from 5 to 7 cents around. The growers in this neighborhood, while deploring the organization of the giant tobacco monopoly entered into by the leading manufacturers, feel helpless to effect any remedy, but will not waste their best toil and hardest toil in raising tobacco to sell at present prices.

Walton.

Nov. 26.—The preaching of Rev. J. M. Crowe, of Louisville, during the week, has been the absorbing topic with all the folks of the town, and no minister ever made a deeper and more lasting impression on his audience than has Brother Crowe. He treats his subject with considerable latitude, and his discourses are quite varied in their make-up, being, at times, philosophic, at others, poetic, and, again, patnetic, with the keenest of witticisms levelled at shams, mock piety and shoddy aristocracy; and he maintains an absolute interest in his themes by the happy interjections of passages grave or gay as suit the occasion.

His dramatic efforts in some of the more impassioned parts of his discourse—his fine imagery and his faultless and elegant diction, combine to render his efforts, from an artistic standpoint, of an extremely high order, while the wholesome truths and helpful counsel which abound in all of them, can not fail to be of much practical utility to his hearers.

The meeting will conclude on next Sunday morning, and next Monday evening the Reverend gentleman will deliver his famous lecture, "The Tell-Tale Tick of Time," full of fun and facts, of wit and wisdom, as the following outline shows: Life's Fools; Life's Ticks; Life's Trinities; Life's Unities; How to Train the Babies; Selling Mamma; One Horse Preachers; Many in One; Church; Scaffolds; Putting on Airs; How a Greenhorn got Married; Your Fust Boss; Kissing the Bride; The Modern Belle; Change Your Tactics; Life's Hemispheres; Old Fogies; My Mother; Heredity and Environment; Righting the Clock; Only Two Kinds of Women; Four Kinds of Men; Things that Compact; Walking the Last Shore. Good Night.

There have been good audiences all through the week, notwithstanding the weather, and the wild rage of Old Boreas, towards its close. Such has been the marvelous power and so fascinating his eloquence that the people, including the children, have braved the wintry tempest to listen again and again to the music of his fervid eloquence. To one who has heard him, as the writer has, there appears a thrilling upheaval in the soul as he commences in his empyrean flight—a brilliant meteor shooting across the sky, illuminating everthing in its path.

The lecture is a magnificent effort, firm and enduring though, embodying mighty truths and elevated principles, with just enough Attic Salt to make it palatable. His superior has not yet been heard, and Dr. Talmage and Sam Jones have been listened to. Neither can surpass him in dramatic power nor tower above him in the high empyrean of excellence.
